Byrd Warns Taxes Must Rise if 'Orgy' Continues

Assails Eccles Before C. of C. for Spending Into Prosperity Plan

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, yesterday told delegates at the annual meeting here of the United States Chamber of Commerce that taxes would have to be increased "unless this spending orgy is stopped."

Byrd, arch foe of Administration fiscal policies, addressed a round table conference at the Willard Hotel on "Tax Deterrents to Business Progress." He branded the Administration as "the most wasteful and autocratic bureaucracy" that had ever existed.

"Such a proven fallacy" as the plan proposed by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board to bring prosperity by borrowing and spending, he declared, "must be thrown out the window."

Initiative Held Paralyzed

Business leaders who heard the Virginia Senator previously had listened to speeches by other outstanding businessmen insisting that mounting Government debt in the face of high taxes had paralyzed initiative and destroyed confidence by crushing hope of a return on investment.

S. Clay Williams, chairman of the board of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C., and a member of the Commerce Department business advisory council, told the 2,000 delegates at a morning session that the time was rapidly approaching when the Government would have to adopt a pay-as-you-go basis. Large pools of wealth are being exhausted by taxation, he declared, and no more can be created under existing tax laws.

Davis Asks "Chance"

Other highlights were:

George H. Davis, president of the chamber, in the opening address of the annual meeting, demanded a "fighting chance" for business. Pointing to the trend toward conservatism, he declared that "like a mighty army marching, the American people are aroused at last," and added: "Because of this, I am justified in saying to you, victory is in sight."

Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of Brookings Institution, declared at the round table conference on tax deterrents that "persistent Treasury deficits and mounting indebtedness may eventually destroy private investment." The ultimate effect of Government deficits, he said, is illustrated by the situation in France, where constant borrowing by the government has forced interest rates on private borrowing to usurious levels.

Dr. George Barton Cutten, president of Colgate University, addressing a general luncheon meeting, declared that, although survival of the fittest is nature's method, "civilization through the doctors and philanthropists is saving the unfit." He did not object to saving the unfit "so long as you do not allow them to become the future breeders of the race." Saying he had been called "the most reactionary college president in America," he remarked: "Well, I have good company. I think God is a reactionary."

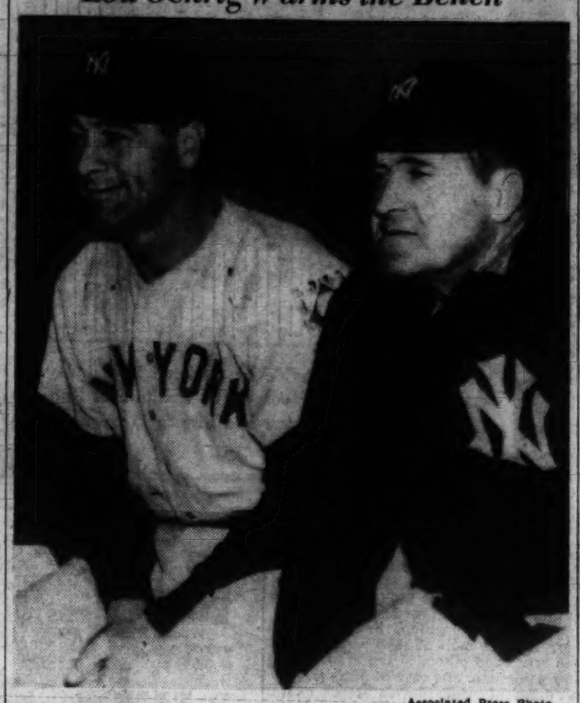

Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, recommended a joint conference between representatives of capital and labor to undertake "a

Fechner Reported Resigning Because of Merging of CCC

Declines Comment but Admission Is Believed Implied by Remark Congress Hasn't Acted on Consolidation Order

Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps since its inception in April, 1933, is about to resign, it was reported yesterday in official sources. Fechner declined to make a statement.

However, he gave substantiation to a rumor that his resignation is on the President's desk because of dissatisfaction with the merger of his agency proposed in "Reorganization Plan No. 1," by remarking that he had nothing to say since "Congress has not yet acted on the matter."

The President, it is believed, is reluctant to lose the services of the man who has directed the one New Deal organization which has been most praised even by critics of the rest of the Administration's program.

CCC to Security Agency

Under the reorganization plan transmitted to Congress April 25, the CCC would lose its identity as an independent agency by being merged into a "Federal Security Agency" which would also include the National Youth Administration, Social Security Board, U. S. Employment Service, Office of Education and Public Health Service.

Fechner is known to have indicated his belief work of the CCC would be hampered if it were made a part of another Government organization or if it were linked with agencies administering relief.

The 63-year-old director, a native of Chattanooga, left school in Georgia at 15 to become a "candy butcher" on trains. He worked his way through an apprenticeship to become a qualified machinist, working in mines, smelters, on trains and harbor projects in most of the countries of the Western Hemisphere.

Active in Labor Affairs

He became active in labor union affairs in 1905 and was elected to the central executive board of the International Association of Machinists in 1914, since which time he has made his home at Boston.

Before accepting his present job at the request of President Roosevelt on April 5, 1933, he distinguished himself for arbitration work in railroad disputes and in campaigning for the nine-hour and eight-hour movements.

In the six years of its existence, the CCC has handled more than 2,787,000 enrollees, keeping an average of 300,000 boys and young men in 1,500 camps. At one time as many as 2,500 camps were operating. The CCC has conducted conservation, highway and trail building, reforestation and fire-fighting activities throughout the country.

A.F.L. Charges NLRB Member Favors C.I.O.

Attorney Padway Lays Membership Recruiting Attempt to E. S. Smith

By the Associated Press.

Joseph A. Padway, counsel for the American Federation of Labor, charged yesterday that Edwin S. Smith, a member of the National Labor Relations Board, "is definitely a proponent of the C. I. O. industrial unions."

Before the Senate Labor Committee in support of amendments to the Wagner act proposed by the A. F. of L., Padway said:

"We charge unequivocally . . . that Board Member Edwin Smith . . . has endeavored to utilize the power of the board to recruit membership for the C. I. O. . . .

"He has fostered decrees which will give to the C. I. O. advantage over the American Federation of Labor."

Padway asserted Donald Wakefield Smith, another member, has agreed with Edwin Smith's viewpoint "in some fundamental and precedent-making decisions."

Discussing the third member—Chairman J. Warren Madden—Padway said he "has endeavored to remain aloof from partisanship, but

Plane, Boosting Festival, Crashes; 3 Burn to Death

By the United Press.

Grenada, Miss., May 2.—A pilot and his two flying companions burned to death here this afternoon when he crashed his monoplane to avoid hitting some children who ran onto the flying field.

The dead were: George Stokes, 33, Memphis Commercial-Appeal photographer pilot; Ted Northington, 31, reporter, and John Crump, 30, son of E. H. Crump, Memphis political leader.

The plane was one of five touring the South in the interests of the Memphis cotton carnival.

Seal to Name 4 Milk Firms In 'Bootleg'

Files Charges Today; 2d Case Revealed By Shafer's Question At House Hearing

By James D. Secrest.

Investigation of Washington's milk industry yesterday brought two unexpected developments.

Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, disclosed a second seizure of "bootleg cream" in the District during the House subcommittee on public health hearing.

Immediately afterward Corporation Counsel Seal revealed that his office planned to charge two more dairies and two milk associations with violations of the District milk act.

Shafer threw the first session of the House inquiry into a turmoil when he asked Dr. Reid R. Ashworth, director of the District food inspection service, why no arrests had been made in the "seizure of unlicensed cream by the same men who made the first highly publicized" raid on the Embassy-Fairfax Co. plant. Dr. Ashworth denied any knowledge of the second "bootleg cream" case.

To File Charges Today

Later, however, Seal asserted that his office already was preparing charges against the dairies and associations and the allegations would be filed today in Police Court.

Seal insisted that the Health Department had reported to the Commissioners and to his office on April 11 that an inspector had discovered a consignment of 200 cans of unlicensed cream on April 6. The cream, he said, had been brought into the District from Baltimore without a permit for the manufacture of ice cream.

The transaction was handled by two producers' associations, Seal said, and the cream was bought from a dairy that has no permit to sell cream to District ice cream manufacturers.

Papers Held Up

Prosecution papers already had been prepared, Seal said, when the case was revealed at the House inquiry, but they were being held up for the filling in of certain dates from information furnished by the Health Department's inspection division.

The corporation counsel's office, Seal said, had no part in the uncovering of the allegedly illegal cream as it had in the Embassy-Fairfax case, which is still pending in Police Court.

The injection of a brief discussion of pigeon racing into the inquiry was not explained during the hearing, but Shafer said he intended to develop it today when Ashworth is cross-examined.

Brings Forth Guffaws

"Do any of your inspectors engage in pigeon racing?" Shafer asked Dr. Ashworth.

"Yes, they do," Dr. Ashworth replied.

He then named Dr. T. W. Sproesser, one of the inspectors, as a promoter of the sport.

Justice Roberts 'Fine as Ever' On 64th Birthday

United States Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts hopes "the second 64 years" of his life will be as pleasant as the last, he said last night as he closed a sixty-fourth birthday observance by going to a concert at Constitution Hall.

Justice Roberts said he felt as "fine as ever." Six weeks ago he underwent a minor operation at Garfield Hospital, but was back at work within two weeks.

Before the concert Justice and Mrs. Roberts entertained with a birthday dinner at their home. Guests included Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black and Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed.

3 Held in Shooting Of Tew, Crockett

A raiding squad led by Capt. Jeremiah Sullivan last night seized three colored men in Saturday's wanton shooting of Lew Tew, 62-year-old Chinese laundryman, and Malcolm Crockett, 32, cab driver.

Two of the suspects, only youths, allegedly confessed. Police said they also admitted carrying out six holdups here under direction of the third suspect, who is 43.

The theory that the trio also was linked with a Baltimore shooting was being investigated by officials.

2 Warrings Pay Fines, Go Free; Emmitt Gets 3 to 9 Months

Leo Paul and Charles (Rags) Warring paid $5,000 in fines late yesterday and went free, blessing Justice Laws for sparing them the jail term he imposed on their brother, Emmitt, brains of the $2,000,000 numbers gang, for conspiracy to defraud the Treasury.

Justice Laws terminated the Warring case by sentencing the brothers yesterday. Emmitt stopped his third trial for plotting to cheat the Treasury of income tax on the gang's profits by pleading guilty. To the 26 months he is serving for jury tampering was added three to nine months for the conspiracy.

Leo Paul and Charles pleaded nolo contendere (no defense) to the conspiracy charge, withdrawing their previous pleas of not guilty. Justice Laws gave them three to six months each in jail, but ordered that they go free when they had paid $2,500 fines. Their attorney, Leo A. Rover, took the money to the courthouse late yesterday.

Justice Laws said he hoped all three men would become good

British Expel 38 as Spies For Germany

Several Believed Gestapo Agents; Hitler Threatens To Retaliate

By the United Press.

London, May 2.—The British government today ordered the expulsion of nearly 40 German residents in an effort to stamp out subversive Nazi activities, despite warnings from Berlin that the "piteous treatment" of the Germans would bring sharp retaliation.

The home office disclosed that eight Germans, several accused of being agents of the Nazi Gestapo (secret police), already had been served with orders to leave the country or had left, and that about 30 others would be asked to leave within two weeks.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler's own newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, served the warning of retaliation, probably involving expulsion of Britons.

Hitler's Retort

"It need not be emphasized that the German Fatherland will not leave unanswered this piteous treatment of its compatriots abroad, which is unworthy of a great "humanitarian nation," the Voelkischer Beobachter said.

"Nine decent German men and women who were on British soil and followed their work peacefully and correctly have been hunted from the country because the British government does not dare to oppose anti-British propagandists, nor does it declare openly that German organizations in Britain are guilty of anything whatever."

The expulsion of Nazis comes at a time when the British government is alert for any acts of espionage in connection with its huge rearmament program and decision to create an army of 1,000,000 by peacetime conscription.

Reprisals in April

Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare on April 6 revealed that the government had ordered the deportation of three persons accused of trying to intimidate German refugees in Britain. They were O. G. Karlowa, Nazi party organizer in Britain; E. P. Himmelman, his principal lieutenant, and Johanna Wolf, connected with the Nazi labor front and travel organization.

The German government expelled three British residents of Hamburg, in what was admitted to be a "reprisal."

British Ambassador Sir Nevile Henderson conferred briefly at noon with German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop but the British embassy in Berlin termed the visit "routine."

The names of the five Germans submitted to the Nazi Embassy today with a request that they leave Britain were understood to have included R. G. Rosel, London correspondent of Marshal Goering's newspaper, National Zeitung, of Essen, and local Nazi leaders of Manchester and Southampton.

The list of those to be expelled includes three German journalists charged with Nazi activities, but not in connection with their newspaper work.

"If you'll take my advice and remove that sweater you won't be followed. Those people think you are an escaped criminal.'"

London Sees Back-Down

By the Associated Press.

London, May 2.—The impression grew in official and diplomatic quarters tonight that the Polish-German dispute over Danzig would be settled peacefully.

Official observers apparently were becoming convinced that:

Poland is prepared to agree to joint Polish-German control of Danzig and to make any other concession compatible with her independence and her need for a free outlet to the Baltic;

Germany is unwilling to risk a major war for Danzig—a city not quite the size of Newark, N. J., and one which would bring her no great economic gains;

Germany slowly is drawing the conclusion from Britain's commitments to Poland and Rumania and adoption of conscription that she might have to face a war on two fronts against such a coalition as Britain, France, Poland, Soviet Russia and Rumania.

Polish Pride Involved

Polish press suggestions that Poland demand a protectorate over Danzig, were explained here as "a maneuver to re-establish a position of equality in bargaining with Germany."

Diplomats point out that Polish pride has played a great part in negotiations of that country in the last few months. They say Poland demanded that the British-Poland alliance be reciprocal to avoid any suggestion that a small power was seeking the protection of a large power.

Informed sources said Poland would let a board made up equally of Poles and Germans control Danzig in place of the League of Nations commissioner.

But Reichsfuehrer Hitler's demand for unqualified return of the Free City to the Reich is certain of Polish rejection.

Soviet Compromise Planned

London, May 2 (U.P.).—Great Britain and France tonight agreed upon a compromise "interim arrangement" designed to prevent Russia from walking out on negotiations for Soviet adherence to the armed European bloc against aggression.

British leaders admitted the plan does not satisfy Russia's proposals but said they were confident the Soviets would "find it hard to reject."

The scheme is described as a "clever formula" intended not only to overcome Russia's demands for an outright tri-power alliance but also spare Poland, Rumania and other small nations which are reluctant to bind themselves to Russia.

Later Alliance Implied

The "interim arrangement," supposedly carrying a hint that Britain may be willing later to consider Russia's request for a clear-cut military alliance, was understood to provide:

Russia would agree to give joint aid with Britain and France to victims of aggression anywhere in Europe, but "in a form acceptable to the victim of aggression."

The Soviets would be bound only if the British and French first went to assistance of the attacked nation, thus soothing Soviet suspicions that Britain is trying to

Caribbean Raid A Possibility, Says Roosevelt

President Returns; Explains Need for Expanding Defenses

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt returned shortly after 10 o'clock last night from a six-day trip to his home at Hyde Park. He went directly to the White House from his special train.

En route to the Capital, the President said in a press conference aboard train that the possibility of attack from the air had made necessary expansion of American defenses in the Caribbean.

He set forth his views when asked whether his recent survey of fleet maneuvers in southern waters influenced the War Department in its creation of a Department of the Caribbean, with headquarters in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Mr. Roosevelt replied that the decision was based on a study extended over a period of several years, and cited the joint operations of the Army and Navy off Puerto Rico as one phase of it. Joint maneuvers were held two years ago, it was recalled.

In earlier days, he said, Guantanamo Bay or San Juan, Puerto Rico, could be protected against raiding ships by a few well-placed

Danes Report Hitler Pact Offer To Scandinavians

Copenhagen (Wednesday), May 3 (U.P.).—The newspaper Politiken reported today Reichsfuehrer Hitler had sent invitations to all the Scandinavian states asking them to enter into reciprocal nonaggression treaties with Germany.

The paper said negotiations already were in progress between the Reich and Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland.

Danish officials "refused to deny" that negotiations were under way, and Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht refused to confirm or deny the report.

Lindbergh Reported Alarmed By Lack of U. S. Air Research

Langley Field, Va., May 2 (INS).—Concluding a thorough inspection of the Nation's aviation research center here, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh tonight was represented "more than ever" alarmed over deficiency of the United States in this vital field of preparedness.

After seeing all this country has to offer in air research facilities—centered in the laboratories of Langley Field—Lindbergh was understood to have privately urged construction of the proposed West Coast research station at Sunnyvale, Calif., "and two or three more stations of major magnitude."

With aviation and Government notables, Lindbergh made a full-day inspection of the Government's research field, in the midst of his national survey tour, and watched silently while a score of newly developed discoveries were exhibited in operation.

But he expressed himself freely, to Government and aviation leaders, both on the overnight boat

Adjournment Drive

By Robert C. Albright.

A one-man drive for sine die adjournment yesterday collapsed in Senate demands that Congress remain to "guard against war" and enact tax, rail and neutrality legislation.

A lively flurry of debate, running the gamut of all pending legislation, was touched off by a resolution by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama.

It called for adjournment of Congress June 15, and provided for recess committee studies of the tax, rail and neutrality issues.

Chorus of Protests

A chorus of Senate protests followed, climaxed by a statement from Senate Majority Leader Barkley that Congress cannot possibly adjourn in mid-June "without running away from our public duty."

Advising Senators that both neutrality and rail legislation are nearing committee showdowns, Barkley envisioned action on both issues before Congress calls it a day, but took a flat stand against general revision of the tax structure at this session.

The Administration's Senate leader told colleagues House plans call only for three "simple" resolutions on the tax question—one extending the so-called nuisance taxes which expire this year; another extending the existing undivided profits tax; and a third postponing the step-up in social security old-age insurance taxes. Barkley said he was so advised by House "leaders."

Barkley Hits Proposals

Significance was attached to this statement in view of President Roosevelt's warning to reporters yesterday not to refer to Treasury tax studies as "recommendations" and his comment that no one knew what changes would be made in the tax structure beyond extension of nuisance and corporate levies.

Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee said he still plans to call on the Treasury for its views once social security amendments are disposed of. He said he knew of no "leadership" statement to Barkley that only simple extensions are contemplated. He renewed his statement of last week that tax changes will be "considered" by his group.

Meantime Barkley slapped at tax revision proposals attributed to Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee, and Undersecretary of the Treasury John W. Hanes, which were discussed in detail at a series of White House conferences several weeks ago.

Tax Revision to Delay

The plan contemplated repeal of the capital stock, excess profits and undivided profits taxes, and consolidation of these into a corporate income tax ranging up to 22 per cent.

"If we are to assume that we are to raise the same amount of revenue we are now raising," said Barkley, "then we must consider whether we desire to remove three particular types of taxes that are paid by the business of our country in one form and shift it over to another form under which the

One good reason why Tommy would prefer not to become one of the pantry viziers is aptly explained by an intimate friend of his.

Ickes Threat to Deny PWA Aid Charged in House Park Dispute

Rep. Gearhart Alleges Colleague, Rep. Elliott, Sought to Entrap Him in Taking Money; Latter Turns on Secretary

By International News Service.

In a stormy House session, Secretary of the Interior Ickes was charged yesterday by Representative Elliott (Democrat), California, with threatening to deprive his district of PWA projects for his opposition to enactment of a bill to create the John-Muir-Kings park in California.

Elliott made the charge against Ickes after Representative Gearhart (Republican), California, rising to a point of personal privilege, charged Elliott had sought to entrap Gearhart into the appearance of accepting $100 in connection with the park bill which he was supporting.

Elliott said Mrs. Gertrude Achilles, of Morgan Hill, Calif., had mistakingly placed in a letter to him a check for $100 made out to Gearhart, and that he had relayed the check back to another town in California to be mailed to his colleague.

Democrats Protest

He revealed he gave the check to Charles G. Dunwoody, lobbyist for the California Chamber of Commerce, with instructions that it be returned in a prepared envelope to Gearhart and said this was done.

Elliott brought Democratic members to their feet in protest when he turned his defense from Gearhart's charges to an attack on Ickes. He charged Ickes called him to his office and told him that unless he abandoned opposition to the John Muir-Kings Canyon Park bill, that he (Ickes) would deprive Elliott's district of PWA projects.

"On March 13 I was called to Ickes' office," Elliott related. "Ickes said that your people do want the park bill and he said that he held the strings to the money bag and if I didn't support the park bill, I wouldn't get certain things for my district."

At the outside, Gearhart said he had received the $100 check, mailed from a town 15 miles from Mrs. Achilles' home, but that he returned the check and refused to accept it. An anonymous telephone caller told him Elliott had received the check and had "fabricated an elaborate scheme for the personal entrapment" of Gearhart, he said.

Eliott told the House he had asked the Federal Bureau of Investigation to investigate the Gearhart check because it had been proposed that the Government buy 400,000 acres of land at $460 an acre as a part of the proposed park. He contended he wanted to learn whether private owners were contributing money.

"Mr. Ickes, through his method of operation, made it more probable for me to believe that there was money involved," Elliott said. He also charged that Secretary Ickes "has had lobbyists on this floor" working for the park bill. He asserted that former Representative Beiter, of New York, now a special assistant to Ickes, used his floor privileges to talk to him and urge him to withdraw opposition to the park bill.

Affidavits Produced

While Elliott is subject to a possible reprimand by the House, he insisted he had no intention to "destroy" Gearhart. Gearhart, however, produced affidavits showing that Elliott went to California in April and soon thereafter rumors began to circulate that Gearhart was a "crook, a cheap grafting politician" and had fallen into a cleverly set trap.

Gearhart said Mrs. Achilles told him she sent the check to aid in the campaign for the park but that he had informed her he could not accept money for such a purpose.

Pepper Claims 46 Votes for Florida Ship Canal but Foes Predict Its Defeat

Forty-six votes—three short of a majority of the 96 Senators—were claimed yesterday in support of the $500,000,000 Florida ship canal project by Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of that State.

PEPPER

The bill was reported to the Senate without recommendation by its commerce committee, after Pepper failed to obtain favorable report.

Despite Pepper's optimistic claims, leading Republicans and Democrats predicted the measure would not pass. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, is leading the opposition. He succeeded in forcing abandonment of the project, after several million dollars had been spent on it.

A memorial to former President Coolidge at his birthplace in Plymouth, Vt., was proposed yesterday by Senator Gibson (Republican), of Vermont. He said several lawmakers also were considering a suggestion for a national park at Plymouth to include the Coolidge family home.

An oil portrait of former President Herbert Hoover may soon be placed in the White House. Submitting a favorable report on a bill authorizing the painting, the House Library Committee yesterday asked Congress for funds.

Declaring American citizenship "is a sacred trust, an unparalleled privilege," the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday filed a formal report in the House recommending passage of the Harnes bill to prevent Grover C. Bergdoll, World War draft dodger, from returning to this country from Germany.

The measure prohibits re-entry to persons previously convicted by court-martial of desertion, and who have fled the country to escape punishment. The committee report said draft dodgers have "no valid or meritorious claim upon the Government of the United States for the protection of its laws," and when such offenders desire to resume their citizenship "it is more realistic to assume that they do so for purely selfish reasons."

WPA Building Cost Excessive, Inquiry Told

250 Pct. Higher Than On Private Contracts In N. Y., Says Witness

Labor costs on WPA building projects in New York are two and a half times higher than they would be under private management, two Treasury Department experts yesterday told the House committee investigating the WPA.

Meanwhile, Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, announced a reduction of nearly 200,000 in relief rolls by May 8, bringing the total down to 2,600,000. The District total will be 9,956, a drop of 860; Virginia will cut its rolls by 2,690 to bring the total to 24,750, and Maryland will lose 1,050 workers, to reach a May figure of 13,000.

A flow of testimony demonstrating the alleged extravagance of WPA building construction costs was punctuated at one point, however, by submission of figures showing that on a bridge-repaving project, the WPA performed the job more cheaply than private contractors.

The committee also heard Howard Hunter, acting WPA administrator, assert that testimony presented the previous day by H. R. Burton, committee investigator, was "so totally inaccurate that I felt it must be corrected." In a tense scene that involved several sharp exchanges with committee members, Hunter vehemently denied that it was pressure from the Workers Alliance which induced him to forbid WPA supervisors from distributing to relief workers a committee questionnaire asking about their political and labor affiliations.

2 Engineers Testify

"The Workers Alliance is the last organization in the United States to think they can succeed in getting me to take action because of pressure," Hunter snapped.

Evidence of the high cost of WPA building projects in New York was presented to the committee by Allen W. Stephens and Peter L. Hein, engineers in the procurement division of the Treasury Department.

The WPA building at the New York World's Fair, which was 95 per cent completed when he visited it two weeks ago, had cost 43½ cents per cubic foot, said Stephens. The United States Government Building, which he said was a better-built structure, was erected under private contract for 20 cents per cubic foot, he added.

One reason for the higher cost of the WPA building, Stephens said, was that the design had been changed "several times" in the course of construction. He added that the 24-hour basis on which work proceeded also augmented the cost.

Divides Building Costs

Stephens told the committee that when he visited the project, only 185, or 17.7 per cent of the workers were from relief rolls, while 864, or 82.3 per cent were nonrelief labor. The building had already cost $544,000, he said, with labor taking $350,517 of the total. Stephens said the structure, which is to be given the City of New York at the close of the fair, would require "high maintenance" charges.

Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, pointed out that Col. Harrington had estimated the total cost of the World's Fair building would be $250,000.

Stephens, whose testimony was supported by Hein, said he had inspected WPA school buildings which cost an average of $782,000, while a privately erected structure of similar design had cost $441,000. The excess cost was partly in labor, he said, and partly in materials.

In one of the school projects, 221 workers were on relief, while 171 were nonrelief, Stephens said. He pointed out that in searching for workers, the WPA exhausts the relief rolls before turning to the private labor market. At the gigantic North Beach Airport project on Long Island, 5,712 of the 23,363 workers were not on relief, said the smiling, white-haired witness.

May Shift Functions

It was indicated yesterday that a movement was growing on both sides of the Capitol to "take WPA out of the construction business" by transferring its large building functions to the PWA, for which no sums were provided in the 1940 budget. Bills appropriating $500,000,000 for PWA have been introduced in both Houses.

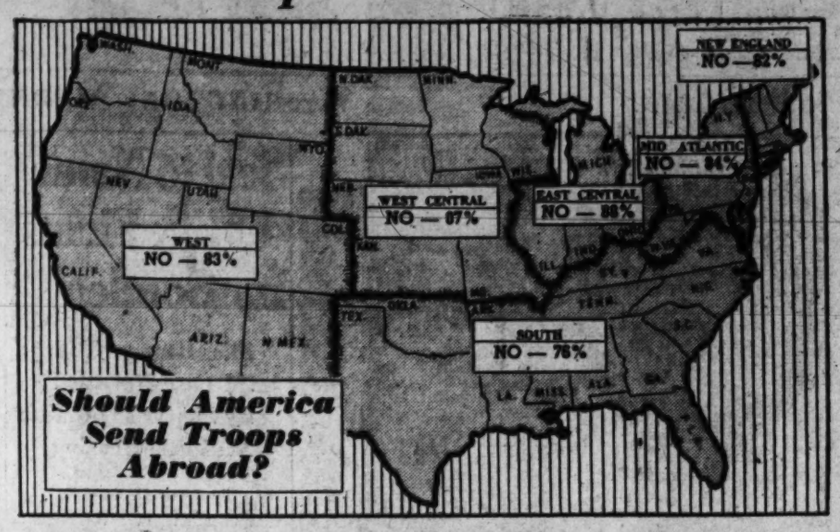

Giving his testimony in a supercharged atmosphere, Hunter, who is acting chief of WPA in the absence of Col. F. C. Harrington, told the committee that he objected to his administrative employes asking relief workers about their political affiliations. He maintained that such action would be in violation of the law against WPA employes engaging in political activities.

The Gallup Poll

American sentiment on war and peace questions does not divide on sectional lines today. The map above shows how different sections of the country vote in an Institute of Public Opinion survey on sending American troops to help England and France in case of a new war

Sectional Differences on Foreign Affairs Forgotten; Sentiment Is 'Keep Out of War'

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Bulletin

New York, May 2.—A huge majority of British voters approve Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy of guaranteeing the independence of Poland, Rumania and other small European nations, and favor a military alliance with Soviet Russia, according to a survey just completed by the British Institute of Public Opinion, overseas affiliate of Dr. Gallup's American Institute.

In the British survey, 83 per cent approved Chamberlain's guarantees and 92 per cent favored a Russian alliance.

New York, May 2.—Contrary to the views of some political observers, there are no marked sectional differences in the United States today on the questions of peace and war.

GEORGE GALLUP

The findings of the American Institute of Public Opinion, based on the latest studies of American sentiment, show that the people of the Mississippi Valley favor the same course of action that the Atlantic Seaboard, the South and the Far West favor. The only differences are differences of shading and degree.

Nor is it possible to distinguish a "war party" on economic, age or political lines.

East and West, North and South, the American attitude boils down to two main desires, Institute surveys show:

1. To keep America out of war.
2. To aid England and France, by selling them food supplies and war materials, if a new European war should come.

South Most Willing

Some observers believe that it might be possible to combine these desires—that America could not eat her cake and have it too—but anyone who wants to understand the sentiment of the American people on war and peace at this time must take these two desires into full consideration, contradictory though they may be.

The voters in the 13 Southern States—Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma—are more willing to send American troops to help England and Frances, in case of war, than the rest of the United States.

But even in Dixie public opinion is 3 to 1 against taking such a step, and elsewhere the desire to "stay out" is even stronger.

Here is the vote by sections, published for the first time, in the Institute's most recent survey on this question: In case Germany and Italy go to war with England and France, should we send our Army and Navy abroad to help England and France?

	Yes	No
New England	18%	82%
Mid-Atlantic	16	84
East Central	12	88
West Central	13	87
South	24	76
West	17	83

Throughout the country as a whole, an average of only 16 persons in a hundred would favor sending troops abroad.

Men are 17 per cent in favor of such a step and women are 15 per cent in favor.

The upper income group is more militaristically inclined than the middle income group, but, surprisingly, no more so than persons on relief and others in the lowest income group. The vote of persons at different income levels is:

Favor Sending Troops?	Yes.	No.
Upper group	18%	82%
Middle group	14	86
Lower group	19	81

Age makes no difference. The people in their twenties—those who would do most of the marching and fighting—are no more and no less in favor of sending troops abroad again than their elders, members of the last "war generation."

This is especially significant in view of the peace pledges and antiwar campaigns that have come from Amreican schools and colleges in the last decade. The vote by age groups is:

Favor Sending Troops?	Yes.	No.
Under 30 years of age	16%	84%
30 to 49 years	16	84
50 and over	16	84

Democratic voters are 18 per cent in favor of sending troops abroad, and Republicans are 12 per cent in favor.

On the question of selling airplanes and war materials to England and France in case of war there is the same fundamental agreement. Throughout the country 66 persons in every 100 at this time say they favor such a plan, with the small majority (60 per cent) in the Middle West States of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota, and the largest (77 per cent) in the South.

The institute's survey goes a long way to change the traditional picture of American public opinion, dating from the days of the World War, which held that the Middle Westerner was much more an "isolationist" that his cousins in California and Massachusetts, and much less interested in what was going on in Europe.

The Middle Westerner is reading the same news in his newspaper today that the rest of the country is reading, and reacting in much the same way, institute surveys show. One infallible indication of this is the fact that Middle Westerners have opinions just as often, and show uncertainty in their answers just as seldom, as the voters in other parts of the country.

On questions of war and peace today, only 1 person in 20 says that he is undecided or uninformed or without an opinion.

U. S. Artillery Adds 20% To Its Power

20 New Batteries Set Up Independently Of President's Plan

In a further move to strengthen the Nation's defenses, 20 batteries of artillery have been added to the Army, part of a reorganization and expansion plan just put into effect.

Sixteen batteries are being organized at posts throughout the United States, while the other four were set up some time ago, officials revealed yesterday. The move, accomplished independently of the President's special defense plan by shifting of units and transfers of funds, will increase the firing power of the Field Artillery by about 20 per cent, it was said.

Meanwhile, the Administration's defense program received a setback in the House yesterday and over the same issue on which it was licked earlier in the session—fortification of western Pacific islands. The House sub-committee on naval appropriations struck out of the 1940 Navy supply bill funds for establishing air bases on Wake, Midway, Palmyra and Johnston islands, just as a similar provision for Guam was defeated two months ago.

Chairman Scrugham said the group felt that establishment of bases on the islands was an evasion of the 1922 Washington Naval Treaty which forbade American fortification of islands in the western Pacific. He advocated a restudy of the Administration proposal in the light of the House's action on Guam.

Strategists to Meet

Congressional supporters of the plan were quick to point out that the House had approved the four bases at the time the Guam project was defeated and declared the 1922 treaty was no longer in effect. Members of the House Naval Affairs Committee particularly protested against the appropriations group attempting to change Naval policy drawn by them and approved by Congress in diverting the funds for the bases.

Strategy in the matter may be considered at a meeting of the Naval Affairs Committee this morning, called to consider legislation to modernize five battleships at a cost of $8,850,000.

The full appropriations committee takes up the Naval bill this morning.

War Department officials said officers and men for the new batteries are being obtained by transfer from noncombat units. Effective May 1, service batteries of all field artillery units were consolidated with regimental headquarters batteries, and two combat trains of the Eighteenth Field Artillery at Fort Sill, Okla., are being made inactive. Quartermaster troops will take over some of the supply duties heretofore performed by artillerymen.

Batteries Motorized

The move is the first step of a plan inaugurated by Gen. Malin Craig to consolidate "overhead" or servicing organizations where possible and put combat units in their place.

All of the batteries now being assembled are motorized. Their guns are taken from reserve stocks as are some of the trucks and other equipment. Funds from the annual appropriation bill will supply whatever else is needed together with the necessary additional noncommissioned officers.

Ten of the new batteries will have modernized French 75 mm. guns, five will have the big 155 mm. howitzers and one will be a "sound and flash" battery to locate enemy artillery.

One Is Ancient Unit

Among the units being transferred from "paper" to active status is Battery D of the Fifth Field Artillery, at Madison Barracks, N. Y. Active until the economy regime of the Hoover Administration it is the oldest in the Army. Established in 1776, it was officially designated as "Alexander Hamilton's Battery" after its founder, until after the Civil War.

Other batteries placed in an active status are: Batteries C and F of the First and E of the Seventy-seventh Field Artillery at Fort Sill, Okla.; Batteries C and F, Seventh Field Artillery, Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont; Batteries C and F, of the Tenth and E of the Ninth Field Artillery, at Fort Lewis, Wash; Batteries E of the Seventeenth, and B of the First Observation Battalion, at Fort Bragg, N. C.; and Battery F of the Seventy-seventh, at Fort D. A. Russell, Tex.

Those previously established were added to the Seventeenth Field Artillery at Fort Sill (two), the Eighty-third, at Fort Bragg, and the Seventy-sixth, at Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyo., all horse-drawn. The move increases the number of batteries from 103 to 123, and gives most battalions three fighting batteries.

But there are only three more days for the Government girls to send in photographs, from which 25 will be selected to appear in person on Loew's Capitol stage. Six of these lovely ladies will be selected to participate in the "brains" test finals, but all six will get the free vacation trips.

Yesterday's Entrants

Among yesterday's lovely entrants were: Miss Jamea E. Miller, 1205 Fifteenth street northwest, of the U. S. Public Health Service; Miss Louise Hamby, 4905 Forty-first street northwest, of the RFC; Miss Sally Edner, Park Lane Apartments, of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department, and Miss Margie Brooks, 2006 Columbia road northwest, of the Interior Department.

Remember, the contest is open to all Government girls, married or single, who live in Washington or vicinity. Mayor Jackson Is Re-elected In Baltimore

Weathers Factional Split of Democrats, Defeats McKeldin

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 2.—Mayor Howard W. Jackson weathered a factional split in Democratic ranks today and won re-election to a fourth term by a majority of approximately 24,000 votes over Theodore R. McKeldin, his Republican opponent.

Complete returns from 469 of the city's 471 precincts gave Jackson 108,849 and McKeldin 84,500.

Some precincts reporting McKeldin majorities were said to have gone Republican for the first time in modern history.

The assaults on the Mayor's majority did not extend to the rest of the city-wide ticket. Richard O'Connel, Democratic candidate for president of city council, ran approximately 40,000 ahead of Carl M. Distler, Republican.

R. Walter Graham, Democratic city comptroller, had no Republican opposition for re-election and swamped Socialist and Communist candidates for the office.

Medical Society To Elect Tonight

Election of a president for 1940-41 will feature the annual business meeting tonight of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

The president-elect is Dr. John H. Lyons, who will succeed Dr. William J. Mallory on July 1. Besides Dr. Lyons' successor, the membership will vote for two vice presidents, a delegate to the American Medical Association and one member of the executive board.

Women Poison Slayers Also Plot Targets

Reported Attempt Made on Wives Of Murdered Men

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 2.—The Record said it had learned tonight from authorities investigating a murder-for-insurance plot that the ringleaders tried to murder women whose husbands were poisoned to collect their life insurance.

Two of five women now under arrest in the deaths of their husbands, the Record said, have admitted they were told to take small doses of the same poison they gave their husbands. They were told the poison would have no effect unless they took some also.

The newspaper quoted Detective Capt. James Kelley that "the purpose of the poison ring was to kill off not only the person on whom they could collect insurance, but people who could be witnesses as well."

He said some of the women had been treated since their arrests for stomach ailments which might have resulted from taking small doses of poison.

Meanwhile, District Attorney Charles F. Kelly said Morris Bolber, arrested yesterday, had "thrown new light on many murders of which we had no knowledge, not only in Philadelphia, but in other States." He said a detective had been sent to California to check details.

An "important arrest" soon was predicted by the investigators.

With information from many sources, the investigators said, the list of probable victims is mounting steadily. The total, they disclosed, now stands at approximately 35, but eventually may rise to 100. Thirteen persons are in custody in connection with activities of the ring, which collected an undetermined amount of insurance on the lives of victims during the past ten years.

FBI Hunts Aide Of Pendergast: River Dragged

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 2.—Grappling hooks scraped the Missouri River bottom today while Federal agents investigated several theories in the mysterious disappearance of Edward L. Schneider, 45, business aide of Democratic Boss T. J. Pendergast.

Federal District Attorney Maurice M. Milligan was "convinced Schneider did not commit suicide," but Mrs. Schneider, under care of a physician, abandoned hope her husband would be found alive.

Schneider's sedan was found on a Missouri River bridge yesterday. In it were two notes indicating suicide. His hat was taken from the river 3 miles downstream.

Masked Pickets To Defy Tear Gas

By the Associated Press.

Everett, Mass., May 2.—Shortly after police reserves from several cities used tear and nauseating gas to end a street fight with striking seamen, Thomas McGowan, business agent for the National Maritime Union (C. I. O.) announced today picketing would be resumed tomorrow by strikers in gas masks.

A series of disturbances in which missels were thrown preceded the conflict in which gas guns were used and brought an appeal from Police Chief George O. Kenney for "all cities and towns." in the State to send "men and equipment immediately."

Coroner Holds Two In Florida Lynching

Daytona Beach, Fla., May 2 (AP).—A coroner's jury investigating the lynching of Lee Snell, colored taxi driver, returned a verdict today of "murder at the hands of Earl and Everett Blackwelder."

The Blackwelders today surrendered and were pointed out by Constable James Durden as the men who shot Snell Saturday while he was being taken to jail. Snell's taxi had fatally injured the Blackwelders' 12-year-old brother, Benny.

Stokes, Pulitzer Prize Winner, Learned Reporting in Capital

Lad From Georgia Came Here Jobless 17 Years Ago; Told WPA Facts

By Robert C. Albright.

If it weren't for his Southern drawl and the ambling gait that still betrays his Georgia background, this might be another story of "local boy makes good."

For Tom Stokes, Scripps-Howard reporter who walked off with Pulitzer prize reportorial honors for 1938, calls himself a local boy, married a local girl, and has spent 17 of his 18 years of newspapering in Washington.

Yet it was the disarming drawl that won the confidence of Kentucky reliefers when he was seeking to ferret out the truth from the multiplicity of rumors of "politics in relief" that swept the bluegrass country in the Congressional campaign of 1938.

Facts Told the Story

And Tom got the truth, on the line, in sworn affidavits that were to stand up through a searching Senate inquiry and loud WPA protestations of innocence..

To Tom it was just another job of reporting. But to the Pulitzer award committee it was 1938's "most distinguished example of reportorial work."

Stokes shrugs it off as one of those little ironies of fate that he, a stanch Roosevelt admirer and New Dealer at heart, should have won the reward coveted by every reporter for a series of articles citing irrefutable evidence of political activities by employes of a New Deal agency. As he puts it, he merely sought the facts, "on both sides," and the facts, not his sympathies, told the story.

Likes Other Series Better

Like every prize winner, he has written other pieces he likes better. For example, there was a series he did in 1936 on the migration of Northern industries to the South, lured by low wages and local inducements. He thinks that series had "some influence" on the wage-hour law's enactment. It was submitted for the 1936 Pulitzer award but failed to win.

Tom went to Kentucky in May, 1938, on the tip of a local Scripps-Howard editor that the WPA organization was backing Senate Majority Leader Barkley for re-election while State employes were being marshaled behind Gov. "Happy" Chandler. He found both reports to be true and produced sworn affidavits to prove it.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.
THOMAS L. STOKES

Publication of his stories brought a WPA investigation of itself and blanket denials by WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins of all but 2 of Stokes' 22 specific charges against WPA. By this time, the Senate inquiry into WPA was in full swing, with Senate investigators in the field.

And when the Senate committee reported, it announced proof of a majority of the Stokes' allegations. One incidental result was enactment by Congress of rigid prohibitions against political use of relief funds.

A graduate of the University of Georgia, where he won a Phi Beta Kappa key (which he doesn't wear), and edited the college magazine, Stokes in 1920 served brief "cub" shifts on the Savannah (Ga.) Press, the Macon (Ga.) News, and the Athens (Ga.) Herald. He came here on Labor Day, 1921, without a job in sight and finally landed with the Washington bureau of the United Press.

To Raymond Clapper, then night manager of the bureau, he attributes "any skill I might have in political reporting." For two years, Clapper and Stokes together turned out the U. P. night report. His first important Washington assignment was the Knickerbocker disaster.

Smith Plans Filibuster on Cotton Subsidy

Says Group Will Talk 'Three Weeks' to Block Bankhead Proposal

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said yesterday he and some other Southern Senators were ready "to talk for three weeks" if necessary to defeat a compromise cotton subsidy proposal by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama.

"It's dead," Smith told reporters who asked him about the export subsidy proposal, as he came from a special session of the Senate subcommittee considering agricultural appropriations including funds for the subsidy plan.

Bilbo, George to Help

Smith said Senators George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, were others ready to join him in a filibuster if the Senate sub-committee should approve the subsidy proposal.

The Appropriations sub-committee reopened its public hearings yesterday to permit representatives of the cotton trade to testify against the export subsidy plan, under which the Government would pay a subsidy of $10 a bale up to 6,000,000 bales of cotton.

Dr. Claudius Murchison, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, and Robert Mayer, Dallas, Tex., cotton merchant who flew here for the special hearing, were closeted with the Senate group in the forenoon.

Domestic Subsidy Urged

Murchison said the proposed program would further deplete foreign markets and would have an oppressive effect on domestic markets. He urged support of a "domestic subsidy for cotton, proposed by a majority of the Congressional cotton bloc."

Mayer, who testified as a former president of the American Cotton Shippers Association, said the export subsidy plan was "simply another pallative intended to cure the worst feature" of the Government loan operations.

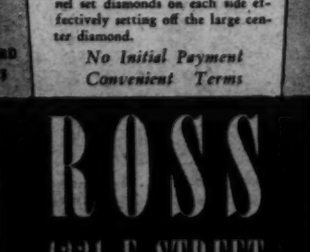

He predicted it would cause "a cycle of countervailing and antidumping duties by controling countries."

Mayer said even announcement of the export subsidy proposal had upset world markets and caused prices to shoot downward.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts
The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach often pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.
Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for indigestion to make the excess stomach fluid harmless, relieve distress in no time and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and we the makers prove it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

Dewey Says He Doesn't Approve Boom

Disclaims Connection With Clubs Formed to Back Him for President

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, May 2.—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, said today that any political activity in his interests as a possible Republican Presidential candidate in 1940 was being carried on without his approval.

Dewey disclaimed any connection with various Dewey-for-President clubs which have been organized in the past few months.

"Anybody engaging in political activity in my behalf is doing so without any authorization from me," he said, adding that right now he was interested primarily in his job as district attorney of New York.

The famed prosecutor, in acknowledging receipt of the Cardinal Newman award for 1938 for his war on crime, asserted in an address in Champaign:

"The extermination of organized crime is gradually progressing from city to city. Its sponsors are being exposed and driven from power. The people have learned they need no longer tolerate the furtive alliance between the upper and under world. In high places it has been learned that clean government can also be good politics. It will take years to finish the job but the good news of today is this—America is cleaning its own house."

Dewey, who has been mentioned as a Republican presidential possibility, called for "spiritual militancy" on the part of all citizens to complete the task. He added:

"The pretended strength of government is never a substitute for the real strength of the individual. It has been shown in many countries that excessive reliance upon government has the effect of weakening the individual . . . Society cannot endure if government is built on a mass of weakened individuals."

He denounced those who "would substitute for moral law the dictates of expediency" and the "false prophets" who "teach that the individual and his freedom must be suppressed for the glory of the state."

He urged Americans to retain the religious ideals and traditions of the country so that "when we have cleaned our own house, we shall keep it clean."

program of education and action" aimed at cutting Government costs and correspondingly reducing taxes.

James A. Farrell, former president of the United States Steel Corporation and chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council, Inc., told a round table conference on industry's preparation for national defense that the problem of an adequate supply of raw materials, in case of war, was not as great, in his opinion, as some leaders fear. There is a possibility that rubber may become dear, he said, but with British co-operation it should be possible to obtain supplies of this commodity.

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, said that, reinforced by the present building program, the American Navy would be able to hold off any single power long enough to permit adequate land defenses to be established against enemy invasion. But it will not be strong enough, he warned, to hold off a combination of foreign powers.

Barton Optimistic

Representative Barton (Republican), New York, declared at a dinner of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries that intelligent adaptation of social gains made under the New Deal, together with sound principles in government would bring a new and greater prosperity after 1940. The change in public sentiment, as shown by the Republican gains in 1938 elections, he said, shows that businessmen "are to be released from the doghouse and allowed once more to participate in the management of national affairs."

C. H. French, vice president of the Chinese-American Foreign Trade Council warned at the annual dinner of American Chambers of Commerce abroad of a gradual decline in the Japanese market for American cotton, this country's principal export to Japan. Cotton will be obtained from the Asiatic mainland by Japan in ever increasing quantity, he said. He insisted this country should risk war with Japan, if necessary, to preserve its trade with China, which is potentially its greatest customer.

Col. Cole Urges Barter

Col. Walter C. Cole, of E. A. Pierce & Co., Detroit, speaking at the round table conference on national defense, urged immediate negotiations with Russia to obtain manganese under a barter arrangement such as that proposed by the Administration in the case of rubber and tin. He commended the proposal to trade cotton and wheat for the latter commodities.

Col. J. H. Burns, executive officer to the Assistant Secretary of War, said present wartime plans called for mobilization of industry and military power under a superagency, for which legislation already has been drafted. The President would be active head of the agency. Burns said 20,000 industrial plants had been survey to determine their wartime capacities.

W. Gibson Carey, jr., vice president of the chamber and president of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Co., New York, the choice of the organization's nominating committee for president, will be elected, it is understood, along with other officers at the closing session tomorrow.

Byrd agreed with businessmen that there were "rough spots" in the tax structure which ought to be removed. There can be no real tax relief, however, he said, "until the Government stops spending two dollars for every dollar taken in."

"Only three things," he declared, "can be done with the vast debt we are accumulating. The first is repudiation, the second uncontrolled inflation with all the tragic consequences, and the third, payment of the principal and interest out of the self-denial, thrift and toil of the American people.

"In my judgment, only an aroused public interest by the citizens who must sooner or later pay for these extravagances will protect us from the disasters of uncontrolled inflation or taxes so high as to be confiscatory."

Tax Growth Noted

Dr. Moulton declared the Government was able to borrow money at the present unprecedentedly low interest rates because of the dearth of competition for the available supply of investment funds.

Federal and local taxes, which absorbed 11 to 12 per cent of the national income in the 1920s, took 22.8 per cent in 1938, he said.

"The growth of public indebtedness," he added, "has a profound psychological effect. Growing fears of ever-increasing taxes and of the ultimate breakdown of Government credit result, inevitably, in timidity with respect to the safety of long-term ventures, both on the part of business enterprises and of investors."

He criticized a number of features of existing tax laws, particularly the undistributed profits tax, the excess profits and capital stock taxes, and certain aspects of the social security pay roll taxes.

S. Clay Williams (right), chairman of the board of the Reynolds Tobacco Co., told the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce yesterday that businessmen must resell themselves to the country if confidence is to be restored. The former NRA administrator is shown with W. Gibson Carey (left), of New York, and George H. Davis, president. Election of Carey to the presidency of the chamber has been predicted citizens and warned Leo Paul and Charles that if they got in trouble again they doubtless would receive stiff jail sentences.

Closed by the sentences was the Capital's most sensational gang case since the prohibition era. When indicted last spring, the Warrings were riding the rip tide of a rich lottery racket which covered millions in bets. Except a penitentiary term served by Charles, the gang trigger man, and five of his henchmen, for shooting a liquor runner, the Foggy Bottom boys had enjoyed immunity from the police.

Indicted with the brothers was Gordon L. R. Sadur, an income tax consultant. His case still is pending, awaiting a recommendation by the Department of Justice whether he shall be prosecuted, since the other alleged conspirators have confessed.

All four went to trial confidently last autumn. Three weeks later the jury deadlocked, seven to five for conviction. A second trial two months later ended in a scandalous exposure of Emmitt Warring's efforts to fix both juries. He was jailed, with five others, including a United States deputy marshal and one of the jurors. Half a dozen other deputies lost their jobs.

Justice Laws ordered Emmitt Warring to stand his third trial alone, being unwilling to handicap his codefendants with this evidence of Emmitt's "consciousness of guilt."

The justice, in his opinion accompanying the sentences yesterday, repudiated the idea that he should punish the three Warrings for the other crimes known or suspected about them. He said he was punishing them for a conspiracy to defraud the Government, and for nothing else, remarking that such indirect punishment "establishes a dangerous practice which in some cases would bring about serious injustices.'

This view prevailed, he said, although it appeared that the numbers racket bribed policemen to gain immunity, and "at least one of the defendants was guilty of this bribery."

Charles and Leo Paul, said the justice, may have had a part in both the bribery and the jury tampering, "yet there is no direct evidence on this point and it would be gross injustice to sentence them in the absence of such evidence."

Federal Judge Assailed in Rail Receivership

Wilkerson Should Be Impeached, Says Senator

By the Associated Press.

The record of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, of Chicago, in the 1925 receivership of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad generated a sharply worded controversy yesterday in a hearing of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Senator Tobey (Republican), New Hampshire, referred to the receivership proceedings as "a horrible example" of jurisprudence and termed the record in the case a "rotten" one.

Marquis L. Bell, general counsel for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, spoke up emphatically to defend Judge Wilkerson as "fearless and independent."

Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, declared the judge "ought to be impeached" for his conduct in the St. Paul receivership.

Bell Praises Him

"He is an able, honest, fearless man," Bell retorted. Judge Wilkerson, he added, was in charge of the present Rock Island reorganization case and had conducted it in a "very dignified and honorable way."

"I don't give a damn about dignity," Tobey exclaimed. "I want honesty and integrity in these matters."

Tobey said Kuhn, Loeb & Co., New York bankers, had "focused their influence" on Judge Wilkerson to obtain the appointment of two receivers for the St. Paul and that the judge was "obedient to the word given him."

Paid $48,000 a Year

A third trustee, "supposedly independent," Tobey said, was recommended by a law firm connected with Kuhn, Loeb. Two receivers were paid $48,000 a year and the third $75,000, he said, and at the end of the receivership all received an additional payment of $100,000 each.

Samuel H. Cady, general counsel for the insolvent Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, told the committee "we would have been better off if we had never borrowed a penny from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation."

Testifying before the Interstate Commerce Committee in opposition to a proposed revision of the railroad bankruptcy law, Cady said the road had put up $110,000,000 collateral to cover its borrowings from the RFC.

"The result has been a weakening of our financial structure," Cady asserted, "and we would have been better off to go into receivership in 1932 when our maturities came due."

"The country would have been better off if it had never established the RFC," Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, interjected. "But there was a lot of railroad presidents who were whispering around in the cloakrooms begging for the establishment of the RFC."

Seal Names 2 Dairies and 2 Associations In District's 2d Milk Bootlegging Case

are we going to develop now, that they sell pigeon's milk?"

It is understood that an attempt will be made to show that the pigeon races have been patronized by some of the local distributors.

Schulte later stated he wanted to question the police who made the arrests in the Embassy-Fairfax plant.

"I understand there was some slugging," he said.

After explaining a chart showing the location of local dairies and licensed distributors and ice cream manufacturers, Dr. Ashworth admitted that it is very difficult for the inspectors to track down the illegal transportation of milk or cream.

Presumes There Is "Bootlegging"

"Isn't it a fact," Shafer interrupted, "that quite a good deal of bootlegging of cream is going on in the District?"

"We presume so," answered Dr. Ashworth, "but we don't know. We haven't caught any of them."

Under questioning, Dr. Ashworth said his office had had no hand in the seizure of 2,400 gallons of cream in the Embassy-Fairfax plant six weeks ago. The seizure was made by the corporation counsel's office, he said.

He then denied knowledge of the second "seizure."

Dr. Ashworth said that it is impossible for his inspectors to determine whether or not cream imported for ice cream manufacturing is diverted for fluid consumption.

Lines Rigidly Drawn

With battle lines rigidly drawn between the representatives of the Maryland and Virginia milk producers and the Western dairy spokesmen, the inquiry opened in the House District Committee room and a short while later adjourned to the caucus room to accommodate the crowd of farmers and dairy representatives.

The hearing developed that the Western representatives are not alone in wanting to amend the District milk act, as the Health Department officials indicated they consider its provisions establishing different standards for various dairy products ridiculous.

The similarity in point of views ends there, however, the testimony disclosed. The Western producers wish to have the requirements modified to permit the importation of licensed dairy products without District inspection, whereas the local health officials want District inspection of all dairy supply sources.

A half dozen or more lawyers, representing varied interests, were permitted by Chairman Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, to question the witnesses along with J. Edward Burroughs, special counsel of the sub-committee, and Corporation Counsel Seal.

Sefton Darr, principal attorney for Embassy-Fairfax, tried to bring out by cross-examination of each witness that any cream brought into the District, if it meets the local health requirements, is "fit for human consumption."

He also emphasized by repeated questions that the District milk act fixes a higher standard for cream sold for fluid consumption than for that used in the manufacture of ice cream. He added that ice cream is eaten by children and sometimes babies, while fluid cream is consumed chiefly by adults.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland and Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the Health Department's preventable disease division, on the whole defended the District local milk regulation and said that control of the milk supply is more practicable when it comes from the Washington milkshed.

Denies Financial Interest

Dr. Ruhland denied that the Health Department has interest in the economic factors involved. Both Dr. Ruhland and Dr. Cumming indicated that they believed the District milk act might be more effective if the cream for ice cream purposes were held to the same strict standard established for fluid cream and milk.

Dr. Cumming explained, with the aid of charts, how infant mortality had decreased with the rise of standards and more strict regulation of milk supplies. Summer dysentery in babies, he said, has practically disappeared since 1925, when the milk act became effective.

During a discussion of the recently promulgated milk regulations Dr. Ashworth disclosed that the allowable bacterial count for cream was raised from 100,000 to 200,000 per cubic centimeter "because the Western representatives thought the former was too strict."

Dr. Ruhland expressed the belief that the District's milk supply is of "a very high order" and that this is due largely to the high standards of inspection maintained by the Health Department. Any lowering of this standard, he said, "would be a regrettable backward step."

Has Eight Inspectors

Answering Corporation Counsel Seal, the health officer said he believed that two inspectors assigned to the 14 local dairies are inadequate. The Health Department has eight inspectors in the field.

Darr called attention frequently to the widespread use of canned milk, especially for babies, and to the fact that it is not inspected by the District Health Department.

Dr. Ruhland replied that the milk is sterilized under Federal Government supervision and consequently is not in danger of becoming contaminated before being taken out of the can. Dr. Cummings revealed that it is now used for infant feeding in all of the local hospitals.

The value of pasteurization in the protection of public health came in for considerable discussion. Darr was able to elicit an admission from Health Department officials that proper pasteurization, providing the milk is not dirty and comes from tubercular-tested cows, insures the public against contamination, providing it is sanitarily handled by the distributor.

Dr. Cumming insisted, however, that the time between the production and the consumption of milk or cream, regardless of the treatment, the more danger there is of contamination developing.

"I prefer to inspect my own milk sources," he repeated in answer to Darr's persistent questioning about the "safety" of milk imported from outside the Washington milkshed.

Reasons for High Prices

By the Associated Press.

The monopoly committee heard a prominent milk distributor declare yesterday that high labor costs and Government price fixing were largely responsible for high milk prices paid by consumers.

Theodore G. Montague, of New York, president of the Borden Co., also testified that no monopoly of distribution could or did exist in the milk industry.

Youth, 18, Charged With Kidnaping, Attempted Rape

North Andover, Mass., May 2 (AP). A 19-year-old weaver, taken from his loom by police, was charged tonight with abducting Charlotte Leland, 12. The girl was released unharmed today a short time after being forced into an automobile while on a bicycle trip with a girl companion.

Describing the abduction as a "spur of the moment" affair rather than an attempt to extort money, Police Chief Alfred H. McKee said the youth, booked as Roland Robinson, of Methuen, and charged also with attempted rape, would be arraigned here tomorrow.

McKee said Robinson signed a "confession."

Danish Royalty Given Riotous Greeting at Fair

Former Countrymen Virtually Mob Visitors; Cadets Cheer Norwegians

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 2.—Crown Prince Frederik and Crown Princess Ingrid of Denmark and Iceland were almost mobbed by enthusiastic former countrymen today when they inaugurated the Danish pavilion at the World's Fair.

The ceremony of dedicating the exhibit started in a dignified fashion, but when the royal couple, accompanied by officials of the fair, entered the pavilion, approximately 700 New Yorkers of Danish origin rushed in after them.

Neither the Crown Prince nor the Crown Princess seemed to mind the spontaneous outbreak of affection. They smiled affably at the crowd and later shook hands with at least 300 of them, as they filed past, bowing and courtseying.

League Pavilion Dedicated

The League of Nations Pavilion also was dedicated, with Mrs. Woodrow Wilson as a guest of honor. Speakers included Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Surgeon General Thomas Parran, of the United States Public Health Service.

Secretary Wallace said:

"This building, erected in the New World, and the building which houses the League's activities at Geneva, in the Old World, are both monuments to a magnificent vision.

"Some day the peoples of the world will learn to organize their commerce and their life, with cooperation as the key to prosperity and happiness.

"It is in that spirit that we dedicate this League of Nations Building, for here, as perhaps nowhere else, is symbolized the hope of man in the world of tomorrow."

Cadets Cheer Royalty

West Point, N. Y., May 2 (AP).—The cadets at the United States Military Academy have a warm spot in their hearts for Crown Prince Olaf and Princess Martha of Norway.

They showed it by giving the royal couple the famous Army "long corps yell" when Brig. Gen. Jay L. Benedict announced that all ordinary and special punishments were remitted at the request of the royal visitors.

He testified President William Green of the A. F. of L. had emphatically denied contentions by Chairman John L. Lewis of the C. I. O. that the A. F. of L. amendments to the Wagner law were formulated in collaboration with the National Association of Manufacturers.

Green charged that the C. I. O. was "fighting desperately against giving up the advantage they hold and which has been accorded to them by a board which evidently has accepted and absorbed their peculiar brand of trade union and economic philosophy."

Expert Holds Greek Harbors May Be Crucial

British Must Have Them to Beat Italy, Naval Officer Says

By Lieut. Comdr. Solon Gregoriades, Greek Naval Expert.
By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post.

Athens, May 2.—In the Mediterranean the British Empire undoubtedly feels that she is directly threatened by the boundless appetite of fascist expansion. These fears could well be the starting point of an international conflict the issue of which would doubtless resolve a very old problem—a question which has returned to the foreground of international preoccupations since 1935—supremacy in the East.

For Italy, a country poor in raw materials and foodstuffs, sea communications are of vital importance. About 60 per cent of the Italian imports come from regions beyond Gibraltar and Suez. Moreover, Italy's length of coastline—5,000 miles—makes her particularly vulnerable to an attack from the sea. Hence Italy's traditional attitude of submission to the desires of Great Britain. With its naval base at Malta and the possibility of closely blocking the Italian peninsula while attacking from the sea, the British fleet long had Italy virtually at its mercy.

But since the war, especially during the last few years of the fascist regime, Italy has become a strongly armed country. Her sea, land and air forces are extremely powerful.

It is true that, from the point of view of defense, Italy is still extremely vulnerable. Her economic and productive forces cannot enable her to sustain a long war. But the Duce seems to imagine that he is already in a position to strike a decisive and irreparable blow before exhausting his country's resistance.

Malta's Value Doubted

That the development of the Italian air force has greatly reduced the strategical value of Malta is well known. This famous naval base, the main support of the British fleet in the Mediterranean, is at present too near to the Fascist airdromes to offer an effective resistance to air raids. It can no longer provide a shelter, revictual and repair the allied ironclads without great difficulties and during a very limited time. It is, therefore, in fact, no longer a permanent base for the larger units of the British fleet.

Italy is thus a veritable watchtower on the route to India, which passes through Malta, and can cut off this route at a single blow.

And the importance of her fleet is a factor which must not be disregarded. It numbers 22 cruisers, 118 destroyers and 90 submarines, also 4 old cruisers of 21,000 to 23,000 tons with 12-inch guns.

Fear Italy in Africa

Italy's main offensive power, however, lies in her land forces. With Albania as the starting point, Italy can engage in a vast campaign in the Balkans. Her action is, above all, to be feared in Africa. From Libya an offensive could be launched against Tunisia and in particular Egypt.

And it is fairly probable that once the European front of the Alps and the Siegfried and Maginot lines were stabilized the Fascist armies would endeavor to deal their enemy a mortal blow on the African front.

By what means can Great Britain cope with this formidable situation?

This question can be easily solved by Great Britain and her allies. If it be realized that capital ships constitute the backbone of a fleet it is immediately clear that the axis is relatively weak. If account be taken of the two new dreadnaughts of 35,000 tons, Italy has six large units carrying in all 18 15-inch guns and 40 12-inch guns. The German fleet at present counts two capital ships of 26,000 tons carrying in all 18 11-inch guns.

On the other hand, the French fleet possesses five units—including two very recent acquisitions—carrying 52 13.5-inch guns and Great Britain 15 capital ships with 18 6-inch guns and 100 15-inch guns.

With this abundant material the Western powers could easily neutralize the German operations in the North Sea and keep some units in reserve for the Far East while maintaining in each of the Mediterranean basins a squadron of capital ships exceeding the Italian heavy tonnage.

Greek Harbors Needed

The British squadron would have definite and diversified tasks—namely, to clear the sea of Italian vessels, to neutralize the naval base in the Dodecanese, to cut off communications between Italy and the Black Sea or the East and, above all, to hold up relations between the Italian Peninsula and Libya and, if possible, Albania.

If these objectives can be achieved the British counterattack probably would neutralize the Italian offensive. Italy would soon feel the effects of blockade. Cut off from the homeland the Libyan army would be unable to act efficiently either against Tunisia or against Egypt. This colony might even fall into the hands of the allies as the result of a French-British offensive. The jaws of the coalition would close upon the Italian peninsula and powerful raids from both seas and air would hasten the collapse of the Fascist state as well as that of the totalitarian axis.

But here we touch upon a vital problem—the bases of the British fleet. For reasons already set forth, Malta cannot be utilized. The only base at the disposal of the British fleet is therefore the military port of Haifa, in Palestine, too distant for effective use. For the British fleet it is indispensable to have bases nearer its objective.

For this purpose the Greek harbors are all that can be desired. Hence the enormous importance of Greece as a factor in the eastern Mediterranean.

BALLET SKATRESS: Peggy Fahy, skating ballerina, has just joined the Shoreham "Ice Show," giving an added Sonja Henie touch. Peggy was one of the stars of last year's ice carnival in the Blue Room, when she was featured as the "Dipsy Doodle Girl." With the slippery stunts of figure skating champion Evelyn Chandler, Bruce Mapes, Sonia and Margo, this means that the Shoreham is now presenting ballet dancing, acrobatics and comedy, all on ice.

A series of stories about the pylon and the perisphere is already making the rounds. We don't think Grover Whalen would approve.

MORE AIR: Madrillon's cooling system is being enlarged and revamped. The big idea is to blow more air directly down on the dance floor so that energetic dances will remain cool and fresh as daisies.

FACES AROUND PLACES: In the Mayflower Lounge: Phillip E. Buck, of Alexandria, dropping his hat in the pool. He said he was trying to catch a gold fish . . . Fay Allen Desportes, U. S. Minister to Guatemala, just back in town for a visit . . . Dr. Julian R. Caceres, Charge d'Affaires of the Honduran Legation, dropping in for a pick-me-up after some exercising at a nearby athletic club.

In Shar-Zad: George V. Riley, hotel executive of the New Yorker and affiliated hotels, with Manager Frank Swadley, of the Carlton, giving Don Taylor and Lou Martel (Biltmore Bays) the lowdown on the World's Fair . . . Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr.

In Mayfair: Maj. M. J. Barnes (former Marine Corps, now in aviation) every day in the week. And for a specially excellent reason.

In the Shoreham Blue Room. Humorist Strickland Gillilan and Mrs. Gillilan. We may expect a Gillilan article on the funny doings in night spots.

In Bamboo Gardens: Dave McWilliams, orchestra leader and music executive, bending an ear to Al Norton's harmonies.

HURRY UP to the Pall Mall Room. Because Jimmy Santmyer and his orchestra will be there for only a week or two more. After that it is expected that Pall Mall will close for the summer as usual.

FUN IN THE AFTERNOON: Scene: A cocktail lounge. Enter a gentleman. Orders a drink for himself and four champagne cocktails set up for his expected girl friends. Says pessimistically, "That'll be enough, I hope." . . . Enter a mysterious "Hollywood talent scout." All of the pretties in the place much excited. One blonde insists on singing to the "scout." A brunette catches her toe in the manager's chair and throws herself for a loss. "I'm so sorry," she says. "My fault. Your pardon, mademoiselle!" says the manager, turning on all his European charm, but tossing an amused wink in another dircetion . . . Enter an impressive looking old gentleman. Next time you look at him he's kissing the cigarette girl's hand . . . Waiter scurries up and tells the man from Hollywood that his wife is on the telephone. "Tell her I've gone to the theater," he says nonchalantly. Girls' boy friends look stilettos at the talent scout. But it's no soap . . . Elderly esquire is kissing cigarette girl's hand again . . . Lovely blonde tells the Hollywoodite, "I've had three step-fathers and I never liked any of them." Heart never belonged to daddy, eh? . . . Enter the date of the elderly man. He looks at the ciggie lass as though he'd never seen her . . . The crowd breaks up . . . We ask the manager if he knows the name of the movie talent scout. He grins, "Oh, he's a bookmaker. Say, I may go broke in this business, but I got a lotta laughs out of it." (It's all factual.)

FREE CAKE: Oscar, of the Hi Hat, will cut a monster cake, big as a prize pumpkin, on June 1 when the third anniversary of his managership will be celebrated. All Hi Hat patrons will receive cake dividends. A flock of extra entertainment, too.

SWEET NOTES: Paul Kain's orchestra (Metronome Room) will soon play a radio program selected entirely by the shut-ins of a North Carolina sanitarium.

It's those four violins in Herbie Holmes orchestra (Glen Echo) that give his swing music its unusual quality of lightness and shimmer.

Radio listeners from all over the country are sending letters of praise for Milton Davis' (Rainbow Room) Tuesday novachord broadcasts of classic music.

You may think you've heard "When a Gypsy Makes His Violin Cry." But you haven't—unless you've heard it played by Datsko of the Troika.

Peggy Townsend (Cafe Caprice) is now singing her sweet-style songs with every group played by "Tiny" Meeker's Trio.

Numbers sung and played by Buddy Parsons and Arthur Howe (Uptown) are so contagious that the customers often join in and make it a songfest.

ALIAS DANCERS: There's a mystery at Lotus this week. Federico and Jeannette are wonderful dancers, but those are not their real names. See if you can recognize them. Because if you've seen them before, you'll not have forgotten them. Highly recommended, too, is the Lindsay chorus' tap dancing to Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody. The girls must have a dash of gypsy in their souls.

HAPPENSTANCES. Jimmy Nichols (Lounge Riviera) didn't look happy as usual the other afternoon. Because his little boy, 17 months old, had just fallen down the front steps and had four stitches taken in his nose.

Al Simmonds (Brown Derby) is now strictly the country gentleman. He's moved down to his place near Herring Bay for the summer, commutes back and forth to the Derby.

The clay pipe market in Washington is being cornered by the Pirates' Den. They need 'em for their bottle tossing gallery.

EGG JUGGLER: Real eggs are being juggled by Ross at Bamboo Gardens. And he doesn't break a one—until he's ready to show you that they're real eggs. Fine whirlwind dancing by Marcia and Reynard, now in their second week. The Lenora Dollies (whom Al Norton likes to call "Doilies") are no end cute in a fencing dance.

LAST MINUTE FLASH! Mrs. Helen Hamilton calls to tell us that Troika's cooling system will be completed and working on Saturday. This means that Troika will stay open indefinitely this summer.

Finnish Chorus Is Symphony Of 70 Voices

Audience of 4,000 Fills Nearly Every Seat in Constitution Hall

Seventy men of Finland made Constitution Hall ring with the songs of their country last night, when they joined an audience of 4,000 in an evening of good will.

Representing a people whose songs tell of the trouble they've seen, the Finland Male Chorus opened its program with the national anthems of Finland and America. They sang the "Star-Spangled Banner" not only with the same zeal that marked rendition of their own anthem but with precision that would put many native choristers to shame.

The audience that filled nearly every seat from front orchestra to balcony top marked the successful climax of an effort to raise funds for Washington's Self-Help Exchange.

Symphony of Voices

The chorus, under direction of its diminutive and energetic leader, Heikki Klemetti, sang music that ranged from the tenderest lullaby to a rousing warrior's tune.

The Finlandia Male Chorus is a symphony of voices, of which the exacting leader expected as much in tone color, power and drama as if it were a great orchestra. Dr. Klemetti not only expected, he achieved. Some of the numbers, especially the "Fridolin Dances" by Aksel Tornudd, sounded more orchestral than vocal.

Jean Sibelius, most renowned of the country's composers, was represented by three selections in Dr. Klemetti's last group. One of these, "Hail, O Moon," fell so beautifully on the audience's ears that it had to be repeated to quiet the applause.

Tenor, Barytone Star

Other Finnish composers also contributed songs to the program: Robert Kajanus, Armas Jarnefelt, Toivo Kuula and several more including Dr. Klemetti, himself.

The talent of Dr. Klemetti's chorus is a group talent. It's an all-for-one proposition. But there were a few opportunities for individual honor and Arnold Tilgmann, tenor, and Sulo Saarits, barytone, took them in Kajanus' "To the Fair Maiden," featuring a tenor solo, and in Emil Genetz's "If Evening Would Come," in which the barytone was soloist. Both the men revealed voices of such quality as to explain how the fine timbre of the ensemble is possible.

The Finlandia Chorus is in America to be part of the Finnish exhibit at the New York World's Fair. But while on this side of the Atlantic it is making as much use as possible of the opportunity to show in what high regard Finland holds its culture. Hence the tour now in progress. J. W.

Women Voters Favor Council-Manager Plan

Establishment of a city council and manager as proposed in the Griffenhagen report on reorganization of the District government was approved yesterday by the executive board of the Voteless District League of Women Voters.

The organization also went on record for the merit system and a personnel department, but opposed changing the status of the Board of Education or the Juvenile Court.

Operators Offer U. M. W. A. Sole Barganing Rights

New York, May 2 (AP).—Exclusive bargaining rights to the United Mine Workers of America and a checkoff system to collect dues from both union and nonunion employes—designed to protect the union against inroads from other labor organizations—were offered today by soft coal operators in a new effort to draft a wage and hour contract for the industry.

Facing the possibility that some Southern operators might refuse to sign contracts, the four operators representing the Appalachian soft coal industry, which has been idle since April 1, offered the new proposals to John L. Lewis and other representatives of the union at a joint conference.

Andrews Says Pay-Hour Unit Can Be 'Tough'

Lauds 'Great Majority' Of Employers Who Have Observed Law

Wage Hour Administrator Elmer Andrews last night praised "the great majority of employers who have been just perfectly swell" about the fair labor standards act, while warning that "we can be appropriately tough" in cases involving flagrant violation of the law.

"We experience little satisfaction in seeing people go to jail or pay fines up to $10,000," Andrews told 200 members and guests of the American Trade Association Executives, concluding a two-day conference here with a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel.

Where violations of the act have been unintentional, involving no falsification of records, he said the wage hour division has contented itself with obtaining payment of any back wages due and making sure the employer will comply in the future.

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, prevented by illness from attending the banquet, sent a message containing a sharp rebuke to the trade policies of an unnamed foreign country, assumed by many in the audience to be Japan.

Hopkins' statement, read by Edward J. Noble, his executive assistant, praised the Cotton Textile Institute, one of eight trade associations given honorable mention in the A. T. A. E. contest for service to industry and the general public, "for its achievement in handling the destructive cheap-wages competition of a foreign nation."

First prize in the annual competition went to the Portland Cement Association. Judges, besides Hopkins, were Neil Carothers, dean of the College of Business Administration, Lehigh University; Virgil Jordan, president of the National Industrial Conference Board; Charles F. Hughes, business news editor, New York Times, and Donald M. Nelson, vice president of Sears Roebuck.

Maryland Sells Its Tobacco

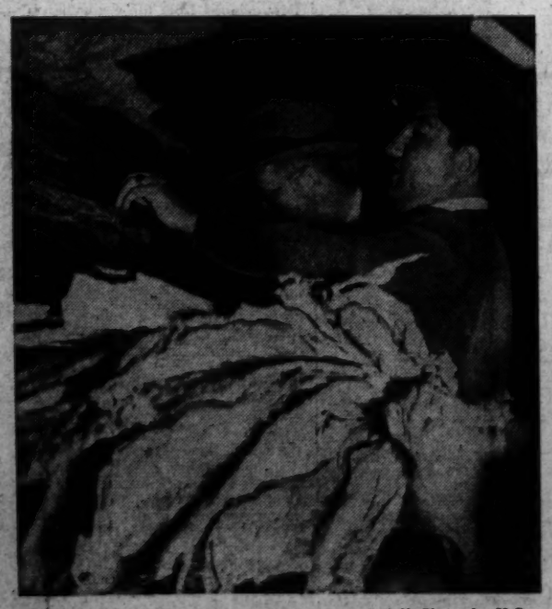

1. In this new tobacco warehouse at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday, the smoking weed was auctioned off. Top price of 40 cents a pound was given by the buyers.

2. The quick-fire sale attracted so many farmers to the warehouse that Prince Georges County police were compelled to clear the auctioneer's path.

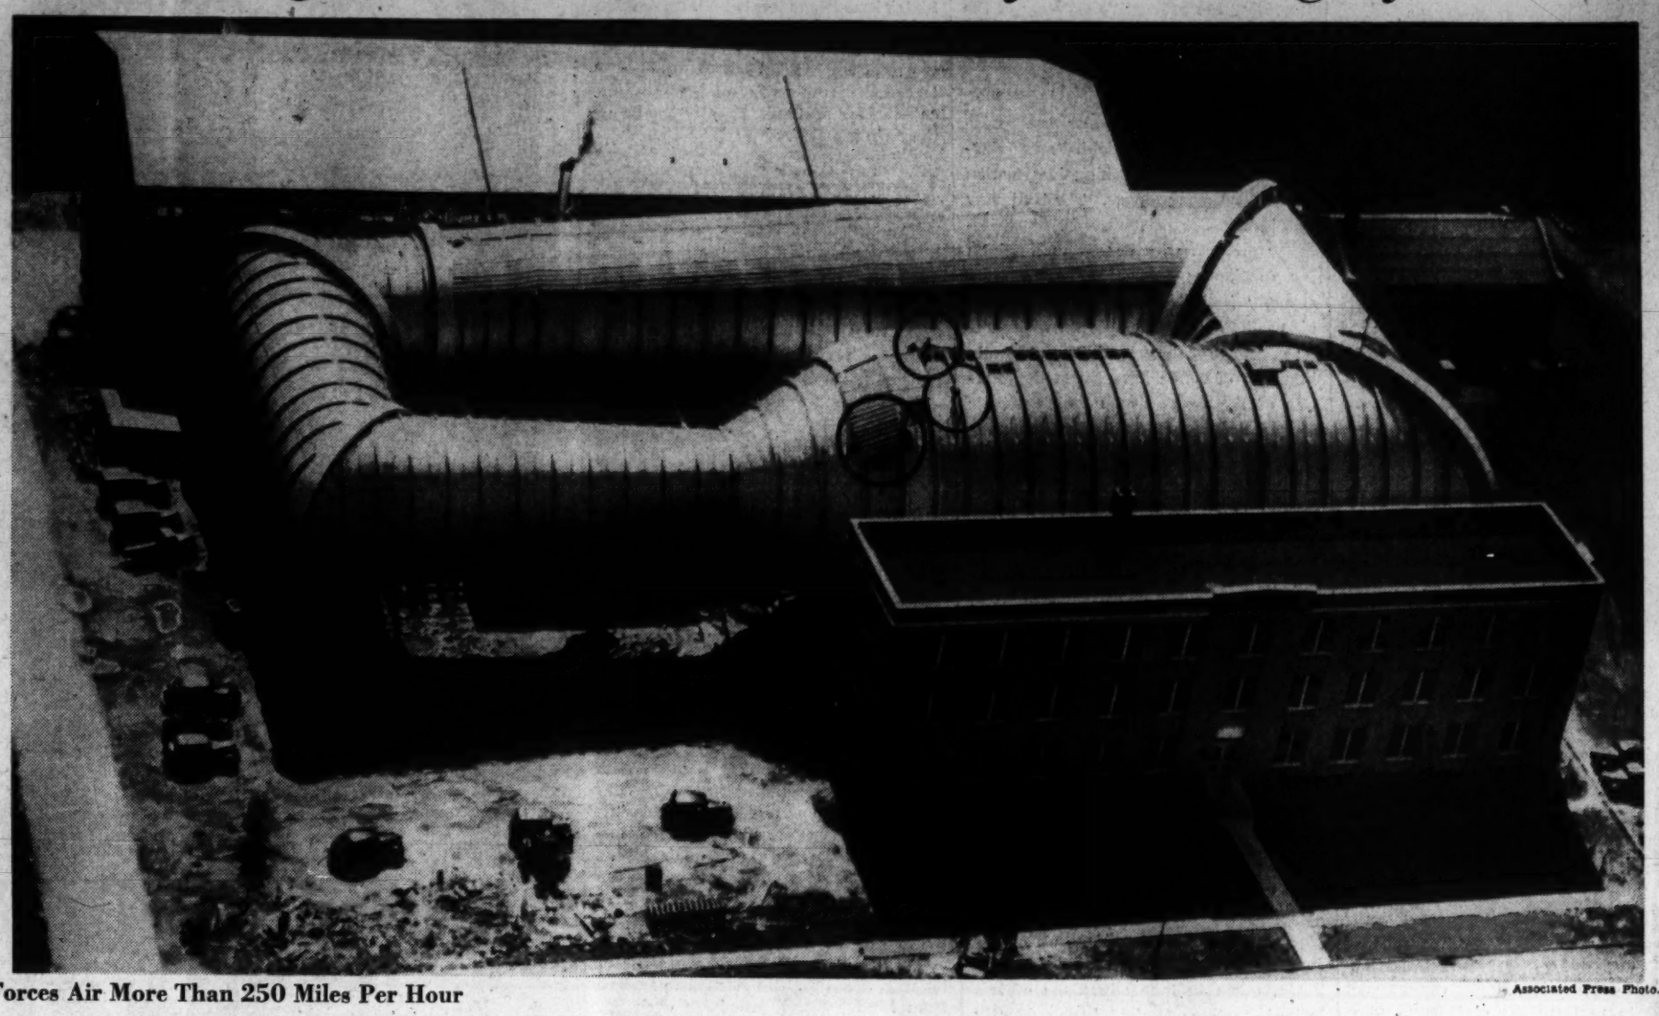

3. Katherine Edelene, of Bryantown, Md., was at the sale and rolled a cigarette of Maryland leaf while sitting on a stack of tobacco.

Two Important Posts

The United States has had no Minister to Canada since January 17, 1938, when Norman Armour left Ottawa to become Ambassador to Chile. For more than 15 months, therefore, an important diplomatic post, one which is particularly significant from the viewpoint of inter-American relations, has been left vacant.

It is now to be filled—but only temporarily. In a disarming statement, the new appointee, former Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, has made it plain that his tenure as American Minister to Canada will be limited to the duration of the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

As a "gentleman of the old school," to cite one Congressman's characterization of "Uncle Dan," Mr. Roper can be expected to perform his ceremonial task admirably. He overflows with the milk of human kindness and is universally liked. But it must be recognized that his appointment further postpones the day when the United States will again be represented at Ottawa by a man trained for the job.

Nor is it merely in Canada that this country is represented by ceremonial instead of by a professionally competent diplomat. Josephus Daniels, like Mr. Roper, a former Cabinet member, is also a "gentleman of the old school," an elder statesman of the Democratic Party and a man of sterling character. But the day has long since passed when these admirable qualifications, or even Mr. Daniels' many attainments, are sufficient for the exacting duties of a diplomat in a fantastically confused world.

Our relations with Mexico have for some time been, and remain today, strained by complex and difficult problems. Upon their solution much depends. And it is a matter of increasing comment that the extremely important Mexico City Embassy continues to be occupied by a man who was never trained for the peculiarly exacting task that now devolves upon him.

There were times when it did not make much difference to the United States who represented this Nation abroad. This country was then far removed from the main currents of world affairs. That is certainly not the case now. It is hardly in the public interest, therefore, to neglect the career service in treating two of the most important diplomatic missions in this hemisphere as political rewards.

Negative Tax Relief

Without a single dissent, the House Ways and Means Committee has recommended a three-year postponement of the increase in old-age pay-roll taxes scheduled for 1940. While delay would not lighten the burden of taxation already resting upon industry, it would mean escape from additional taxes totaling an estimated $275,000,000 annually. For this negative relief wage-earners and employers would have good reason to be thankful.

Before the proposed three-year respite has expired, opportunity will be given to study the financial and taxation problems created by the old-age insurance law. Experience has already demonstrated the desirability of a thorough overhauling of the system. Substitution of a small contingent reserve for the full reserve originally contemplated is now generally regarded as the only practicable arrangement. Various suggestions for liberalizing the old-age insurance system are also under consideration. All these proposed changes will necessitate revision of estimates of insurance costs and lead to modification of the scheduled pay-roll levies.

A dual task lies ahead of Congress. It must adjust taxes to the financial requirements of the old-age insurance system. And it must adapt the insurance system to industry's taxable capacity. The problem is made more difficult because old-age insurance is only one aspect of the comprehensive protection gradually being developed in the form of unemployment insurance and eventually no doubt sickness and disability insurance. With industry groaning under the present limited pay-roll levies, Congress may well stop to consider what would happen with the system in full operation.

If the country demands an all-embracing system of social insurance regardless of cost, the tax burden is bound to be oppressive, whatever form taxation may take. Consequently, it is most important in revising social-insurance legislation to establish a scale of benefits that we may reasonably expect to maintain without impairing the productive capacity of the country.

WPA And The Arts

Hearings before the House Appropriations Committee have yielded some startling and highly disturbing information about WPA arts projects. The testimony provides critics of the so-called white-collar projects with deadly ammunition for continuing their attacks. For it strongly indicates that efforts to combine relief for the unemployed with public patronage of the arts results not merely in waste of funds but also in degradation of the standards by which artistic competence would ordinarily be measured.

The huge sums spent on Federal theater projects provide an outstanding illustration of the almost criminal waste that has characterized certain aspects of the WPA's operations. That does not imply that the Federal theater projects have been altogether worthless. Nor does it mean that none but inferior actors have been employed. But with millions of idle able-bodied workers in need of aid it ought to be evident that this Nation cannot afford to finance costly theatrical rehearsals at the taxpayers' expense.

The revelations of Communistic activity in the writers' projects throws light on another fundamental evil of the arts projects. This is the virtual impossibility of subjecting them to adequate supervision. Members of the Communist Party, quick to take advantage of this lack of effective oversight, have evidently managed to secure strategic positions which are much more useful in spreading propaganda than in relieving unemployment.

To insure more efficient functioning of the WPA it is essential that its operations be confined to a restricted field. By putting the unemployed to work on construction projects only a maximum number of jobs could be provided with the money available, while the community would have something permanent to show for the outlay. Furthermore, the task of administering the work-relief system would be made much easier. Standards of efficiency could be raised, and malingering could be better detected and penalized.

The so-called white-collar projects do not fit into any such general plan. They are ideally suited to serve the purposes of those who are unwilling to perform a day's work for a day's pay. It is, for instance, significant that Col. Somervell, the able WPA director for New York City, is reported to have refused to accept responsibility for the arts projects there. And it is worth noting that after thorough study the Senate Special Committee on Unemployment emphasized the importance of concentrating upon public construction in giving work relief.

The case for complete elimination of the white-collar projects is made the stronger by the imperative necessity of bringing down relief costs as rapidly as possible. In the present state of the national finances, there is no possible justification for spending public money to support theatrical enterprises, good or bad. Nor can the Treasury afford to pay self-styled writers, or even first-rate writers, to produce books for which there is no popular demand, under the specious pretense that this is constructive unemployment relief.

Equal Before The Law

King George VI rules over an empire which occupies a fourth of the earth's surface. Gen. Anastasio Somoza is the chief executive of a Central American republic which is about the size of the State of New York in area, with a population hardly twice that of the District of Columbia.

But in each of the two centers the sovereignty of an independent nation entitles each to equal diplomatic rating. When King George and Queen Elizabeth arrive here next month royal honors will literally be rendered to them. No less impressive in official courtesies is the reception planned for President Somoza of Nicaragua when he visits Washington on a state visit the end of this week.

Here is a significance which transcends the formality of protocol. These are times in which, elsewhere in the world, small nations are threatened with the destruction of their independence. The totalitarian dictators have made it clear that in their opinion only powerful nations have rights which must be recognized. And they have proceeded to lay heavy hands on the sovereignty of smaller and weaker powers.

To this view the United States does not subscribe. The fact that the United States is overwhelmingly the most powerful nation in this hemisphere gives us no authority to act in a manner invidious to the sovereignty of the weakest of our neighbors. In the New World, at any rate, the equality prescribed by international law obtains with wholly undiminished force. The honors that are to be extended to President Somoza are called for not because he is a friend and well-wisher of the United States but primarily because he represents in his person the sovereignty of another state.

This does not mean that the United States has always treated Nicaragua with the respect due her as an independent nation. History shows otherwise. But the time when this country forcibly intervened in the affairs of that or other neighboring republics happily belongs in the receding past.

The Warring Sentences

Enforcement of the law was tempered by a fine sense of justice in the sentences meted out by Judge Laws yesterday in closing the Warring case. At first glance some may be inclined to think those sentences very light. But a reading of the decision is sufficient to show that each penalty imposed reflects discriminating judgment.

As Judge Laws pointed out, he might have handed down heavier sentences on the ground that the defendants had been engaged in illegal activity aside from fraudulent evasion of the income-tax law. He expressed belief that all three of the Warring brothers were deeply involved in an unlawful gambling business. Emmitt Warring had previously confessed attempts to influence jurors for which he was sentenced to 26 months in prison. The judge also took note of his claim of having bribed Washington policemen while conducting his numbers racket. But the sentences pronounced by the court yesterday were confined to the income-tax charges, to which Emmitt Warring pleaded guilty and against which Leo and Charles Warring offered no defense.

In resisting all temptation to punish the defendants for crimes with which they have not been officially charged and on which the court has heard no evidence, Judge Laws manifested a keen sense of his responsibility. He refused to swerve from high judicial principles even for the purpose of striking at a racket that is closely allied to crime of the more serious type. That restraint, coupled with the fair but vigorous prosecution of the Warrings by District Attorney Pine, is a more effective deterrent to crime than severe sentences alone.

These sentences are important, too, for the effect they may have on law-enforcement officials. Judge Laws has throughout emphasized the "protection" allegedly purchased from police by Emmitt Warring. The final disposition of this case now strengthens the obligation on local authorities to probe to the bottom of this alleged corruption in the Police Department, and to make certain that bribes are not now being received from the Warrings' successors in the numbers swindle.

The judge has also put law-enforcement officers on notice that more effective weapons than the income-tax law are needed against gambling. So far as it goes, the Warring case is an excellent beginning in the house-cleaning that Washington, as well as many another municipality, needs. It is not as effective a blow against gambling, corruption and crime as New York has struck in the Hines case. The Pendergast case in Kansas City may prove to be more far-reaching. But Washington has achieved a very creditable performance which should encourage more direct and widespread activity against racketeering elements throughout the Nation.

The Pulitzer Prizes

Distinguished effort in literary fields in the last year have again been rewarded with the distinction and financial remuneration of the Pulitzer prizes.

The importance and value attached to the awards is not infrequently attested by the amount of controversy they arouse. But indications are that this year's selections have, on the whole, a remarkable degree of support from public and critics alike. For instance, Robert E. Sherwood's "Abraham Lincoln" divided honors with Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes" in winning the approval of the New York Critics Circle, a group founded partly in protest against previous Pulitzer prize plays. Public and critics likewise agreed with the committee's choice of Margaret Kinnan Rawlings' "The Yearling" for the fiction award.

The list is indicative of the tremendous revival of American interest in democratic ideals, coincident with the developing attack on democracy elsewhere. Examples of this trend as shown in the awards are Carl van Doren's biography of "Benjamin Franklin," Frank Luther Mott's "A History of American Magazines" and the editorial from the Portland Oregonian entitled "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

First prizes for distinguished reporting, and the most meritorious public service by a newspaper, went to Thomas L. Stokes of the Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance and to the Miami Daily News, respectively. Both were awarded for genuine, able and courageous efforts toward better government.

In their encouragement of this type of journalism, the Pulitzer judges have given the totalitarian leaders an additional and well-founded reason for denouncing the American press. It is precisely this honest, hard-hitting newspaper work which the dictators cannot afford to permit in their own countries, and which worries them when they see it elsewhere.

"Unfair To Middle Age"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an individual just entering on middle age, I wish to express my deep appreciation of your article in The Post of April 29, entitled "Unfair to Middle Age." Your forthright indorsement of the President's proclamation combating the tendency to drop middle-aged persons from private employment is very heartening. Likewise your comment on the need of eliminating certain age restrictions for persons entering civil service is constructive and timely.

However, I wish to call your attention to a most amazing occurrence. On the very day that President Roosevelt voiced his moving appeal for the private employment of persons over 40 the Secretary of War, with the apparent approval of the President, asked Congress for authority to separate from the active list of the Regular Army officers who are more than 45 years old. These separations, under the Secretary's proposal, are to be made not in the order of relative efficiency but solely in the order of age.

The purpose of the plan is to enable junior officers to be promoted more rapidly. Its operation, as the Secretary concedes, will remove from the Army many superior officers with excellent records, who are physically and mentally qualified to render fine service for years to come. The only thing against these officers is that they have reached middle age. Apparently the War Department shares with some private employers the deplorable prejudice against the middle-aged. As the President points out in his proclamation there is no factual basis for this prejudice.

If the request of the Secretary of War is granted, private industry may well point to this action of the Government as supporting the practice of dismissing older workers, which is unfortunately followed far too frequently. As you so sagely observe, employers are more likely to be influenced in matters of this sort by the practices of the Government than by the words of the Chief Executive. MIDDLE-AGED.
Washington, April 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My husband is 53. In 1932 the firm that employed him for 12 years and raised him from clerk to assistant manager failed. The next four years used up his savings. For the last four years he has been with the Government. But they are going to blanket into Civil Service all the young, strong-limbed workers whom private business might readily find a place for and omit such men as my husband—solely because he is 53!

In America it is a crime to be 53. What are we to do? Too old to work, too young for pensions! Do you wonder we are being driven to organize behind such (I admit it) wild-eyed schemes as the Townsend act. We don't want relief and pensions; we want only decent consideration in jobs we admittedly can do as well as anyone else—that the laws of this country bar us from even trying for! C. P.

Bland And The Ukrainians

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several days ago it was announced that Yugoslavia had finally reached an agreement with the Croatian leader, Dr. Matchek, with regard to granting autonomy to the Croats. Such autonomy is to be granted to other nationalities as well as to the Croats. Thus Premier Cvetkovich's government has taken a wise step toward lessening the danger to the integrity of its country at this critical point in the European situation.

At this time Poland, a country with acute minorities problems, approaches that same issue in a quite different manner. In the face of what looks like a menacing disaster, Poland seems to be far from taking a course similar to Yugoslavia's, to effect the strengthening of her position within her borders, although it is evident that, in addition to Danzig, the neglected question of minorities seems clearly enough to be the underlying cause of her trouble.

The Ukrainians constitute the largest minority group in Poland, comprising almost one-fourth of the entire Polish population. Today the Poles realize that the Ukrainians, whose freedom of cultural, economic, and social development has been jeopardized by the Polish government for the past 20 years (see the recently published "Poland—Key to Europe," by Raymond L. Buell), might be a source of internal danger for them in case of a real emergency. Yet, they do not betray even a trifle of willingness to make a move to meet the demands of the Ukrainian people on a workable basis.

It is true that the Polish press is filled with articles on the Ukrainian problem. But the text of such articles, as exemplified by a feature article published in the Cracow Illustrowamy Kurjer Codzienny of April 14, is limited simply to this assertion, that (we quote the I. K. C.):

"It is the highest time for the settlement and improvement of Polish-Ukrainian relationship."

But the Polish government makes no move in that direction. Thus, obviously, it is the opinion of the Poles that the Ukrainians themselves are responsible for the whole situation. And yet, only a few months ago, the Polish Parliament rejected the Ukrainian petition demanding autonomy for the Ukrainians.

Oddly enough, the Polish Telegraphic Agency simultaneously continues to emphasize in its daily dispatches the fact that the Ukrainian population loyally supports the Polish government in its efforts to build up its defenses against an attack from outside; that recently some of the Ukrainian senators have even contributed a sum of 7,600 zlotys toward the national defense loan.

At the same time, however, the Polish newspapers carry news of further arrests of Ukrainian leaders, students and professional intelligentsia. The dissolution of Ukrainian cultural and educational organizations continues to be on the increase.

In view of these facts the Polish calls for improvement of Polish-Ukrainian relations seem to be at least insincere. It is impossible to believe that the Polish government really desires to do justice to the Ukrainian people, even now, when the political situation very strongly demands such justice for the sake of the Polish Republic itself. Unless, by solution of the Ukrainian problem, they mean complete annihilation of Ukrainianism.

Conference On Children

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to congratulate The Washington Post for having on its staff such an able and conscientious reporter as Miss Christine Sadler. I have noticed Miss Sadler's work from time to time during the past several years, but I was particularly impressed by the discriminating way in which she covered the recent meeting of the White House Conference on Children in a Democracy. This was a very difficult assignment because of the variety and, to a certain extent, the intangibility of some of the subjects of discussion at the conference, especially in the section meetings.

Miss Sadler's Sunday feature article in The Washington Post of April 16 was excellent and very much appreciated. Will you please convey to Miss Sadler on my behalf thanks and congratulations for this article as well as for the faithful report of the conference itself.

As you know, the photograph used by Miss Sauer, your Sunday editor, to illustrate Miss Sadler's article on April 16, was used as the cover for the program of the White House Conference and was the subject of much favorable comment among conference members. I was glad to learn that Mrs. McAllister had also borrowed this photograph to illustrate an article in a forthcoming issue of the Democratic Digest. We are grateful to Miss Sauer for her happy selection and to The Washington Post for letting us use this photograph.

Please convey my thanks, also, to Mr. Jay Walz for his very fine article on the educational page on April 23.

Sprat Into Spratt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of May 2 relating to the recent research of the three University of Chicago scientists was very interesting to me.

In order to add to the accuracy and verity of the research and also to prevent any calumny from becoming attached to the name of my paternal forebear I would like to say that the extra "t" was added to the end of our family name during the latter part of the seventeenth century. From this we know that our famous forebear was blest with at least one male child. So we assume that when the plates were being licked Jack Sprat got his due sustaining provender from the board.

For The Patients

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the sake of the patients, Dr. Ruhland and the Health Department should have full control over Gallinger Hospital, as well as the Glenn Dale Sanatorium. We all know by experience the patients did not get proper care when the Welfare Department and medical schools had charge of these hospitals.

The money appropriated to pay a chief medical director would be well spent. Dr. Ruhland should be given full authority to operate these hospitals for the benefit of the patients, not for the medical schools. If these medical schools are interested in the welfare of the patients they will render any assistance they can. It is shocking to know our Commissioners would think of handicapping Dr. Ruhland in his fine work. M. McILWEE.

The Post Impressionist

Mountain Maying

THOUGH MY FRIEND went to every performance of the National Folk Festival she was interested only in the mountaineeers. It was, she said, a lifelong interest and she told me of a childhood summer she had spent in the Southern Appalachians which had given her a few rare, cameo-like impressions of the hill people, and these impressions had followed her down the years.

She was 8 or 9 at the time and, with her family, she had come by railroad to a tiny hamlet clinging to the green brow of the mountain; then they had traveled by wagon deep into the leafy heart of the hills. Their destination was so remote, so walled in by mist-blue ridges that, at first, to her child fancy, it was like a visit through the looking-glass into another land.

But after she met the children of the neighboring mountaineers and the first stiff glaze of newness between them was broken, she forgot the small world she had known out beyond that crouching purple line of the Cumberlands. With a child's ease she adapted herself to the new life; she visited in many stanch log homes up and down the twisting rocky trails, but it was with the stairstep progeny of their nearest neighbor—across the creek—that she played most often.

This was before John Fox, jr., had gone into the Kentucky mountains and romanticized the Southern hill-dweller in his singing stories of the region. It was also before settlement workers or college professors had discovered the remote log homes sheltering the original quality of seventeenth century English life and began compiling bibliographies of the pure Anglo-Saxon speech and habits of the hillfolk which have grown to such length in public libraries. No one studies these books with more eager interest than my friend.

"I can't name the person who discovered that there, inclosed by the mountains, was a fragment of the Old World, but I can bear him out," she said. "Though that summer had the vivid fleetness of a bird's wing, in retrospect I gathered its full beauty and meaning. Much the children said was strange to me, but only two words remain.

"I had joined them at the creek for a morning's wading, dangling my lunch in a paper sack. At once they were interested, fixing their blue English eyes on the bag with unwavering steadiness. Then one asked: 'What you got in the poke?'

"The other word was less common but not so startling. We were descending into a deep gorge, known to all mountaineers as 'gulfs,' when we came upon a bee tree. Pausing, the oldest boy lifted his face to follow the busy line of bees flying to the tree, where he showed me how they clustered about an opening in the rough bole. 'I warrant thar's a mort o' honey in that tree,' he said."

Two words, my friend said, and then two incidents, the first of which contained a gift. It had been late April when they came into the hills, so her earliest companionship with the children found them looking to May Day as an event. They "allers went a-Maying on the first May morn," she was told. Did she know what Maying was? She shook her head, and they tried to make it plainer. They brought back flowers and branches of blossoming trees to pretty up the house. There were other things "that uster be done;" their granfer said his granfer had told him. But this was too involved; she still shook her head, and suddenly the children grew silent, though holding her with their expectant blue gaze. They didn't ask her to go Maying with them. Perhaps she didn't expect them to.

But on May-day morning she rose before her parents were astir and padded on bare feet to the porch; dew dripped from the grapevine in bloom by the steps, and apple trees scented the new day. There on the edge of the floor was a May basket. It was mossy green and calico-pink laurels, long-throated azaleas, clusters of citron-colored wild gooseberry blooms were crowded in it, still fresh and wet from the "gulfs."

The other incident was one of sound. She had come up on the L-shaped porch of the children's home, and, drawn by the tinkle of notes, she had stood in front of a young hillman who tilted his long length against the wall, picking at a crude instrument and singing to the accompaniment. It was a strange song, full of weird cadences. Rapt in his music, the singer gave not the slightest attention to her, although she stood in front of him, staring as only a child can stare, and with a sense of solemn fascination holding her. Few words of the song come back to her; she does recall "scarlet-red," but what the ballad was she may never piece together. In the "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" June tells John Hale that "song-ballads" are the only songs she knows; and years later the "Traipsin Woman" brought their age-old beauty into her books of the hills. But whether it was "Fair Ellender" or "Lord Lovell" or some ballad yet unrecorded that she heard that day, my friend will never know.

True Life Romance

YOU CAN TALK about beautiful love stories like Romeo and Juliet or Gable and Lombard, but, to my taste, the sweetest story ever told is contained in a magazine advertisement written by Cholly Knickerbocker, the society columnist, from the true life romance of George X. McLanahan, a Yale man, and the former Miss Sally Clark, the glamorous society belle of the Boston Four Hundred, whose sister married young Johnny Roosevelt. The story is illustrated with photographs by Jerome Zerbe, the society photographer of the exclusive New York night club and cafe circles.

Boy, oh, boy! Gee whiz! It certainly does make you wish you had the acquaintance of a glamorous and refined belle of exclusive Boston society, although maybe it is just a matter of the individual and not Yale. I mean probably Mr. McLanahan just happens to be the one man in all this world, and it might have been the same if he had gone to Penn State or Colorado School of Mines. Although, somehow, Yale seems more appropriate.

The Inside Story Of Famous Romance

THE ADVERTISEMENT is called "The Inside Story of a Front Page Romance," and the first picture shows the carefree young couple sitting by a tennis court.

"Spring in Nassau," says the text under the picture. "Sally was on a visit with friends. George on his spring holiday from Yale. They met at the British colonial courts. He asked her to dance that night at the Bahamian Club."

The next picture shows the glamorous Miss Clark, as she was then, in a negligee, flashing the radiance of her smile and holding a cake of soap in one hand. She has just washed her refined young face, and, man, it is something to make your pulses pound in your veins.

"Five o'clock," says the writing under this picture. "No time for an elaborate toilette (bath.—Ed.). A Woodbury (that is the name of the soap.—Ed.). Facial cocktail just the thing. Her complexion, so weary a while before, is radiant again."

An Elusive Figure Of Elfin Loveliness

IN THE NEXT scene they are dancing in an exclusive society haunt, and the writing says:—"something clicked. His eyes devour the smooth curve of her cheek, the velvety cream of her skin. But what, he wonders, is her feeling for him? Of this he is sure—her charm is captivating."

Mr. Knickerbocker just about drives you crazy, making you feel almost as though you were Mr. McLanahan himself, holding this modest, elusive, tantalizing figure of elfin loveliness in your own arms. And Mr. McLanahan is generous enough to assist in the illusion by posing in the photograph. Hold 'er, Yale!

Well, the next picture shows them back in New York, and she is singing into a sort of gas pipe in an ultra-exclusive society haunt where only the most expensive whisky, gin, wine and cigars are sold and unescorted women positively are not permitted to enter, like over on Third avenue and in some cheap spots in Brooklyn and Chicago. Miss Clark spent some time singing in high-class resorts, and the writing says Mr. McLanahan "even goes to rehearsals, never to lose sight of her." He is leaning on the piano, and his eyes, which shine with the combined light of love and his Yale education, devour the smooth curve of her cheek and velvety cream of her skin.

Gee Whiz! Oh, Gosh! Isn't Love Wonderful!

THE NEXT PICTURE shows the wedding. Love has brought the glamorous little dove fluttering to his side, wounded by Cupid's dart, and the scenario says:—"hers is the beauty that is fresh, natural, real."

Finally they are shown in a shower of rose petals, and Mr. Knickerbocker writes: "When was there a bride more romantic, with skin so glamorously lovely?"

Gee whiz! It makes you feel that, even though you couldn't go to Yale yourself, you are willing to make any sacrifice so your son can go to Old Eli Under the Elms and perhaps marry a glamorous society belle of the Boston bonton who sings in high-class cafes and washes the velvety cream of her smooth, curving cheek with soap instead of taking an elaborate toilette (bath.—Ed.).

Guaranty Trust Pays Alleghany $867,385 Cash

New York, May 2 (AP).—Guaranty Trust Co., as trustee for Alleghany Corp. 5 per cent bonds maturing 1944 today paid over to the latter company $867,385.66 representing cash freed by March 9 appraisal showing collateral securing the bonds was in excess of 150 per cent.

Earlier Wall Street reports today had indicated that Marine Midland Trust Co., new trustees for Alleghany 5 per cent bonds of 1950 and Continental Bnak & Trust Co., new trustees for Alleghany 5s of 1949, had conferred with representatives of Alleghany and Guaranty relative to the possibility of court action to estop the payment.

Alleghany's annual meeting is scheduled for tomorrow at Baltimore. The present management group, headed by Robert R. Young, has receivde the proxy for 1,200,000 common shares held subject to optiino by the George and Frances Ball Foundation as collateral for a note given by Young and associates May 5, 1937, in acquiring control. With this proxy the Young group is expected to exercise control tomorrow, but, on Thursday, must give up rights to that stock or pay $2,375,000 face value of the note with accrude interest.

The German Air Force

From The London Economist

What Are The Real Facts?

THE GERMAN aircraft industry consists of approximately 29 large and small firms, with about 51 factories altogether; in addition there are 17 plants making aero engines. Most of these are on the Baltic coast, around Berlin and in central Germany. The old-established factories, especially those of Junkers, Dornier and Heinkel, have, of course, very greatly expanded since 1933. Junkers, for example, besides expanding the original plant at Dessau, has set up new factories in Breslau, Kothen, Leipzig, Magdeburg and Leopoldshall.

The industry is organized in such a way that the design and construction of prototypes (i. e., new models) is completely separated from mass production. Thus the two Heinkel plants at Rostock and Warnemunde are entirely concerned with prototypes, while the other plants of the firm, such as the huge factory at Oranienburg, near Berlin, are confined to the assembly of parts, supplied by sub-contracting firms, which cover a wide range of industry, including, for example, some of the shipbuilding firms. This Oranienburg plant is said to have a weekly output of 10 to 12 He 112 twin-engined bombers.

THE NUMBER of workmen employed by the aircraft industry itself, excluding the sub-contracting firms, is at least 170,000 men and women (from a quarter to a third are women). The average working time of 52 hours a week is often extended to 58 or even 60 hours, and cases of even longer hours are not unknown. According to official figures, the average wages per hour for skilled workers are 78½ pfennigs (18 cents at the old parity) an hour, while unskilled men receive about 62¼ pfennigs and women's wages are much lower.

At the end of 1938 the German air force appears to have consisted of about 280 squadrons. The full strength of a squadron is nine machines, with three more planes on the station reserve. If all the squadrons were up to full strength, the total number of first-line fighting planes would be about 3,400.

To these must be added about 500 planes of first-line quality employed by the police, about the same number of transport planes and a number (said to be 700) of single-seater aircraft for training fighter pilots. The total of fighting planes of first-line quality that could be mobilized in time of war would probably be from 5,500 to 6,000, in addition to the second-line and third-line reserves, which are numerous but of unknown fighting value. To these must now be added the spoils of Czecho-Slovakia: 76 squadrons of a first-line strength of about 750 machines.

BY THE USUAL methods of calculation, however, the front-line strength of the German air force appears to be about 4,200 planes, of which about 2,500 are bombers. This figure is confirmed by such statements as have been made as coming from the German authorities. Thus the Essener Nationalzeitung, which is closely connected with Field Marshal Goering, the air minister, printed, with approval, on October 26, 1938, an Italian estimate that at the time of the Munich Conference Germany's first-line strength was 3,000 machines.

The editor of an American aeronautical journal has reported that he was informed by the German authorities that the monthly output was 300 planes of all kinds, which would suffice to replace the whole first-line strength in four months. This would give a figure of 3,200 planes. The last precise British program was for a first-line strength of 2,370 machines in the metropolitan force by March 31, 1939, and this program has been achieved, and probably exceeded. The conclusion appears to be that some months ago Germany's air force was little more than half as large again as the British.

THE FIGURE of 300 machines a month is probably an exaggeration of the actual output, certainly in the last quarter of 1938, unless it is intended to refer to possible output. It seems probable that the actual output in the last few months of 1938 was no more than 500 machines a month, and that it may be 600 a month now.

Here again the current ratio between Britain and Germany appears to be 2:3, as British production is believed at the beginning of this year to have been 400 machines a month. But the rate of increase is almost certainly greater in Great Britain than in Germany.

Much larger figures than these have been published in many places, especially in America. But it is quite clearly advantageous to Germany's propaganda to have larger figures in circulation.

The tendency in Germany is for fighters to get larger and bombers smaller, and for both to get faster. Thus two new fighter prototypes are the Messer-Schmitt Bf 110 with two engines of 1,300 h.p. each and a maximum speed of over 350 m.p.h. and a new Heinkel whose calculated maximum speed, according to its designer, is to be 440 m.p.h. A specially prepared version of the latter has been flown at 463.8 m.p.h. —though only at 150 feet from the ground.

THE PERFORMANCES of the German machines are undoubtedly good. There is no proof at all that the latest types are poorly finished or of inferior design, or that they have suffered significantly through any abandonment of high standards of construction. On the other hand, the use of substitute materials has dangers and disadvantages which would increase in time of war. Unquestionably, however, the performance of the British machines, type for type, is superior to that of the German.

There is no evidence to show that German designers have found it possible to concentrate on a smaller range of types than the British—rather the contrary. On the other hand, German production methods probably approach more closely than British to mass production.

The smallest strategic unit is the Staffel, or squadron, of nine planes plus a station reserve of three. Three Staffel form a Gruppe, and three Gruppen a Geschwader. The personnel of the German air force amounts to more than 150,000 officers and men. Volunteers for appointment as pilots have usually undergone preliminary training, either in gliding or in small motor craft, at one of the local branches of the Nazional-Sozialistische Flieger Korps, which is said to have already issued 60,000 certificates. It does not, of course, follow that Germany has that number of pilots trained to war standard. On the contrary, the supply of pilots is reported to be one of the chief factors imposing limitations on the possible speed of expansion.

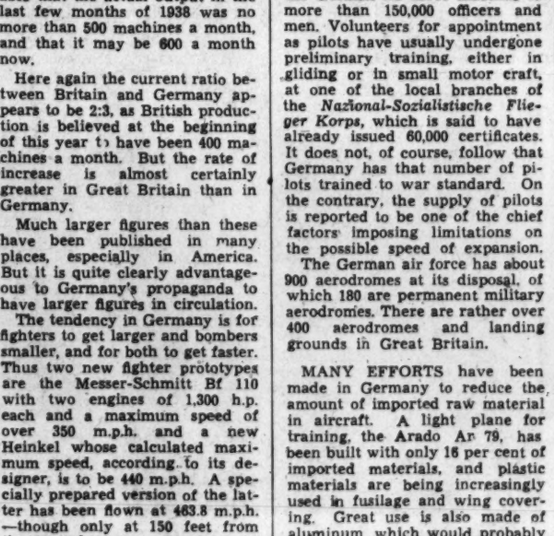

The German air force has about 900 aerodromes at its disposal, of which 180 are permanent military aerodromes. There are rather over 400 aerodromes and landing grounds in Great Britain.

MANY EFFORTS have been made in Germany to reduce the amount of imported raw material in aircraft. A light plane for training, the Arado Ar 79, has been built with only 16 per cent of imported materials, and plastic materials are being increasingly used in fusilage and wing covering. Great use is also made of aluminum, which would probably be available in adequate quantities in time of war. But the supply of raw materials would still be a very difficult problem for the German authorities in wartime.

Perhaps the weakest point in Germany's air armaments is the supply of fuel. According to the four-year plan, Germany's peace-time requirements of fuel of all kinds will be 6.3 million tons in 1940. Of this amount only 1.2 million tons are being produced in Germany at present. Moreover, the wartime requirement has been assessed at as much as 15 or 20 million tons a year.

Fighting The Dole

By Ernest K. Lindley

WPA 'Inefficiency'

THE PRESIDENT'S request for $1,750,000,000 relief fund for next year had a drearily familiar air. Once again the backbone of his program is WPA.

Quite a few of the President's lieutenants would have liked to trim WPA severely and put more money into special works programs. Since its start four years ago, WPA has been a compromise — compromise between a sound principle and timidity. The principle is that work is better than idleness—better for the individual's morale and therefore for the Nation.

The timidity has been on the financial side. The sums appropriated by the Federal Government have seemed vast to most people. But they have never been large enough to provide a first-class work program for all the needy unemployed. "Needy," as used by Mr. Roosevelt and his Administration, is the rough equivalent of "dead broke." Undoubtedly there have been some people on the WPA rolls who were not in desperate need. But they probably have been and still are outnumbered by the people in desperate need for whom there is no room on WPA. In addition, there have been and still are millions who need work but who have a few dollars of savings which must be exhausted before they become eligible for relief, and therefore for WPA.

Only 'Dead Broke' Are Given Work Aid

WPA, LIKE some other parts of the New Deal, has favored the man at the bottom over the man who is just a few feet above the bottom. In many cases—not all—this means a man is penalized for being a little more energetic, a little more resourceful, or a little more thrifty than his neighbor. A public works program open to everybody who is out for a job for, say, more than three or four months, would be much more desirable than one open only to people who are supposed to be "dead broke."

Moreover, a real works program is better than one which smacks of "made work." The quality of WPA projects has been improved, I believe. The reports of Army engineers assigned to WPA indicated that the construction projects were moving along satisfactorily, on the whole, back in 1937. The abrupt expansion of WPA in some of the large cities in 1938, necessitated by the sharp increase in unemployment, meant that temporarily some WPA workers had to be given jobs on third-rate and poorly organized projects. But when WPA is allowed to plan ahead and to expand or contract gradually it is able to do useful things.

The WPA worker leaning on his shovel has become a stale joke. But it is not a joke that so many of the WPA workers are equipped with shovels and picks and wheelbarrows. A real inefficiency in WPA comes from the failure to make greater use of machinery. To spread the work, to hold down the total cost of employing each WPA worker, too much of the construction work is done by antiquated methods. The emphasis has been on keeping the individual WPA worker busy instead of getting the job done in the quickest and least expensive way.

Compromise Policy Limits Efficiency

THESE SHORTCOMINGS in WPA are due to the fact that it is too cheap. The President has never been willing to ask for enough money to provide real public work for all the unemployed. If he had asked, undoubtedly he would have been turned down. So he has clung to a compromise which limits most of the work program to the unemployed who are "dead broke" and which often rules out the most efficient methods of construction.

Many of the President's aides, including Harry Hopkins, have looked forward to the day when the "means test" could be dropped, but they have realized that they must wait until the total number of unemployed is smaller than it is now.

The conditions which led the President to set up WPA four years ago still hold. Now there is the additional argument that if any changes are made they are likely to be for the worse. The whole principle of work is under attack, direct and indirect, in Congress. The people who were telling us six and seven years ago that the "dole" would ruin the country—as they said it had ruined England—now clamor for the "dole." Every person who advocates a heavy cut in relief expenditures is in fact advocating the "dole" whether he admits it or not. He is advocating idleness instead of work.

Modest Estimate Of Relief Need

THE PRESIDENT has yielded to the demands for economy by making a very modest estimate of the relief need for next year. For WPA he has asked only $1,477,000,000, about one-third less than for this year—enough to employ about 2,000,000 persons on the average as against about 3,000,000 this year. If, as WPA statisticians say, only between one-third and one-fourth of the new jobs in private industry go to WPA workers, the President is guessing that there will be about 4,000,000 more private jobs next year than there are this year. (This makes rough allowance for the annual increase of about 500,000 in the working population.)

So many more private jobs would require a sharp economic recovery—sharper than most Administration economists are now predicting. At best, even if the President's requests are met 100 per cent by Congress, the outlook for the needy unemployed is not very bright.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

The Triumph Of Rationalization

THE JUSTIFICATION that Hitler advanced for the incorporation of BOHEMIA and Moravia into the Reich fully explains the extreme nervousness of the Poles and their reluctance to yield an inch on the present claims for a settlement of Danzig and a road through the Corridor. Hitler's arguments (in the speech last Friday) were nine:

1. Bohemia and Moravia were from the earliest times part of the Reich or bound up with and subject to its sovereignty.
2. They belong to the "living space" of Germany and to a natural economic unit.
3. The crowded condition of this area demands the highest intensity of work, and consequently of order.
4. The rights of Czech nationalism have been preserved.
5. In the course of migrations, Germanic tribes originally settled in this area, but were pushed out by alien Slavs.
6. From the economic viewpoint the independence of the Czech state was impossible, once the Sudetenland was removed.
7. Czech culture was formed and molded by German influence.
8. Czecho-Slovakia was an arsenal for the western powers and a bridge between them and Bolshevik Russia.
9. The conquestion was a recognition of historical necessity and economic exigency.

ON THE BASIS of these arguments not only is the total destruction of Poland also "justified" but these supplemented by other rationalizations of the speech, furnish an apology in advance for the conquest of everything east of the Rhine and, within equal reason, for everything on the continent of Europe.

The Reich that Hitler is speaking of now as having a historic claim to Bohemia and Moravia is not the German Reich but the Austro-Hungarian empire. He does not quibble with such trifles as the fact that the Austro-Hungarian empire was never in history a German national state, but was a dual monarchy held together in a federation by a dynasty and by the tradition of the Holy Roman Empire.

It is, indeed, the Holy Roman Empire, or even perhaps its predecessor, the Empire of Charlemagne, that Hitler is claiming as the unit for his coming empire.

For how else can one interpret the following remarkable statement: "The present Greater Reich contains no territory that was not from earliest history part of this Reich or subject to its sovereignty. Long before an American continent had been discovered this Reich existed, not merely in its present extent but with the addition of many regions and provinces which have since been lost."

Ruled Occident In Tenth Century

THIS "FIRST REICH" was the Holy Roman Empire, which was the successor to the Pan-European empire of Charlemagne, and existed from the accession of Otto I, a Saxon King, in the tenth century, until it was broken up by the Reformation and the Renaissance! It was also built on a German-Rome axis, a combination of remains of the Roman imperium, which had been kept alive by the church, and of German feudalism.

At a later point in the speech—in a part of it addressed to Great Britain—he made this even clearer: "The English people rule a great empire. Previously Germany had been a great empire. At one time Germany ruled the Occident."

Well, the only time that Germany ruled the Occident was from the tenth century to the sixteenth. Of course, it was not "Germany" that ruled, because this was before the rise of nationalism. A German King ruled over other princes in collaboration with the Popes.

And in that time "Germany" ruled not only Bohemia and Moravia and all the territories east of the Rhine, but everything from Spain to Poland and from Hamburg to Rome. On this argument, Hitler has as good a claim to rule France as to rule Czecho-Slovakia.

All that he has to do to include Great Britain is to pass the argument to Rome and demand the revival of the Roman Empire, combined with the Holy Roman Empire. Bring in Columbus and the Spanish end of an axis, and he could claim North America!

IN VIEW of this announcement, which has the merit of candor, the Poles must know exactly where they stand on the assumption that they are next in line.

If Hitler is trying to reconstitute this "First Reich," he can claim most of Poland.

"Living space" is whatever Hitler decides that it ought to be. In "Mein Kampf," he speaks of a contiguous empire of a quarter of a billion people, which means that he must take in more non-Germans than there are inhabitants of the United States.

The argument that "the crowded condition of the area demands the highest intensity of work, and consequently of order," is an argument for making it all Nazi.

What "rights of nationalism" mean under Hitler we can learn from Bohemia and Moravia, where the Czechs are not "citizens" of the Reich but a sort of helot-subject; their national rights are considerably less than they had under the Austro-Hungarian Empire, where they had their own parliament!

The fifth argument is a honey, without a shred of historical truth. Nobody knows who the "Boii" were, from whom the word "Bohemia" derives, but this is the first time I have ever heard it claimed that they were Germans!

The first indication of Germans being in this territory were the Marcomanni tribes who came in as invaders in 12 B. C. A large part of Germany was built upon the conquest of Slavs: the very word "Prussia" comes from Borussia, and the Wendish names in many parts of Prussia indicate Slavic origins. The concept of "alien Slav" in Bohemia is breathtaking. It is another of those "gigantic lies" which Hitler praises in "Mein Kampf"—for their effectiveness with the simple-minded.

The argument that Czechia had no possibility of economic independence once she began to be dismembered tells the Poles precisely where they stand.

IF GERMANY gets Danzig, she can throw whatever agreement she may make about protecting Polish economic rights in that harbor into the waste basket. Inasmuch as the Port of Danzig clears two-thirds of the Polish commerce, the possibility of Polish economic independence will be greatly lessened.

If Hitler gets the strip of land across Pomorze which he claims for access to East Prussia, Poland is utterly lost. For that so-called motor road—envisaged as a strip 17 miles wide—will cut her off from her only other seaport, Gdynia, and argument 6 will then be applied to Poland.

Germany is not "cut off" from East Prussia. She can reach it by sea in a few minutes. Given decent relations, she can reach it by road or rail over Polish territory—as we reach Detroit from Buffalo over Canadian territory. The argument for demanding a strip of land connecting the United States with Alaska is equally valid!

As for a nation's culture, "it is whatever Hitler decides it to be. The "culture" of Bohemia was greatly influenced by its predominantly Hussite religion; it shared the culture of the Austro-Hungarian empire, which was very different from the Prussian, and in the last 20 years it has been greatly influenced by the ideas of freedom which were Anglo-Saxon and American. The "culture" of Poland is Slavic, German, French, and, curiously enough, Polish . . . But what is a word?

Hitler Hints Czechs Threatened Germany!

ARGUMENT 8 means that if any small nation tries to protect itself by a treaty of friendship and non-aggression with another power, it is an "arsenal" for that country.

We are actually asked to believe that it was Czecho-Slovakia that was threatening Germany, rather than the other way around, and one wonders why Czecho-Slovakia let all those years elapse when she was armed and Germany was not, and did not attack and attempt to annex Germany during the great breakdown of the German inflation in 1923.

And argument 9 is good for any aggression, anywhere, any time.

There was one other argument. That Germany did the Czechs a friendly service by persuading them not to resist; because if they had, Czecho-Slovakia would certainly have been destroyed in a most dreadful blood bath.

That remains the truly effective argument, and needs no rationalization. Without aid, they certainly would have been razed to the ground. So, argue the Germans, will the Poles.

READERS of Alice in Wonderland will recognize the Hitler argument. It was addressed by the Carpenter to the Oysters:

"O Oysters," said the Carpenter,
"You've had a pleasant run.
"Shall we be trotting home again?"
But answer there was none—
And this is scarcely odd, because They'd eaten every one.

Hitler is more like the Lachrymose Walrus than like the Carpenter. "I like the Walrus best," said Alice, "because he was a LITTLE sorry for the poor Oysters."

Hitler is a LITTLE sorry for all the peoples he plans to gobble up. For war would devastate the territory he wants to add to the Reich and use up armaments that he wants to "confiscate" in order to prevent them from doing harm. Doing harm, of course, to him.

Elmer Twitchell On The 1939 Model Circus

Elmer Twitchell has just got around to seeing the 1939 model circus, and he reports that it has gone sissy. "Why, they're taking out the virility, wallop and vigor and substituting art, prettiness and sex appeal!" exclaimed Elmer, who was quite upset about it. "They're even trying to give glamour to an elephant!

"Maybe I'm just old-fashioned and don't realize that the country is demanding something silky, shimmering and soft under the big top," continued Mr. Twitchell, "but, anyhow, the Earl Carroll-Flo Ziegfeld-Shubert Brothers influence in a circus tent leaves me cold.

"I hope they'll call a halt before some circus puts up a big sign reading 'Through These Portals Pass the Most Beautiful Camels in the World.'

"Yes, sir, they've gone and made it a girl show. The beauty chorus has taken to the flying trapeze, the opening pageant and the bareback acts. It's a Congress of Miss Americas. There were moments when I had trouble believing it was the Barum and Bailey Show and not the John Murray Anderson-Mrs. Harrison Williams Combined Shows.

"Even Gargantua looked softended up. He acted a little like Ferdinand the Bull, and I suspected somebody had been letting him play with daisies. And—save the mark!—the circus, has gone in for cooch dancers in the side show. I'd never believe it if I hadn't seen it.

"I liked the circus when it was short of finery and long on action and comedy. I was raised with circuses that had no night club atmosphere anywhere, no Winter Garden tone and no cocktail lounge decorative scheme. The opening pageant used to be a rip-snorter. In the modern circus its become a colossal assemblage of Brenda Fraziers and their personal maids.

"The elephants always used to be the big feature of the opening parade, but this year they are so covered with draperies and loaded down with half naked women that you don't even notice 'em. The elephant herd has been buried in laces, organdies, velvets, plushes, silks and satins, and if it runs amok some day I'll know why. I never thought I would ever look at a parade of pachyderms and ask, 'Who is that beautiful blonde in the center?'

"I was afraid they'd bring on a black panther any minute with its nails polished and some pearls around its neck."

maneuver Russia into a war with Germany.

Far East Action Barred

Russia would gain added security for her western borders because Britain and France might be compelled to go to the aid of the Baltic states of Latvia, Esthonia, Lithuania and Finland.

Agreement—understood to have been approved already by Moscow—that the scheme will not apply in any way to the Far East because Britain fears any agreement with Russia regarding the Orient would drive Japan into acceptance of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's proposal for transformation of the anti-Communist pact into a military alliance.

[The cabinet, however, will meet tomorrow to decide on a proposal for an Anglo-French-Soviet consultative pact which will provide for immediate tri-partite consultations if the interests of any one of the three powers is endangered in the Far East, the International News Service reported.

[Another provision calls for joint conversations with the United States if American interests in the Pacific are threatened, it was said. Britain's views on this proposal already have been transmitted to Washington, the dispatch declared.—Editor's note.]

Paris Sees Early Signing

French diplomats predicted the agreement bringing Russia into the armed "peace front" would be a reality within a few days and contended Hitler has failed in efforts to convince either Japan or Italy of the necessity of converting the anti-comintern pact into a military alliance.

In declining to extend the agreement with Russia to cover the Far East, the British and French were understood to have in mind eventual diplomatic endeavors to terminate fighting in China.

If Moscow agrees to the "interim arrangement" it is believed Turkey's adherence to the antiagression bloc by means of agreements with Britain and France will follow quickly.

The new plan, by its application to any nation where Britain and France might intervene against aggression, is far broader than Britain's original proposals to Moscow, which suggested merely that Russia offer aid to Rumania and Poland, who hold guarantees from Britain and France.

Italians Assail Poland

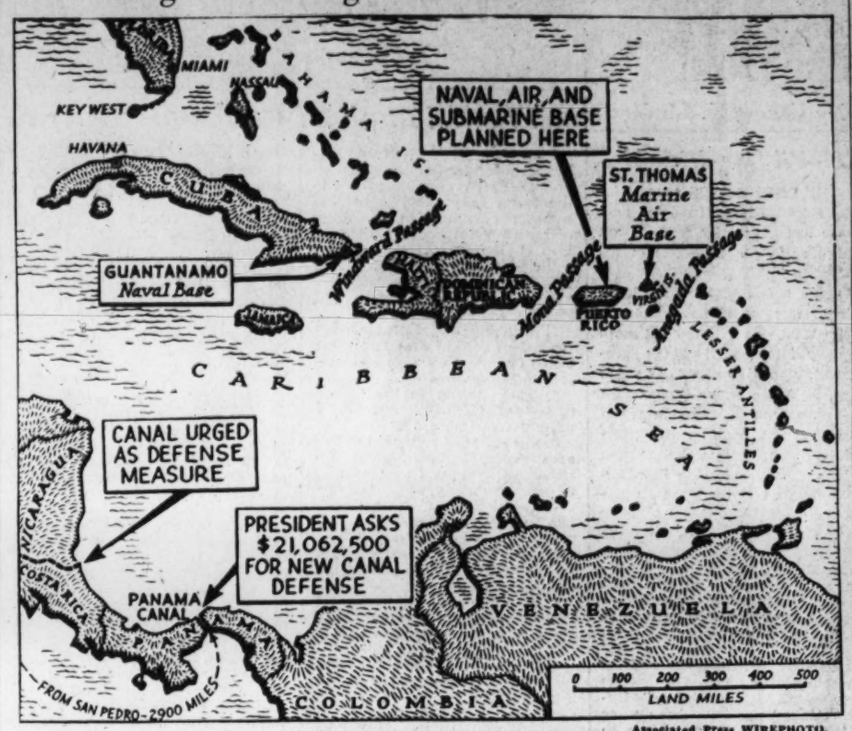

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 2.—The controlled Italian press took an unsympathetic tone toward Poland today as diplomats looked in that direction for the next move of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Newspapers characterized Polish reaction to Germany's desires as "intransigent" (uncompromising). Czecho-Slovakia's attitude was similarly characterized by the Fascist press prior to the September crisis.

Up to now newspapers have been stressing Italian-Polish friendship, but diplomats saw indications Italy would give Germany full support in the event of a new crisis involving Danzig and Poland. Il Giornale d'Italia said in a dispatch from Warsaw that almost all foreign diplomats in Warsaw, including Italians and Germans, were sending their families out of the country.

Boycott Close To War, Says Vandenberg

By the Associated Press.

Committees of both Senate and House yesterday received more views and opinions on what should be done about permanent neutrality legislation.

In hearings by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, recalled President Roosevelt's statement that there were methods "short of war" for dealing with aggressor nations.

"Is not this phrase 'short of war' a terrifically treacherous and dangersous phrase?" he asked.

The witness, Dr. Herbert Wright, professor of international law at the Catholic University, expressed the opinion that such methods might be used to protect American neutrality but should not be employed for any other purpose.

Referring to an amendment by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, under which the President, with the approval of Congress, could name and boycott an aggressor, Vandenberg commented that this was "something short of war—but not very short."

"I believe that selecting an aggressor is an act of war," said Wright.

Before the House Foreign Relations Committee, Irving Brant, contributing editor of the St. Louis Star-Times, said the present law "is a notification to Hitler that if he starts a war, he need not fear the use of American munitions against him."

He urged the sale of all materials to belligerents under a cash and carry restriction.

Dr. David Efron, Argentine exchange professor and executive secretary of the Council for Pan-American Democracy, told the Senate committee that the "peace and security of the entire western hemisphere may be threatened" by Nazi and Fascist penetration in Latin America.

Judge John A. Matthews, of the New Jersey Court of Chancery, ran into a verbal encounter with Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, of the Senate committee by asserting that Congress was influenced by "captains of business and industry" in its decision to declare war on Germany in 1917.

"I resent that," Pittman flared.

Judge Matthews, speaking for the Paul Revere Sentinels, opposed Pittman's proposed amendments to open American markets to belligerent nations under a cash and carry restriction. He likewise expressed opposition to the Thomas amendment.

William B. Goodwin, Democratic leader from Queens County, N. Y., urged that the present neutrality law be continued unchanged.

Judge Herbert A. O'Brien, of Jamaica, Long Island, asked that the committee determine that no secret agreement exist which would commit this country to war.

He received a burst of applause from spectators when he said that "we need somebody else in the White House."

The Rev. Benney Benson, of Brooklyn, wearing an American Legion cap, asked support for President Roosevelt's recent peace appeal to Hitler and Mussolini, and called for a more mandatory neutrality bill than the present law.

June Adjournment Drive Dies as Senate Indicates It Will Stay to Guard Against War

amount to be paid will be the same in the long run and in the aggregate, but might be taken out of different pockets in order to be transferred to the Treasury."

Barkley said that "if we go into a general revision of taxes, we shall be here all summer, because it is impossible in a short time to revise a complicated tax structure." He declared the uncertainty would "do business no good."

"Cannot Run Away"

At all events, the Senate leader said Congress "cannot run away from" the neutrality issue, and enactment of legislation "before there is a war." He said the Foreign Relations Committee is seeking to shape a legislation course that will steer clear of war and will continue hearings this week.

He called on Chairman Wheeler, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, for the status of rail legislation, and was told that the first of a series of bills dealing with rail reorganization and other rail problems will receive a sub-committee vote late this week or early next.

In moving for adjournment, Bankhead charged an effort by mandatory neutrality bloc members to hold Congress in session, "resisting the passage of what appears to be the sentiment of the majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations." He declared that after four months, no social security bill has been introduced by the Ways and Means Committee, and asserted, "It has been understood for three or four months that we would have no general tax bill." He said there was no reason for Congress to remain into "the late hot summer."

Burke Protests Adjournment

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, was the first to protest adjournment in advance of action on labor relations act amendments. Next Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, objected that pending measures were of "the highest importance." Connally further insisted that "Congress should stay right here in Washington until all the visible dangers of involvement of the United States in a foreign war may be removed, in so far as they can be removed."

Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, followed with a demand that Congress remain in session and "on guard every minute of the day and every minute of the night in order that we do not participate in a war in which we are not concerned—in order that we not be eased or driven into it."

Johnson won applause from the galleries as he reiterated his "keep-us-out-of-war" appeals. He said that if this country goes to war "to destroy those two dictators, we shall have a dictator in the United States and he will remain forever."

"The consequences of war are such," said Johnson, "that this Government of ours which is the pride and glory of every member of this body, will be gone, gone, gone, and there will be no remedy by which we can resurrect it within our lifetime."

Barkley said he had no advance knowledge of the Bankhead adjournment resolution. It was referred to the Rules Committee.

SEEING IS BELIEVING!

It's smart, popular... a striking way to compare cigarettes... AMERICAN AIRLINES PILOT GIVES A DEMONSTRATION...

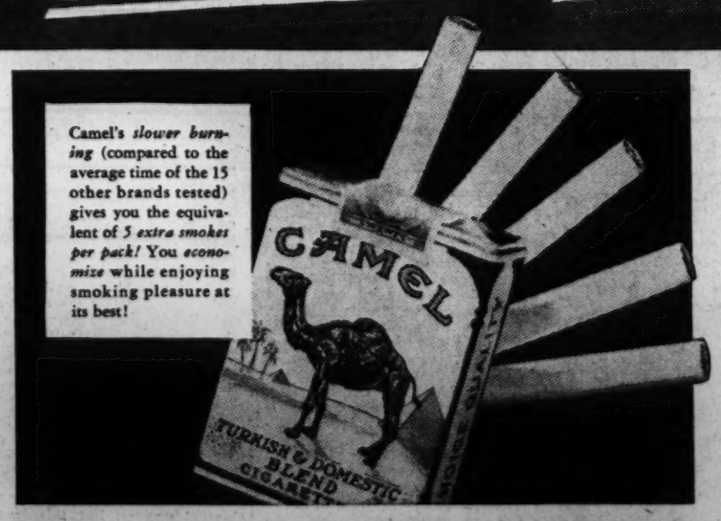

SMOKERS...everywhere...are comparing cigarettes by just watching them burn! At the right, O. J. Brown, pilot for American Airlines, shows how one leading cigarette, compared to others, burns much slower! It's a C-A-M-E-L! Camels win in this comparison by a wide margin. The reason: Costlier tobaccos... carefully blended... in a cigarette made to burn slowly, completely and smoke cool, mild!

Recently, a group of scientists made this interesting laboratory test on a bigger scale. 16 of the largest-selling cigarette brands were tested impartially. CAMELS BURNED SLOWER THAN ANY OTHER BRAND TESTED—25% SLOWER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME FOR THE OTHER BRANDS. (Camels were remarkably consistent. Cigarettes of some brands smoked twice as fast as others right from the same pack.) IN THE SAME TEST, CAMELS HELD THEIR ASH FAR LONGER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME FOR ALL OTHER BRANDS.

Camel is the cigarette of costlier tobaccos... cool, mellow, more appealing in taste, always so uniformly delightful!

"There it is again," veteran pilot O. J. Brown exclaims to a group of friends, "...the Camel is burning slower than the other cigarette. To me, that's a perfect explanation of why Camels smoke so cool and mild. It must have a lot to do with the delicate, pleasing taste of Camels, too!"

SMOKING IS BELIEVING!

Camel's slower burning (compared to the average time of the 15 other brands tested) gives you the equivalent of 5 extra smokes per pack! You economize while enjoying smoking pleasure at its best!

TRY Camels for a really thrilling smoking experience... fragrance, ripe taste, mildness! Camels give everything you want in a smoke... including ECONOMY!

Camels have more tobacco by weight than the average of the 15 other brands tested. Besides, Camels burn slower than any of those other brands. And by burning 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands, Camels give you the equivalent of 5 extra smokes per pack!

Camels give you even more for your money when you count in Camel's finer, more expensive tobaccos. Buy shrewdly! Buy Camels ... America's first choice for a luxury smoke every smoker can afford!

De Valera Calls Conscription 'Aggression'

Says All Ireland Is Sovereign; Ulster Pledges Manpower

By the United Press.

Dublin, May 2.—Prime Minister De Valera of Eire, the former Irish Free State, today described as "an act of aggression" any efforts to apply British military conscription to the six counties of Northern Ireland.

De Valera, who last week cancelled his scheduled sailing for the United States because of the "grave event" of British peace-time conscription, made is statement before a session of the Dail Eirreann, or Irish parliament.

The Eire government, he announced, has protested "in the strongest possible terms" against the conscription measures.

Holds All Ireland Sovereign

Although the conscription bill left a loophole for Northern Ireland, De Valera contended that it was, in effect, a proposal to conscript Irishmen for the British army.

He argues that Northern Ireland's six counties are a part of sovereign Ireland under the new Eire constitution, despite the fact that Britain and Ulster have refused to end the Irish partition.

The Lord Mayor of Dublin telegraphed to London a warning of "resistance, disaster and appalling consequences" if attempts were made to conscript Irishmen.

Ulster Offers Manpower

The Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, Viscount Craigavon, conferred in London with Prime Minister Chamberlain and placed the entire resources of Ulster manpower at disposal of the imperial government.

The conscription bill's text, as announced in London Monday night, said it could be extended to apply to "Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man" at the pleasure of King George VI and by an order in council.

There were suggestions that, in order to avoid trouble with De Valera's government at a time when Europe is in the grip of serious tension, Britain might not apply conscription to Northern Ireland until after actual outbreak of war or at least until there were grave threats of war.

Treasury Borrows At 0.012 Per Cent

The Secretary of the Treasury announces that the tenders for $100,000,000, or thereabouts, of 91-day Treasury bills, to be dated May 3 and to mature August 2, 1939, which were offered on April 28, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks. The total applied for was $377,474,000 and the total accepted, $100,384,000. The average price was 99.997, equivalent to 0.012 per cent.

Beck to Reject Nazi Demands Flatly on Friday, Poles Say

Resistance Seen as Best Means To Halt Aggression, Preserve Peace; Press Assails Plan for Corridor Road

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, May 2.—Foreign Minister Beck today was said to be ready to reject flatly German demands for outright annexation of Danzig and a broad German route to East Prussia in his speech to Parliament Friday.

It is argued that resistance to Reichsfuehrer Hitler's claims would be the best means of arriving at a peaceful solution. Submission, it was said, would only increase the impetus of German demands.

The press sharply reflected popular support for maintenance of all Polish rights in Danzig, and a fear that a German rail and road passage through the corridor would block Poland's outlet to the sea.

The press joined in predicting Beck would answer the German demands with a plain "No," but it was not indicated whether he would go as far as to subscribe to press demands for a Polish protectorate over Danzig.

To Refuse Sovereignty

The government has said it was ready to offer Germany all technical facilities for communicating between the two sections of the Reich, but would give up no degree of sovereignty in the corridor.

Since Parliament's next regular session will be in December, the Friday meeting may be the last until then. The cabinet, as usual, will ask Parliament to invest President Moscicki with decree powers, during the recess, over problems of national defense and finance excepting the rate of the Polish currency.

[The ministry of war issued a decree prolonging the training period of reserve officers from four to ten weeks, thereby doubling the number of officers in command of an estimated 1,300,000 troops being held on a wartime footing, the United Press said. Many of the troops are stationed along the German frontier and in the vicinity of Danzig.—Editor's note.]

Nazi Press Campaign

Berlin, May 2 (AP).—Diplomatic quarters tonight saw in the controlled German press, signs they interpreted as new Nazi attempts to put pressure on Poland.

German newspapers accused Great Britain and France of encouraging Poland to resist Germany's "suggestions" for control of Danzig and a highway across the Polish corridor.

The controlled press also accused Polish papers of telling the people "thick lies" about the former German free city.

The newspaper warnings to Poland served both to prepare German public opinion for possible conflict and to state Nazi views for transmission to Poland, for it is known that the Polish Embassy in Berlin carefully reports all German press utterances to Warsaw.

Hungarian Premier Count Teleky and his foreign minister, Count Csaky, today ended three days of discussions with Hitler, Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, Marshal Goering and Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy in Nazi Party affairs.

"All current problems that concern Germany and Hungary were discussed in a frank manner," a communique said, "and complete unanimity of viewpoints was established."

Whether this was extended to satisfying Hungarian desires for greater influence in Slovakia, or even domination of that independent state once a part of Czecho-Slovakia, was not revealed.

Political circles believed Germany could give Hungary more attractive terms regarding Slovakia, along economic lines if no other, after Poland's rejection of Hitler's offer.

guns on the headlands. Now, however, the fighting craft of the air must be considered.

The President tomorrow will confer with reorganization experts on the next phase of his recommendations for Government consolidation and co-ordination. He made it clear, however, that the next plan, dealing either with intra-departmental or inter-departmental matters, would not be submitted to Congress until late this week or early next.

He was not prepared, he said, to comment on the foreign situation.

Questioned about taxes, he said he presumed the minimum Congress would do would be to extend by resolution the nuisance taxes which expire in June. So far as the corporate taxes, which expire in December, are concerned the President said he had received no recent reports.

To Visit West's Fair

As soon as Congress adjourns, the President said he was going to San Francisco to visit the Golden Gate Exposition. He smilingly evaded any answer to questions as to whether he planned a cruise thereafter either to Hawaii, Alaska or South Pacific waters.

Some time later in the summer, Mr. Roosevelt said he intended to return to the New York World's Fair and spend a morning touring the exhibits.

He expects to spend the Memorial Day week-end in Hyde Park.

voyage to the field and at conclusion of the day's inspection. It was understood he repeated earlier warnings that America won't be able to "catch up" with Germany in aviation in the next five years unless she immediately commences expansion in research.

Pledged to secrecy, the 400 visitors were afforded an intimate view of latest aviation designs and improvements. It was the fourteenth annual inspection of the field, conducted by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, of which Lindbergh is an active member.

4 Major Improvements

The curtain was lifted on four major improvements:

A new "wonder wing" which might increase plane speed to 500 m. p. h. providing free air flow without "turbulence lag;" a new tail assembly preventing tailspins; a fuel injection system, using non-inflammable fuel and eliminating carburetors from planes, and "hydrofoils," a form of landing gear for seaplanes.

Two large new wind tunnels, for aerial experimentation, were dedicated during the day's ceremonies.

Companions of Lindbergh on the overnight journey said he confirmed rumors he would remain in America indefinitely, and said he told them he was "having uniforms made," and was prepared to answer any service call by the Army beyond his present survey assignment.

He was said also to have pledged his appearance before Congressional committees in favor of the Sunnyvale project, which was turned down by Congress last week. The proposed station will likely be included in the forthcoming third deficiency bill.

Hitler Off Wagon! Takes 1% Beer

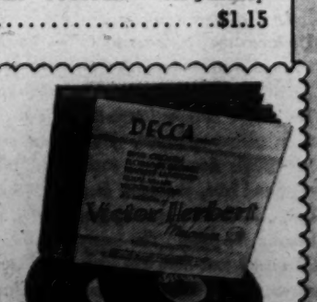

Berlin, May 2 (AP).—Adolf Hitler, whose abstention from tobacco and alcoholic drinks is well known, now occasionally enjoys a glass of beer specially brewed for him with an alcoholic content of only 1 per cent.

A person close to the Fuehrer said his beer comes from a Bavarian brewery which volunteered to make the special drink.

Frank Walsh Dies; Noted Labor Lawyer

Stricken in N. Y.; Headed Industrial Relations Group

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 2.—Frank P. Walsh, 74, noted labor lawyer who fought for many years for the release of Tom Mooney, collapsed in the street outside the Supreme Court building in Foley square today and died of a heart attack.

Walsh had been chairman of the New York State Power Authority for the last eight years.

Jerome Walsh, Kansas City lawyer and one of his seven children, said burial would be in Mount St. Mary's Cemetery, Kansas City.

Two Sons Survive

Walsh is survived by two other sons, John, who has a Government position in California, and James, who is connected with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington; by his widow, Mrs. Katherine Walsh, and four daughters, Miss Virginia Walsh and Mrs. Cecelia Bradley live in Kansas City. The others, Sister Frances Marie and Sister Katherine Louise, are nuns of the Order of Loretto at the Foot of the Cross in St. Louis.

Walsh was chairman of the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations from 1913 to 1915, and in 1918 was joint chairman with former President Taft of the War Labor Conference Board.

Roosevelt Appointee

Franklin D. Roosevelt, as Governor, appointed him a member of the New York commission on revision of public utility laws, and in May, 1931, he was named chairman of the Power Authority. The Society of Medical Jurisprudence elected him its president in 1933.

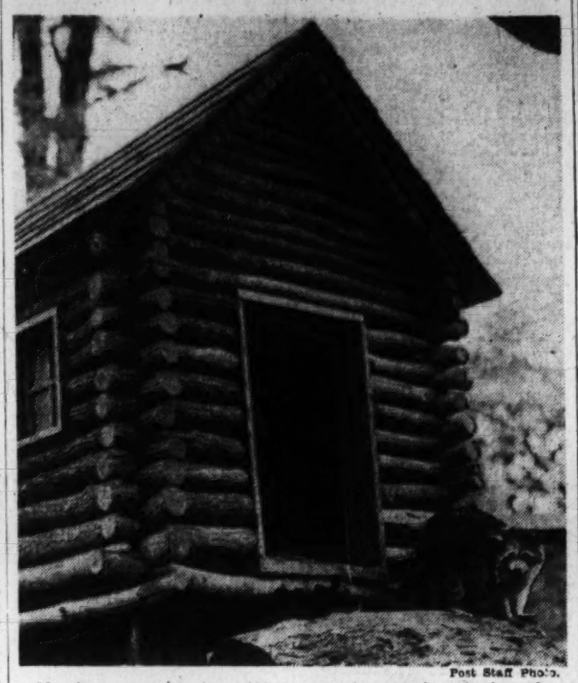

Among Walsh's clubs were the Racquet and Cosmos in Washington.

Walsh was head of the Catholic committee for the ratification of the child labor amendment to the Constitution, and was chairman of the executive committee of the Progressive National Committee in 1936.

He was named provisional president of the National Lawyers Guild in January, 1937, after he and others had fought what he called "the reactionary minority" in the legal profession, and had helped found the guild. He resigned from the guild during a recent controversy over a reported "red" element within its ranks.

The body left New York last night for Kansas City, where funeral services will be held Friday morning. A radio memorial service will be broadcast from New York tonight, with Mayor LaGuardia presiding.

Zoo's Prairie Dogs and 'Coons Cavort in Modernized Homes

Living Beechnut Tree, Log Cabin Instant Hit With Beasts; Rodents Lose No Time in Digging Burrows

Two of three rings of the Zoo's newest circus opened yesterday as a squad of raccoons and prairie dogs evacuated old-fashioned cages to take over stream-lined outdoor enclosures.

The prairie dogs, even more skittish than usual, raced around the 150-foot circumference of their new home for several hours after the transfer, tentatively sniffed the mound of fresh gravel in the middle of the enclosure and by dusk were diligently burrowing.

Keepers had no fear the sand-colored rodents would dig their way out of the pen, pointing out that a sturdy fence has been sunk 10 feet below the ground and anchored in concrete.

Built around a living beech tree and imported oak trunks and branches, the raccoon arena was an instant success with its furry tenants.

The more conservative members of the raccoon colony spent the day peering out from their miniature log cabin, equipped with two doors and imitation windows and furnished with hay.

Within squealing distance of the raccoon settlement, a third enclosure has been prepared to accommodate more small mammals, possibly acquisitions from Dr. William Mann's present South American expedition.

Your Figure Madame!

Claudette Colbert Gives Some Tips On Keeping Figure

By Ida Jean Kain.

FEMININE CURIOSITY invariably is piqued by the secrets of famous beauties but all too often their tips on pulchritude display more imagination than common sense. That is not true of Claudette Colbert, who prefaces all her advice with the forthright declaration that "after the golden twenties what a woman has in her face counts far more than what she has on it!"

Not that Miss Colbert belittles what woman puts on her face. As she says, "Make-up should be studied and mastered, but how to apply eyebrow pencil, rouge and lipstick are kindergarten subjects when it comes to making a beautiful impression."

Her first suggestion to the women who long to be more attractive is they read about the ones who were noted for their beauty or charm—or both . . . study the ones who conquered the world . . . delve into their early childhood for their methods of educating themselves.

Health Is Primary

That is all sound advice and worthy of future consideration, but at the moment it merely whets the interest in Claudette Colbert, who is noted for her beauty and charm. She herself goes on the theory that health is the primary fundamental of beauty and there is no denying that radiant health exacts its price in self-discipline.

For example, Miss Colbert regards plenty of sleep as an absolute necessity and she gets it, but she thinks that the girl who does not average at least six hours' sleep a night is missing her chance at beauty. There's food for thought when you are having too much fun to break away from the party and go home to bed!

Any woman knows she can't be very attractive without a good complexion, and it's Miss Colbert's conviction that any woman can have a good one. Her rules are: The adequate sleep already mentioned, sufficient exercise to keep the circulation up and doing, the right diet and the habit of keeping the skin immaculately clean.

Tips on Weight Control

The foods that are best for your complexion are the same ones that help you to control your weight—plenty of fruits, vegetables and milk. Another Colbert tip on weight control is to make it a rule to eat slowly so that it takes less to satisfy your hunger.

Her beautifully streamlined figure is the by-product of a genuine enthusiasm for outdoor sports. She plays tennis, rides horseback, and swims—all regularly. "I'll work like the dickens to keep my weigh right," she told me frankly, "but I simply cannot go those ups-and-downs they recommend at the gymnasiums!" That's an idea for those of you who loathe calisthenics! Get your exercise in outdoor play and have fun doing it.

Miss Colbert was recently cited by the National Speech Teachers' Association as having the most beautiful voice of the screen stars and I asked for suggestions as to how the average woman might go about acquiring a more musical speaking voice. Here they are: Keep your voice at a low pitch, listen intently to your own speech, never slur over phrases, and never raise your voice in a shriek above noise—that, more than anything else develops an ugly nasal timbre.

There's the sum and substance of what Claudette Colbert considers important to beauty. The general reaction probably will be "What's good for Claudette Colbert is good for the rest of us!"

SPRING HAS been fooling around for weeks—rain, snow flurries, cold winds and all the variegated weather that befuddles wonderful. Or as Hall says, "Try and get it."

ALICE HUGHES

Walk with me on the avenues of a sunny, soothing Sunday and you'll see all the signs. Young men and maidens walk hand-in-hand through the hard-paved caverns. Restaurants suddenly put out their tables, chairs and beach umbrellas—declaring the sidewalk-cafe season opens, which means that you get soot and gas fumes free with every lamb chop. Not on the check—but there, none the less.

Central Park's hundreds of cherry trees have suddenly decided to blossom—just as pretty, but not as dramatic, as the famous Washington brand. "Swifty," one of old Hall's favorite barmen, reports that frozen daiqueris and Tom Collinses are already in demand, a certain sign of spring in our league. Little girls quickly shed their winter coats and go in suits—blushingly exposing their kneecaps in the 17-inch skirts decreed this year, by some, especially those young ladies with pretty legs. Yes, gosh darn it, spring finally hit New York. And of course, the fair has steamed up local life considerably.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—We're not a lot of boors, bounders and bums, whatever you may think. For instance, we just tested 100,000 of our kids, and picked the most polite girl and boy. That's a right smart lot of kids. The young lady is a fine old Swede named Patricia Gilligan, aged 10, while the gentleman is Mr. Matthew Logan. Patsy says she learned her manners from her parents and her teachers. Mr. Logan, in spite of this curse that has been laid upon him, is a bellicose gentleman who "likes a good fight," and says he will bam anybody on the nose who giggles just because he knows his manners.

That's my boy! . . . Some correspondents have wondered why there is no more mention here of six-year-old Martin, who lived in and about this house for three years, and made mighty fine copy. The truth is that his daddy married again, got a regular job and established a new home, and quite understandably wanted Martin with him. Since he was not legally adopted, he is now with his pa and step-mamma, and seems to be thriving on the beaches near Coney Island. He led a strange, dizzy life here, anyway, and maybe it is all for the best. Thus I now have but one child, old Gaffer Hall, far gone in senility, but still me ever-loving spouse. He's enough handful.

SHEILA BARRETT, our pal and acid mimic of dizzy New York women, has had a tough time with the long gash in one leg that took 23 stitches to sew up. There was infection, and all that, but Trouper Barrett kept working until her doctor made her go to the hospital. Now she improves fast, and soon will open at the fancy Persian Room of the dear old Plaza Hotel. She told me a cute gag over the phone a few nights ago. Cleans as six whistles—sorry space forbids my telling you. Parlor stuff, and very funny.

Mary Anita Loos, niece of the famed scenarist and pet girl about town in the past few months, has now put up her hair like a big lady, and tells chums her idea of a genuine dream man is the Count Jerzy Potocki, Ambassado from Poland. They went some places together. Mary Anita draws bead on count!

YESTERDAY was a big day for local Crochet Girls. They ran off a regular Kentucky Derby of the Needles at our town hall, speed—not perfection, being the aim. Identical patterns, and so on. When the Speed Queen is named, I'll tell you.

Matching Compact

Match your compact to your costume, be it evening or daytime. There are vanities with all-over flower print design for the floral prints. Tiny conventionalized flowers in soft and lyrical hues are scattered on a gleaming white enamel background. These small, flat compacts fit nicely into evening bags and they harmonize with the new pastel colors.

All-Glass Dining Room

There will be an all-glass dining room suite on display at New York World's Fair. The table will have a round heavy plate glass top on a massive glass column pedestal. The chairs will be entirely of glass with upholstered seats of a very elegant fabric.

Woman Scientist Makes Important Studies of Tissues

Austin, Texas.—Secret of the "living water pump" within the body tissues of an animal or in the root of a plant may be discovered by Miss Hilda Rosene, University of Texas assistant professor of zoology, as she pushes to completion her investigations in the fundamental nature of the cell.

Miss Rosene has just been awarded a $2,500 fellowship by the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation to continue her research in general physiology, already nationally known as the result of findings she has annually been invited to present before the Association for the Advancement of Science for a number of years.

Although it has not been definitely decided when she will start work under the one-year fellowship, she tentatively plans to spend at least several months out of the 12 abroad conferring with eminent European scientists in the field.

Correction

The Washington Post in its Tuesday editions erroneously attributed to Associate Supreme Court Justice Harlan Fiske Stone indorsement of the Administration's program to curb monopolies in an address Monday night before a banquet of the Georgetown University Law School students and faculty.

What Justice Stone actually said was that he agreed with "most, if not all," of a previous speech by Wendell Berge, special assistant to the Attorney General, outlining to the students some of the problems that challenge attention today in the field of public law.

By way of citing a concrete example, Berge had alluded to the existence of many unsolved problems involving the relationship of Government and business, and had said that lawyers of the future would be called upon to contribute solutions.

Berge referred to some phases of antitrust questions as illustrations, but he did not suggest any program for the future, nor did he discuss the Administration's present policies. For this reason, The Post statement that Justice Stone announced approval of such policies was erroneous, inasmuch as Justice Stone merely stated he agreed with most of what Berge had said.

Polynesian Hei-Tiki

PRONOUNCED "HAY-TEE-KEE"

Exclusive With The Palais Royal In Washington

Up from the langorous South Sea Islands comes a fresh inspiration for America's summer clothes . . . rich with the mood of palms, of sun-drenched sands, of the jovial, carefree natives of Polynesia. Artist Truman Bailey spent months exploring the tiny islands that stretch from Hawaii to Tahiti. He bought beautiful tapa-cloths, mats, native war clubs. He reproduced tattoo marks straight from native epidermis. He photographed fish and coral reefs, gathered colorful snails, collected lush tropic flowers . . . copied faithfully sun-brilliant pastels of sea and sky, thrilling tones of sand and lava, exuberant sorcery of South Sea flora. The result is Polynesian Hei-Tiki (Hay-tee-kee) . . . dresses, evening gowns, hats, jewelry, sports costumes, accessories, even fabrics you can buy by the yard. The colors are true: The green of Luma (Loo-mah) reefs, the tan of Kona (Ko-nah) lava-dust, the blue of Mokapu (Mo-kah-poo), the red of hibiscus. The designs are authentic . . . taken from native shells, breadfruit, canoes, tapa-cloth and amulets. Hei-Tiki is surprisingly low priced, and exclusive with The Palais Royal in Washington.

Anthrax May Be Traced to Shaving Brush

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

During the World War, when I was an army physician, I saw my first cases of anthrax. They consisted of an ulcer on the chin and were traced to the use of shaving brushes which were infected with the disease.

I noted with interest, therefore, that an epidemic of anthrax about a month ago in North Dakota was traced to a lot of infected imported shaving brushes.

Anthrax is an extremely dangerous disease, occurring in a number of domestic animals. It is commonly called "wool sorter's disease." This name was attached to it because it was formerly very common in sheep and a wool sorter inhaling the dust from the wool would acquire the pneumonic form of the infection.

Used By Pasteur

Anthrax was the subject of the famous experiment performed by Pasteur when he proved that inoculations with a vaccine would prevent an infectious disease in an infected herd of sheep.

Today the disease is much more prevalent in Asia than in America. Its ravages among herds of cattle in Russian Siberia are not equaled by any other animal plague. In Great Britain cases of anthrax occur frequently in leather workers due to the handling of Chinese or East Indian goods.

There are two forms of the disease in man. One, the external form, is similar to my cases in the army. The germ enters a small cut in the skin. After the incubation period of one to three days, there forms a small red pimple which eventually ulcerates on top. It has an unforgettable purplish, crater-shaped appearance. It is technically called the "malignant pustule."

The germ quickly gets away from the local site of inoculation, enters the blood stream and goes everywhere in the body. A great many of my cases had meningtis due to the entrance of the anthrax bacillus into the meningeal covering of the brain and spinal cord. These cases are always fatal and in any epidemic about 25 per cent of the patients die.

Like Pneumonia

The generalized form, wool sorter's disease or pulmonary anthrax, shows no external lesion. The patient, who is usually engaged in handling wood, hides or hair of some kind, is seized with a chill, becomes faint and prostrated, has pains in the back of the legs and a fever of 102 to 104. There is pain in the chest and cough, and examination by instruments of precision shows that pneumonia has set in.

Must Young Women and Young Men Drink, Smoke And Make Love in Order to Be Popular?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We are two girls who have been discussing with our friends the social customs of drinking, smoking and necking. We say that you can enjoy yourself at a gathering without doing the above; while others say it is impossible. We don't want you to think that we are old-fashioned, because we do go out and have grand times. But we want to prove that modern young couples do not have to drink and neck in order to have a good time.

In discussing this with a friend, he says that a fellow will not date a girl more than twice if she does not indulge in the above. He also remarked that she must do this to be called sociable and a good sport. Our question is this: Can a group of fellows and girls between the ages of 21 and 27 enjoy themselves at a gathering without drinking, smoking and necking? We would like to have your opinions, as well as those of your readers, on the subject. Sincerely, TWO GIRLS.

DEAR GIRLS: If you would "prove that modern young couples do not have to drink, smoke and neck in order to have good times," do it by performance and not by polemics. The proof of the pudding is in the tasting, not in the recipe. The person who is profoundly convinced of the rightness of a given principle of behavior interprets and exemplifies its truth or worth in action, rather than in vociferous debate and defensive argument.

For my part, it is utterly unthinkable that any human being should descend to the simian level of engaging in love-play before the eyes of the world; or, as you and your friends would probably say, "necking in public (or at a party"). I do not think that alcoholic stimulants (or depressants, as the case may be) are essential to any normally healthy person's joie de vivre; and I think that smoking is, at best, a nervous, futile gesture to which too many of us have become unfortunately addicted, without its adding one jot, tittle or iota to our rational sense of well being.

It is my opinion that your friend who says, "A fellow will not date a girl more than twice if she does not indulge" in smoking, drinking and unabashed public love-making is a social ignoramus, and vulgarly presumptive in offering his moronic creed as gospel. Well-bred men of adequate intellectual endowment and civilized social training are more pleased than displeased with the girl who can hold up her end of things socially, without a cigarette in one hand and a cocktail glass in the other; and they would be more revolted than attracted by the girl who lolled casually in the arms of first one man and then another.

As for your concluding question—(can a group of fellows and girls between the ages of 21 and 27 enjoy themselves at a gathering without drinking, smoking and necking?)—I should say that they could, and do, quite easily, if and when they belong to that class of society which is versed in the social arts of conversation, dancing and games. To suppose that all must smoke and drink (and "neck") because some do, is to assume that the company, as a whole, has not evolved beyond the ape level of spontaneous mimicry, and hence must follow the example of certain herd-leaders.

Frustrated and Depressed

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some time ago I read in your column about a woman who was married to a man who did not fulfill his marital obligations. I was surprised that it was so like my own case. I have hesitated to write, or even to disclose to a doctor, the facts of my marriage. However, I have suggested that my husband and I see a doctor together, but this he refuses to do. Although I am not a Catholic, I do not approve of divorce, unless absolutely necessary.

I have tried to preserve our marriage, hoping against hope that it could be possible with certain adjustments. I am very despondent about everything now, after five years of dissatisfaction. I would like to ask if you think my mental depression is due to this type of marriage. SUE.

Alternative to Divorce

DEAR SUE: No doubt your mental depression is the direct outgrowth of emotional frustration, which in turn may be attributed to your husband's psychic impotence—a condition which he refuses, in obstinate cowardice, either to admit or to seek to remedy. Without his full co-operation there is virtually nothing you can do to improve the situation. On the other hand, neither can one of your temperament ever make a satisfactory adjustment to such a situation. To tolerate it, either in meekness or smoldering resentment, is to place your nervous and emotional health in progressive jeopardy.

For your own sake, I advise you to see a physician—whether your husband sees one or not. Give him the full facts of your marriage, and let him tell you what the situation is doing to you. If and when such information is conveyed to your husband, he may obtain a better appreciation of his responsibilities, and be inspired to see a doctor forthwith, as the only means of warding off a divorce. Dash of Style Revolutionizes Mashed Potatoes

The Post Food Editor.

A DASH of style in mashed potatoes is not difficult to achieve. Mashed potatoes may be served in many variations—au gratin, chantilly with chives, potato fluff, beehives, beefsteak special, celery fingers, broiled patties, parsley stuffed and mushroom stuffed.

BEEFSTEAK SPECIAL

To 3 cups seasoned mashed potatoes, add ¼ cup chopped, well-dried watercress. Pile on halved or thickly sliced tomatoes and brush with melted butter. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees, for 20 minutes.

CELERY FINGERS

To 2 cups seasoned mashed potatoes (rather dry) add 1 tablespoon celery seed. Shape into strips 1 inch wide and 3 inches long. Dip into slightly beaten egg, then roll in crushed cereal flakes. Fry in deep hot fat, 390 degrees, until brown. Drain well.

BEEHIVES

Shape seasoned dry mashed potatoes into mounds bee-hive fashion. Place on baking pan. Slice Bermuda onion into rings and saute in butter 2 or 3 minutes, and place 3 or 4 rings over each mound. Brush with melted butter, bake in hot oven, 400 degrees, for 15 minutes.

Versatile 'Best Dressed Star'

The moonlight and honeysuckle blonde shown here, proves that she takes to dance gowns and clean-cut riding togs with equal ease. And why not? The model is Bette Davis, screen Academy Award winner, who has recently been crowned best dressed among the film satellites. Wardrobe variety is her spice of life as these photographs attest. Her evening gown is of filmy net, an over-skirt of shimmering satin serving as apron. Her fastidiously gotten-up riding togs are as well assembled as her evening accessories of beaded skull cap and ostrich fan. Accessories are a passion with Bette Davis and she usually selects them before she does her basic clothes

Star Chooses Wardrobe Backwards

Bette Davis Buys Accessories Before Dresses

Costume Jewelry Is Emphasized In Her Ensembles

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

BETTE DAVIS, screen actress, is such a definite personality that she does most things backwards—and gets away with it. Orry Kelly, fashion designer for Miss Davis' celluloid wardrobes, says that this two-time Academy Award winner even selects her wardrobe backwards. Her basic frocks and coats are the last things she chooses when she assembles her season's apparel.

wards. Her basic frocks and coats are the last things she chooses when she assembles her season's apparel.

Accessories so fascinate the blue-eyed actress that they are invariably purchased before shoes and evening gowns. Yet this must pay dividends—for Bette has recently been nominated one of the 12 best-dressed women in America by a group of outstanding designers.

Likes Gay Jewelry

Perhaps this passion for amusing accessories and gay jewelry is responsible for Miss Davis' reputation for "dress with a sense of humor." This desire to get away from the stodgy and commonplace is seen to advantage in the whimsical accessories worn in her screen characterizations and in her private wardrobe.

Bette Davis gives her fashion enthusiasms as: "Large, pouchy bags and matching doeskin gloves in delicious spring pastels; unique costume jewelry designed to give a lift to casual slacks outfits; handsome jeweled clips and bracelets for wear with spring furs (Miss Davis' costume jewelry collection, incidentally, is unsurpassed by any other film luminary); dozens of novel and colorful belts and scarves; lovely fragile handkerchiefs and original lingerie creations; debonair sports hats—or none at all; dress shoes that just miss being exotic, or mad play shoes with soles two inches thick; pleats stripes polka dots, for anything and everything."

Launches Styles

These enthusiasms can be taken pretty seriously by local fashion fans, for Bette has adored the above-mentioned "best sellers" when some of them were considered freakish by conservatives. Her screen and private wardrobe has long served as a national style barometer, for she is credited with launching more styles than Helen did ships.

A few of her selections which became fashion hits over night were her Jezebel hoopskirts which in a trice blocked first night lobbies and started up a new school of waltzes and polkas; her Gibson girl silhouette worn in another film, which influence is seen everywhere now in modified shirtwaist and skirt versions. Prior to this trend, Bette launched the culotte, the coronet hairdress and dinner pajamas fashioned with skirt fullness. They are now a Hollywood vogue. Her latest offering to style's cycle is the baby bob, even though she was the film star to put the upswept coiffure on the map.

In view of these events, watch for the following predictions made by Bette: "A slim dark dress with concentrated fullness that gives the impression of a bustle and should be topped off with a little flower garden of a hat swathed in yards of veiling; a small flowered print frock accompanied by a hip bone or Eton length jacket carried out in monotone; with these milk white accessories, and always an important piece of costume jewelry."

EPISODE I

"Haven't you anything in a smaller hat?"

"Sorry, Modom, but the fall hats haven't begun to come in yet."

"But I don't want a fall hat—"

"Oh, but the spring hats are all gone."

"Then how about a small summer hat?"

"The summer hats are mostly large—what we have."

"Very well then, let me see a broad-brimmed hat of some kind—maybe in black and white."

"All right—only the black and white hats have been pretty much picked over.

"Oh well then, I'll look at some more burnt straws."

Sorry, but I haven't any more shapes in the burnt. You see they always come in early too—

"I see. Then I suppose I'll have to take white. What other white ones do you have?"

"I believe this is about all. Now that mushroom you first tried on is perfectly stunning——"

"Well, I suppose you'll have others coming in right along—"

Oh No! Not any more SUMMER hats! Everything's winter now."

"Winter!"

"Yes, they're all making up their fall stocks now. I tell you you'll be making a mistake if you don't take that big white mushroom—"

"Thanks. I'll wait for the fall hats—and say give me a ring, will you, when the first mink turbans come in?"

EPISODE II

"Havn't you any other silk prints with jackets?"

"No—I don't believe so, in the color you want. You see this is a little late—"

"Yes, but I haven't taken off my spring coat yet—"

"I know, but the silk prints come in for spring."

"But isn't this spring?"

"Everything's summer now. Don't you like any of these little cottons?"

"I don't know. Wait! I've got a picture here I cut out of a magazine. Have you anything like that?"

"No, not now. We did have some lovely little models like that in our cruise clothes last winter. You see Modom, it really pays to buy your cottons in January. However, we've some other darling little things—"

"No, thank you. I'll just wait now until Christmas."

EPISODE III

"Could I look at black kid sandals, please?"

"Did you say BLACK, Modom?"

"Yes."

"Well, I'll show you what we have . . . you see the spring models are about all gone."

"Never mind then. How about some whites?"

"Well, we still have some very nice white shoes."

"Still, I hate to buy my white shoes until I see what my summer dresses are going to be like."

"Well, you'd better not wait Modom. The whites are going like hot cakes."

"But, of course, you'll be getting others in?"

"Well, I don't know—this late. The black suedes will be the next thing. You see we're going into winter now—"

"All right then, I believe I'll just look at fur-lined galoshes."

Minister Procope's Reception Following The Recital at Constitution Hall Marks His First Big-Scale Entertainment Here

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

FINLAND FLOURISHED socially and musically last night when Capital notables in droves turned out for the concert of the Finlandia Male Chorus at Constitution Hall and later attended the reception given at the Mayflower by Finland's Minister, Hjalmar Procope.

HOPE R. MILLER

The party marked the first, big-scale entertainment the popular envoy has given in Washington and the company was as brilliantly studded with social lights as any I have seen this season. The Supreme Court, the Cabinet, Congress and top-drawer residential society were on hand by hundreds to meet Heikki Klemmetti, director of the chorus, the three associate conductors and the 70-odd singers who have the concert.

Finland's colors, blue and white, were carried out in the decorative motif that featured delphinium and white snapdragons arranged in bouquets up and down the buffet table that lined two sides of the East Room and extended down the center into the Presidential dining room. A bar at one side and still another buffet laden like the others with pheasant, turkey, and no end of molded delicacies were other centers of interest.

Minister Procope received his long line of guests at the doorway of the East Room, apparently remembering the name of each person who stepped forth to be greeted. Meanwhile, members of the chorus (you knew who they were by the gold crest pin worn on the left lapel) mingled in the crowd, receiving congratulations on all sides. They, on the other hand, were returning compliments right and left, talking about how appreciative the audience was and how much they liked America in general and Washington in particular.

Many Compliments On Concert

During the earlier part of the reception, the crowd eddied and flowed through the two huge rooms that served as its setting. Small groups gathered to talk about the concert, to go into ecstasies about it rather, and to pronounce it one of the finest musical treats Washington has heard in many a moon. ("The Toscanini concert wasn't a whit better," someone said; while Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, one of the Capital's most accomplished musicians, declared it the "best ensemble singing" she had ever heard in Washington.)

As to who was there—if you want the answer, get out your diplomatic blue book, the social Register, the Congressional Directory and a list of directors of the Washington Self-Help Exchange, which sponsored the concert, and you'll have a good idea of the crowd. All these groups and others were well represented in the throng that arrived shortly after the concert closed and stayed until the brief reception program was finished. Mme. Aune Varmavuori-Poijarvi and Mme. Saga Krogius sang and Mme. Elli Tompuri gave a couple of recitations, each taking up only a few minutes.

Supreme Court Is Well Represented

Notables who turned out to either the concert or the reception, or both, included Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wearing a black net dress stiffened to flare at the hem. She had with her at the concert Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed and Mrs. Hugo Black.

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock arrived at the reception with the former's daughter, Miss Fontaine Fahnestock, who recently came to Washington for a visit. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling were glimpsed in the reception crowd, she wearing a handsome frock of dark red satin with insets of turquoise satin in the train. One of the Prettiest frocks at the party was worn by Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck—it was a gray crepe model, made on fitted lines with a train, and set off with crimson accents. Senora de Espil, in black, and Countess Roberti, in brown, were others who had on fashion-high gowns.

Mrs. George T. Marye arrived at the reception with Mrs. Sidney Cloman, and coming in about the same time was Marvin Breckinridge. Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor were seen making their way through the crowd at the party, as were Mrs. Pendleton Mayo, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Miss Helen Davis, Ralph Hill, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Culbertson, Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Gruening and Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, and Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3d.

Still others seen at the concert and reception were Mme. Wankowicz, who will entertain next Tuesday at a cocktail party for three prominent Polish women who will be here all next week; the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mrs. Wennerberg, who will leave today for New York; Mr. and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle; the Ambassador of Peru, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, John Walsh and his daughter, Mrs. A. C. Long; Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Representative and Mrs. Bruce Barton and Miss Rebecca Wellington.

Hurjas With Finnish Envoy

At the concert many a glance was cast at the box occupied by the Finnish Minister. He had with him Mrs. Emil Hurja, co-chairman, with Robert Woods Bliss, of the concert committee; Mr. Hurja and Dr. von Numers of the legation staff. Mrs. Hurja wore a white frock with a little jacket and a corsage of white roses and baby's breath.

The singers opened the program with a rendition of the "Star-Spangled Banner," sung without a trace of accent. The rest of the numbers were Finnish, and included the works of Sibelius and Armas Jarnefelt, the latter a relative of Eero Jarnefelt, Dr. Procope's very popular predecessor here. At the intermission the chorus was presented with an enormous wreath of flowers.

Mrs. Roosevelt's box at the concert was occupied by the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring, the latter lovely in a powder blue gown, with a flaring skirt and a little red diamond-shaped insert at the neckline. Over this she wore a tightly fitted, flaring bottle green wrap with a tiny collar of ermine tails. With the Woodrings were the Secretary's sister, Mrs. John J. Carroll, of Colorado Springs, who is visiting them; her daughter, Miss Faye Crooks, and the Secretary's niece and her husband, Dr. and Mrs. Perry Martinson.

Senator Theodore Green occupied an aisle seat with Capt. Arthur Lagace. Another from "up on the Hill" was Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, wearing a Burgundy colored velvet wrap over her white frock.

Morgenthaus Seen at Concert and Party

Striking in royal purple was Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, who was accompanied by her husband, Secretary of the Treasury. Over her gown she wore a long flowing cape of the same shade and material.

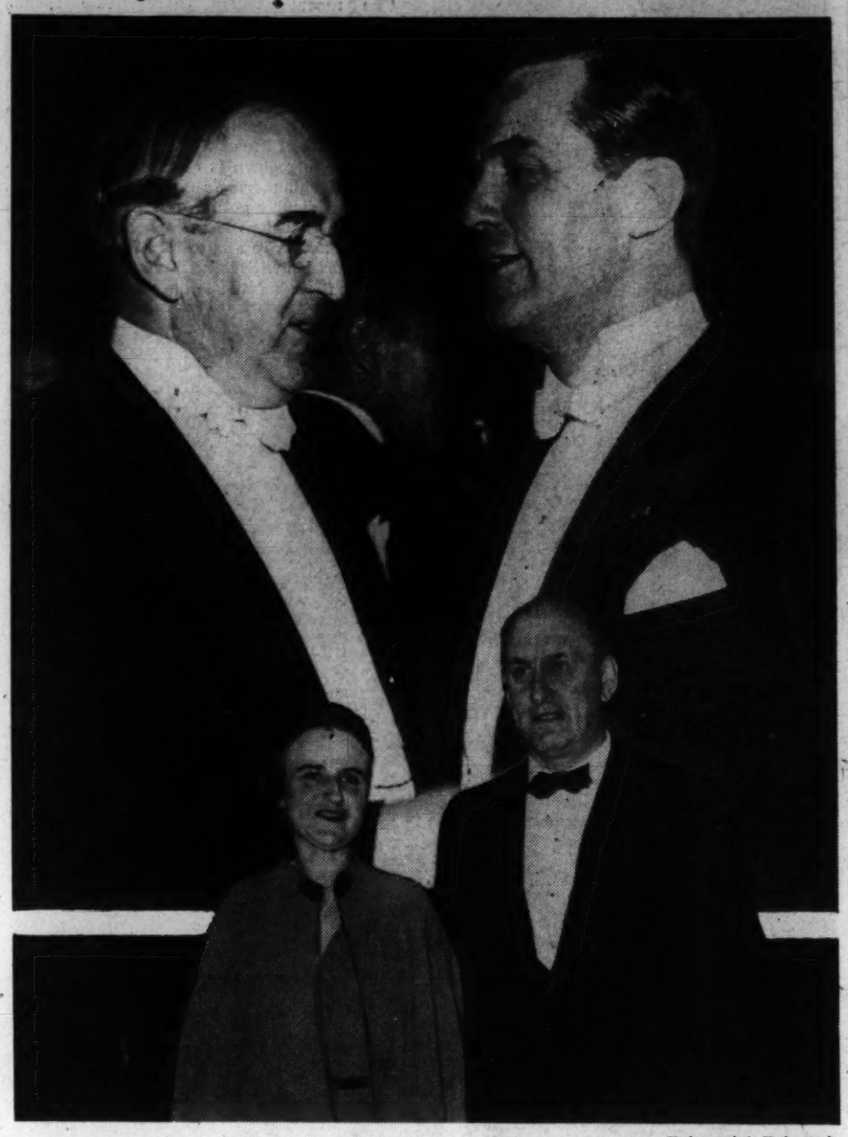

Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat surveyed the scene from a box near the stage. Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, in severe black, paused on her way down the aisle to chat with a friend. Another charming member of the Diplomatic Corps, Countess Roberti, wore a plum colored evening gown, simply cut.

Exchanging notes during the intermission were Mrs. Stanley Woodward and Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, both in black. Mrs. Jouett Shouse furnished a splash of color with her gown, which had a piqued bodice and full skirt. Mrs. Harold H. Sims, wife of the Attache of the British Embassy, in gray net and ermine, was accompanied by Mrs. Thomas Cowell.

Mrs. James M. Helm wore a polka dot dress in bright shades. Mrs. Nelson Perin topped off her black gown with a sable wrap. She was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Anne Perin, who was in black.

Mrs. Charles C. Glover, who was accompanied by Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, wore an ermine wrap over her gray frock. Others seen were Mrs. Henry C. Rowland and her daughter, Miss Diana Rowland, who occupied a box; Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, with a brocaded jacket of brilliant colors, over her black gown, squired by a beau; three of the Tuckerman sisters—Mrs. Benjamin Byas, Miss Laura Tuckerman and Miss Alice Tuckerman, Miss Anne Randolph, the Charge d'Affaires of the Germany Embassy and Frau Thomsen, Miss Hazel Edgar, Baroness von Below, and Robert Lincoln O'Brien.

Society turned out full force in its best bib and tucker last evening to hear the Finlandia Male Chorus at Constitution Hall. Mrs. Henry Downe Is House Guest In Georgetown

Mrs. Henry S. Downe, of Paris, who had originally planned to stay at the Anchorage while in Washington, has instead moved over to the Georgetown home of her close friend, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt. She will be there for about ten days.

Later Mrs. Downe plans to visit the World's Fair. She has already made several trips out to the grounds in Flushing, before the opening, and says "it's wonderful." As she is still observing mourning for her late husband, Mrs. Downe does not expect to attend any large functions while here, but instead looks forward to quiet visits with her many friends in Washington.

Coffees Hosts At Dinner Party

Representative and Mrs. Harry B. Coffee were hosts at a dinner party in the blue room at the Shoreham last evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher J. Abbott, of Hyannis, Nebr., who have returned to town after a visit earlier in the year.

Mr. and Mrs. Abbott expect to remain several days. The company at dinner numbered 18 and included four out-of-town guests, Mr. and Mrs. R. Earl Campbell, of Lincoln, Nebr., and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Reed, of Chicago.

Col. and Mrs. Joseph Cecil have cards out for a dance on Saturday evening, May 20, at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of their cousin, Miss Elizabeth Cecil Cary, of Richmond, who will spend that week-end with them. Miss Cary made her debut in Richmond three years ago.

Col. and Mrs. Cecil will give a dinner before the dance.

Service Set Has 2 Parties

Two parties at the Army-Navy Country Club held the service set spotlight yesterday afternoon. The first, a reception from 5 to 7, given by Capt. and Mrs. Benjamin S. Mesick and Capt. and Mrs. Paul M. Seleen as joint hosts, took place in the right lounge of the club.

During the same hours, in the main dining room at the left, another gay party was in progress, with Commander Herbert J. Brassie, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Grassie, as host and hostess. Both events were so popular that many of the guests lingered long after the official going-home time.

Mrs. Mesick was gowned in black crepe, floor length, with a short bolero of white faille. Mrs. Seleen wore a tea gown with a flaring skirt of tiny black and white checks, and a cyclamen red blouse.

Noted among the guests were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. J. O. Mauborgne, Col. and Mrs. John W. Joyes, Maj. and Mrs. Willis E. Teale, Col. and Mrs. Francis H. Miles, Col. and Mrs. J. G. Booton, Col. Harry R. Hauseman and their house guest, Mrs. N. H. Cobbs, of West Point; Capt. and Mrs. A. S. Rice and Maj. and Mrs. W. H. Soderholm.

Commander and Mrs. Grassie were entertaining for a number of Navy officers and their wives, who will leave soon for new stations. Mrs. Grassie was gowned in black with a white bolero.

Emlen Davies Sails to America Today for Her Marriage May 27

PRACTICAL EMLEN DAVIES and her fiance, Robert Grosjean, had made plans to be married abroad instead of at Oakington in case war broke out during Emlen's visit in Brussels with her father, Ambassador Joseph E. Davies. But now it looks as though that wouldn't be necessary, and Emlen sails today on the Queen Mary to return to this country for the May 27 ceremony. She is bringing back a beautiful lace wedding veil made in Brussels, but her trousseau is all-American.

M. Grosjean, who works in the London office of General Foods, is expected here in plenty of time for the many prewedding festivities. These include a dinner to be given May 13 at the 1925 F Street Club by Maj. and Mrs. David Barry; and Mrs. Emlen Davies' dinner for the couple on Thursday, May 25. Senator and Mrs. Tydings will be hosts at a similar party at Oakington on Friday, May 26, the night before the ceremony.

ODDS AND ENDS: Suggestion to Mr. and Mrs. "Chip" Roberts: Why not stage a contest to determine a name for your daughter? . . . Since the President and Mrs. Roosevelt like to give "hot dog" picnics for visiting royalty, Washingtonians are wondering if the newly named Minister to Canada and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper will hold one of their famous watermelon feasts in honor of the King and Queen of England . . . Mme. Witold Wankowicz, wife of the Polish Embassy Counselor, has cards out for a tea next Tuesday from 5 to 7 . . . Glamorous Vera Zorina and her husband, George Balanchine, will be guests of honor at the membership drive luncheon of the Civic Theater tomorrow at 12:30 at Wesley Hall . . . Most Americans who own property in Europe are trailing back to this country because of the war scare, but Mrs. Henry S. Downe, leader of the American colony in Paris and now visiting here, says she will return to Europe before September only if there is a war. In that event she will take the first boat back to do what she can to help.

WITH THREE large boxes filled with special screens, colored films, and other camera equipment, Peggy Lane will sail on Saturday to join her parents, the United States Minister to Yugoslavia and Mrs. Arthur Bliss Lane. En route she will stay in London for a few days visiting Betty Wood, who has been stopping with her here at the Anchorage.

Peggy, who idly started taking pictures several years ago with the usual little beginner's Brownie, has developed into a first-rate photographer. Her pictures of Yugoslavia now adorn that country's exhibit at the World's Fair, and while in Washington she took many public buildings and cherry blossom scenes.

IF YOU SEE any young ladies perched on roofs overlooking Washington gardens this week, they are probably students of Marvin Breckinridge's photography class looking for unusual angles. Their teacher is taking them on field trips this week.

Marvin Breckinridge, who used to live here, is another who has made an outstanding success of both photography and writing. She recently returned from a stay at the Iguana Island Club on one of the Virgin Islands and has written an article about it which will appear in a well-known mag. This is the club where members own the whole island and escape occasionally to get away from it all. A number of Washington people belong.

COUNT LEONE Fumasoni-Biondi, the Italian newspaperman, has visiting him his mother, the Marchioness Biondi, and his sister, Mary Biondi. This is his mother's first trip to this country and his sister's first to Washington, though she visited New York several years ago. They all took in the World's Fair before coming to the Capital.

The first of the Supreme Court justices to announce plans for the summer is Associate Justice Stanley F. Reed, who, with Mrs. Reed, has leased the Glen Cove, L. I., home of Mr. and Mrs. Winslow C. Coates.

Last summer Justice and Mrs. Reed occupied the home of Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long in Nantucket. As their two sons, John and Stanley, jr., are with law firms in New York, the Glen Cove place will be in easier commuting distance for them.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Irene Castle, in Limelight With Movie On Her Career, Loves Hunt Country

IRENE CASTLE McLAUGHLIN, now in the limelight again because of the new movie based on hers and Vernon Castle's dancing career, is a frequent visitor to the hunt country. At a house party once I had a room next to hers and we had many interesting chats.

She is as sweet and attractive as she was 20 years ago, when she was coupled with her famous husband as a dance team. Irene Castle told us many amusing things of her life as she sat in front of the fire in the evening or drove in a Ford with me to a hunt meet. She is interested in all animals, through the S. P. C. A., and especially in horses.

IRENE WAS MARRIED when she was 18 and Vernon was 21. They were young and very much in love, though they had little money. Vernon was in vaudeville at the time, and one of his favorite songs was "It's Not the Trick but the Tricky Way You Do It." Irene was crazy to dance with him in public but no one would give her a chance, as no husband and wife had danced as a team up to that time.

At last a break came and the two were asked to go to Paris and dance in an American show. After weeks of work, the show went under, and again they were without funds. However, they had taken with them Walter Ash, a colored boy who had worked for her family. He was a good crap shooter and taught the French (or didn't teach them very well) and won enough for them to struggle along. After a difficult time, in which, if they bought potatoes they couldn't buy milk, there was an offer one day from the Cafe de Paris to dance for the guests. There was great excitement among the trio, for this would be Vernon's and Irene's first square meal in weeks.

But there was the question of evening clothes. Vernon had his but Irene had nothing but the simple white dress in which she had been married more than a year before. She pressed this plain, little low-necked frock with its short ruffled sleeves, and then found a white Dutch bonnet which had been given her as a souvenir. This was pulled into some sort of shape and proved most becoming.

THEY WENT, they were seen, and they conquered. Their grace, beauty and charm won the public and, after several months in which accounts of their success had reached America, they returned home to find many offers. They danced first at Martin's Cafe and frequently were asked to entertain guests after dinners.

At the height of their career, Irene was stricken with appendicitis. In the hospital she would not let the nurse comb her hair, which eventually became so matted that she could not get it combed out when she got home. Knowing she could not dance for some time, she cut it off.

ONE DAY, shortly afterward, a friend persuaded her to attend a luncheon when there would not be more than ten women that she knew very well. She was reluctant to go with her short hair, but finally did. Next day the ten women who were there, pleased with the way she looked, had cut their hair. In two days the fashion had spread to 50 more, and from then on the "Irene Castle bob" took the country by storm.

COUNT and Countess Guy de Baillet-Latour have purchased Fairfield, in Fauquier County, an estate of 2,100 acres on which is an old brick house said to have been built by a brother of Chief Justice John Marshall. There is much remodeling to be done but the new owners have no present plans for getting to work on it. Instead, they will keep it as a home in case Belgium becomes involved in war.

Fiction Writing Fascinating To This Author of Best Seller

But Full Time Job, Adds Mrs. Krey, Here on Visit

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Musty old papers in the Library of Congress have more fascination for Mrs. Laura Krey than any number of pleasant social engagements. Proof enough is the fact that the author of "And Tell of Time," one of the season's most popular books, sent regrets to a score of invitations from New York friends while she was there over the week-end and returned to her suite at the Roosevelt Hotel here to continue the research she began last Thursday.

"Every morning is like Christmas," said this gracious and enthusiastic writer. "The effort to try to master the art of writing fiction is so fascinating. I can hardly wait to get up and try to do it as well as I can."

Rewritten Six Times

Modesty is not an affectation but an impressive characteristic of the gray-eyed, gray-haired Texas woman whose book, brought out on her twenty-fifth wedding anniversary last August, found a place for itself in the best-seller class.

"I rewrote it six times in long-hand," she told me, "not with the idea of preparing it for publication, but of doing it as well as I could, and of leaving something which would be a record for my children."

Mrs. Krey believes it would have been more difficult for her to write in a household differently organized than hers. Not until her son and daughter were grown did she resume her interest in writing—an interest cherished since her childhood on a Texas plantation. Her husband, Dr. A. C. Krey, a professor in the University of Minnesota, has writing to do and a room where he is undisturbed in doing it; her daughter, a student of journalism, has a room of her own where she writes, and Mrs. Krey, a garret studio where she works daily from 9 to 5. Her son is in school in Virginia.

Full-Time Job

Creative writing in the field of fiction is a full-time job, she believes, because the mood of the story must be sustained. She finds it impossible to get away from it for half a day and then return and continue successfully. After some months of intensive work, she spends a few weeks gathering material and relaxing from her strict schedule.

She came here last week with Prof. Krey, who was attending the meeting of the American Association of University Professors, and has recently been on an extensive trip in Texas. She goes back to renew impressions and assemble material which she finds clearer as she views it from the perspective of her Minnesota garret.

'And Tell of Time' Rewritten 6 Times Before It Was Sold

She found on this trip, among some childhood essays she had forgotten, descriptions of people and places almost identical with some of those in her book, although its characters are all composites, she says. She believes the deep-rooted impressions of her childhood have been responsible for the convincing quality of her story. One cannot hope to write about material in fiction which is only intellectually apprehended, she says.

She is preparing to write two more books about Texas—which she terms "the melting pot of America," but they will not comprise a trilogy.

Mrs. Krey will remain in Washington for several days, completing her research and then will return to her writing at her home in Minnesota.

A dinner last night at the Carlton Hotel, celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the Patriotic Service Committee of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America, was attended by more than 200 delegates and other members here for the biennial session of the general council of the society. It followed a garden party at Dumbarton House, national headquarters of the society, from 5 to 7 in the afternoon.

Methodists To Merge Publishing

Church Supreme Court Of 9 Members Provided; Tobacco Frowned Upon

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 2.—Uniting Methodists reviewed tonight the church's book publishing career which started 150 years ago with £120 borrow capital and has grown into a $5,000,000-a-year business.

Property of the publishing branches of the three uniting church divisions, valued at $8,044,438, will be combined.

Temperance Board Voted

They provided for a church judicial council or supreme court of five ministers and four laymen to be nominated by the council of bishops. The proposal was passed over objection of some delegates who termed the selection of the bishops "undemocratic." Answering delegates contended the bishops acted as the senate of church government and should nominate the court.

The plan of allotting four bishops for the first 500,000 members of each jurisdiction of the new church and one additional bishop for each 500,000 additional members in a jurisdiction was approved.

A Board of Temperance with offices in Washington was established to carry on a fight on alcoholic liquors, narcotics, gambling and salacious literature.

Tobacco Frowned Upon

The church voted to urge its ministers not to smoke or chew tobacco but refrained from following the Northern church provision making such abstinence mandatory.

No comment was made on reports editors of the Southern Methodist Layman, opposing unification, had wired Bishop Collins Denny of Richmond, retired, they were underwriting $100 toward his 1940 salary in anticipation of his stand against union. He has said he would submit only to the jurisdiction of the South branch.

Greater D. C. Drive Pledge $40,422

Nearly 60 per cent of the total aimed at by the greater National Capital committee of the Board of Trade in its campaign for sustaining funds has been already subscribed, Thomas J. Groom, general campaign chairman, announced at the first report meeting yesterday in the Washington Hotel.

With $70,000 as the goal, $40,422 was reported pledged yesterday. Short talks were made by Frederick P. H. Siddons, John A. Reilly, C. B. Dulcan, sr., Lyle O'Rourke and Lawrence E. Williams, commending the work of the committee in bringing more visitors to Washington.

Czech Aide Pessimistic About Country's Future

Dr. Karel Cervenka, First Secretary of the Czecho-Slovakian Legation, yesterday discussed the future of his country before about 35 Washington alumni of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity at a luncheon at the Cosmos Club. He indicated that there was little hope of restoring a free Czecho-Slovakia so long as Hitler and his regime remained in power in Europe.

U. S. Mediation Averts District Bakery Strike

A city-wide strike of bakery wagon salesmen and drivers would have commenced Monday but for an eleventh-hour settlement effected by the Labor Department, it was learned yesterday.

Disclosure of the strike vote, calling for a walkout of approximately 600 union drivers Monday morning, coincided with announcement of a last-minute truce. Robert Lester, business agent of Bakery Salesmen Union, Local No. 33, revealed that a compromise settlement gives the drivers an increase of $2 weekly, raising base pay to $42 a week.

A few hours before the scheduled walkout, the conciliation service of the Labor Department succeeded in bringing together union officials and representatives of the bakeries, which serve nearby Maryland and Virginia as well as Washington.

Social Service School Asks More Students

Miss Regan Addresses Catholic Auxiliary; Appeal Is Broadcast

A larger faculty, additional equipment and an enrollment of 70 full-time students in the National Catholic School of Social Service were described as objectives for the coming year Monday night by Agnes G. Regan, assistant director of the school.

Miss Regan addressed nearly 300 members of the Washington Auxiliary of the school at a card party at the Wardman Park Hotel. Her talk was broadcast by radio to an estimated 10,000 members of the National Council of Catholic Women, meeting all over the country.

"Everywhere there is need for workers, men as well as women, who have had not only intellectual but spiritual preparation that they may constitute leaders in the great Catholic program of Catholic Action," she said.

Miss Regan gave a brief history of the school, founded in 1920 to train college graduates for social service. Besides technical training and field work, the curriculum emphasizes "Catholic philosophy as underlying all human relationships," she declared.

The Rev. Lucien L. Lauerman, director of the school, was among those present at the party last night. Arrangements were made by Mrs. Arthur F. Mullen, Miss Rebecca E. Shanley, Miss Mary T. Kolb, Mrs. Allen C. Vories, Mrs. George R. DeBruler, Miss Elizabeth Dolan, Mrs. James E. Colliflower, Mrs. Charles McMahon, Mrs. William R. Brennan, Mrs. James Naughten, Mrs. Paul Fitzpatrick and Mrs. John F. Victory.

Driver's Attempt To Escape Arrest Costs Him $60

When Lawrence E. Frankenfiel, 33-year-old Silver Spring carpenter, failed to make a right turn at Ninth and E streets northeast yesterday it cost him $60.

Policeman Adam M. Arney, of the traffic division, stopped the carpenter on Bladensburg road northeast, on a charge of speeding 35 miles. Arney said he instructed the motorist to drive to the Ninth Precinct Station.

Leading the way, Arney said Frankenfiel's car was right behind his until they reached Ninth and E streets, where the motorist failed to follow Arney's right turn. The intersection is only half a block from the station house.

Watching in the rear-view mirror, the policeman said he noticed Frankenfiel continue on. The chase lasted over several blocks and through an alley before Arney forced the other machine to a stop at Eighth and E streets—one block from where the race started.

Frankelfiel was charged with speeding 35 miles, driving at unreasonable speed, passing a stop sign and failing to stop before leaving an alley.

D. C. Lacks Civic Pride, Says Sharpe

Washington shows lack of civic pride in celebrating such occasions as the Cherry Blossom Festival and the Fourth of July on too small a scale, C. Melvin Sharpe, executive assistant, Potomac Power Co., told the Washington Civitan Club yesterday at a luncheon in the Mayflower Hotel.

"Perhaps we don't realize our opportunities because we are too close to them," he said.

2 Persons Hurt In D. C. Traffic

Two persons were injured yesterday in traffic mishaps.

John H. Lewis, 57, of 1243 Oates street northeast, was struck by a street car in the 400 block Massachusetts avenue northeast. He was taken to Washington Insurance Clinic and treated for cuts and bruises to his back and returned home.

Norman Pemberton, 20, of 1012 B street northeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for possible fracture of the left ankle and cuts when his motorcycle struck an automobile at Sixth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast.

BACKACHE

STOP GETTING UP NIGHTS

When the delicate filtering tubes of the kidneys become less active, waste, excess acids and poisons are apt to linger in the blood, then the kidneys often need a good stimulus just as do the bowels. It doesn't do the blood any good to retain these harmful materials which should be filtered out by the kidneys.

So to gently stimulate kidneys and help them to function more properly get a 35 cent box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—a grand, safe and harmless kidney diuretic and stimulant right from Haarlem in Holland.

But be sure and ask for and get GOLD MEDAL—the pure—the original and genuine Haarlem Oil Capsules. Don't be an easy mark and accept a cheap substitute—look for the Gold Medal on the box.

At times other symptoms of sluggish kidney action may be puffiness under the eyes—nervousness—leg pains and moist palms. 35 cents. —Adv.

Civic Group Fights Penal Wharf Site

Southeast Citizens Council Demands Congress Hear Its Protests

With one dissenting vote the Council of Southeast Citizens' Associations last night put itself on record as opposing erection of the new District penal wharf on the proposed site at the foot of Fourteenth street southeast and demanded a Congressional hearing to voice the associations' protest.

The action was taken after a lengthy defense of the site by Ray L. Huff, general superintendent of District Penal Institutions.

Previously, protests against the wharf construction had been voiced by virtually every citizens' and business association in the Southeast assertedly anxious to prevent the section from becoming a "catch-all" for undesirable District government institutions.

Huff based his defense of the proposed site on the argument that the alternative site proposed at Buzzard's Point carries too high an assessed property valuation for purchase and that establishment of the wharf in the Blueplains area would be accompanied by legal hazards resulting from carrying prisoners across the District line.

"Would Be Beneficial"

Huff also declared that rather than a detriment to Southeast Washington the wharf would be beneficial as a "place we hope to point to with some pride" as an example of a model penal institution and a display point for prison-made goods.

William A. Maio, president of the council, countered Huff's defense by pointing out that construction of the wharf at the Fourteenth street side would block the long-sought Anacostia River parkway project to beautify river frontage now described as "unsightly."

Several other members voiced opposition because of its alleged ill effect on real estate in the area, the future development of the Southeast and Anacostia, because of its proximity to Anacostia High School and because of the psychological effect on children in the area.

Barker Defends Site

Lone member who consistently defended the sit was Charles A. Barker, of the Randle Highlands Association, who argued that the wharf had been exaggerated as a menace because only 30 prisoners or less would be housed there.

Property between M street and the Anacostia River is now owned either by the Federal Government or local gas concerns and hence unavailable for the parkway project in any case, he said.

A resolution that letters of protest be sent to Commissioner Hazen, the Arts Commission, the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, and to Senator King and Representative Randolph, chairmen of the Senate and House District committees was approved.

Unwin Urges Low Income Housing

Too Many New Fashionable Areas Are Created, Says British Authority

Sir Raymond Unwin, noted British housing authority, told a large audience of housing experts and students at George Washington University last night that there are several reasons why the housing situation in the United States is unstable.

First, he mentioned that housing operatives here are in the habit of building more houses for members of the higher income group than there are members of the higher income group to occupy them.

"When we get to the higher income group," he explained, "there is the search for a good and fashionable address. Builders are constantly creating newer and more fashionable areas, and urging that group to go to them. The consequence is that higher-cost houses descend to the lower income groups, who cannot carry them at their original costs.

Cites English Practice

"In contrast the houses in England occupied by the lower income groups have been built for that group."

The speaker outlined what England had done immediately following the war to meet the shortage of houses, and plans that are under way now that are expected to erase the housing problem in that country. He spoke from the point of view of one who had been director of the housing branch of the ministry of munitions during the World War, and after the war was chief architect for housing of the ministry of health.

Urges Housing Census

"The housing problem is not hopeless if it is possible to go about it in the right way," he said. "That means first you must know your facts, how many houses there are, the number of families there are to be housed, the rents at which houses are available, and the number of houses that are needed. In that connection Sen. Wagner's recent bill for a census of housing is a very necessary thing. You are accumulating a serious shortage, chiefly in the low income groups because you have not been building since 1931 at anywhere near the rate needed to meet the demand."

D. C. Begins Cutting 860 Off WPA Rolls

Must Finish by May 8; Many Face Hardship, Welfare Leaders Say

Work relief rolls in the District must be pared from 10,810 to 9,950 by May 8, it was announced yesterday by Col. F. C. Harrington, Federal Works Progress Administrator.

A cut of 200,000 workers was ordered throughout the Nation, following up the April cut and preceding the June paring which will bring the United States relief workers to 2,400,000 by July 1.

Local WPA offices have started their eliminating, officials said last night.

Welfare leaders, who have experienced a relief controversy and fund shortage all winter and spring, expressed doubt that private industry could take up the slack.

No Aid From PAD

"They'll do just what thousands of others are doing in the District, haunt the private agencies and the unemployment centers, probably finding just enough food and part time jobs to enable them to keep body and soul together," William Savin, head of the Family Service Association, said.

Since WPA workers are employables, they cannot expect aid from the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare, which for the past several months has been unable to keep up to date in interviews with unemployables alone.

Elwood Street, director of welfare, and Alice Hill, director of PAD, recently resigned. Their positions have not been filled.

Food Plentiful

The D. C. Employment Center has reported a pick-up in job placements and private industry jobs are more plentiful in the District and nearby than they were a year ago. Food to be distributed by the Surplus Commodity Corporation is plentiful.

Unless Congress appropriates more for relief than is now indicated, the roll paring will continue until the national figure for the new fiscal year beginning July 1 stands at a 2,000,000 average.

Maryland's cut ordered yesterday was 1,050 workers, and West Virginia's was 3,720.

The largest reductions will be made in New Jersey, New York City, Illinois, Michigan, Kentucky, Georgia, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Wisconsin, Minnesota, California and Pennsylvania.

Town Crier Breezes In, Out of D. C.

Alexander Woolcott Working on Book, Dozen Other Things

Alexander Woollcott, 5 feet 8 inches of living proof that egotism and charm need not be incompatible, fluttered through Washington yesterday and the town seems pleasanter for his visit.

Cornered in the cocktail lounge of the Carlton, the "Town Crier" gallantly unburdened himself of a bundle of news about Alexander Woolcott, ranging from his imminent stardom in a new Kaufman-Hart comedy to an audience which the President has granted him at Hyde Park.

He is bound for Chicago to embark upon a summer program which would stagger most persons. Over an old-fashioned, he said his immediate assignment is a lecture series on journalism at the University of Chicago.

To See Dionnes

Next, he will go to Callander, Ontario, arriving late in May, to help make the last short film subject starring the Dionne quintuplets before they go into "retirement."

"I'm going to be narrator, or something," Woollcott explained.

After that, a short vacation at his Vermont home before starting rehearsals in the comedy which George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart are writing around his brittle personality and plumpish frame, to be produced in New York in October.

"That is," said the author-actor-critic, "it will open at the Music Box in New York if it survives the Boston try-out."

Working on Book

Sandwiched between his college lecturing, quint-narrating, broadcasting and play rehearsing he'll be working on his latest book. In fact, his trip to Washington was for the purpose of gathering material. He won't discuss the nature of his "material" but, if it gives any clew, he had dinner last night with Associate Justice Felix Frankfurter.

That talk with President Roosevelt—

"Several weeks ago," he whispered, "I sent the President a stamp and a story. He won't call it exactly a bribe but I have an idea I'd like to get across to Mr. Roosevelt. It's set for Hyde Park in June."

Sorority to Meet

Washington alumnae of Tau Phi Sorority will hold their last meeting of the season at 8:30 p. m. next Wednesday (May 10) at 143 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Civil Service Fears Flood Of Patronage

Commission Submits Unfavorable Report On 2 Pending Bills

Alarmed over two bills reported favorably on Monday by the Senate Civil Service Committee, the Civil Service Commission yesterday warned that they "opened the back door" to a flood of patronage appointed Congressional clerks taking their places in permanent jobs in the executive service.

One of the measures in question would permit Senators' and Representatives' clerks and secretaries and clerks of Congressional committees who have served four years, to receive permanent civil service classification, making them eligible for appointment to civil service jobs.

The other bill denies the commission the right of setting age limits for persons examined for jobs, except those entailing hazardous or heavy physical work.

Unfavorable Report Given

The Civil Service Commission submitted an unfavorable report, with Budget Bureau approval, on both bills.

Commission Chairman Mitchell said yesterday that he feared both measures would be passed. The bill removing age limits for applicants passed the Senate last year.

Mitchell added that the bill giving status to Congressional clerks "lets the bars down" to an endless flow into executive branch jobs of persons picked by their Congressmen for patronage reasons. He declared that if the bill were passed, the same pressure of patronage would force the appointment of former legislative clerks to high-paying Federal jobs.

Whenever a vacancy for a good position in a Government bureau occurred, Mitchell explained, Congressional pressure would force the appointment of some legislator's employe.

Noncompetitive Exams

The bill provides that the Congressional clerks must pass noncompetitive examinations of the commission to be eligible.

Mitchell opposed the age-limit bill, introduced by Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, even though it escaped the usual objections to such legislation by providing that older employes who could not serve a minimum of 15 years before the retirement age should not participate in retirement benefits.

The commission's objections, Mitchell said, resulted from the proposal to prevent specifying a young man for a messenger's job, or a young man for the post of apprentice, junior scientific aide, etc.

Columbia Heights Citizens

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night urged the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations to restore the $56,000 cut in the appropriation for the District Fire Department. A resolution embodying this request was adopted by the group after hearing George F. Richardson, secretary-treasurer of the International Firefighters' Association, point out that the cut would mean discharging many District firemen.

In another resolution the association urged that an elected city council be included in any plan for reorganizing the District government indorsed by the House District Committee or Kennedy's subcommittee.

All the officers were re-elected, except the third vice president, Dr. Erwin Steinman, who will be succeeded by Dr. A. V. Smith. Other officers are: President, Col. Luther Maddox; first vice president, George H. Brown; second vice president, Col. Glendie B. Young; recording secretary, Marie Flynn Maddox; corresponding secretary, Walter I. Swanson, and treasurer, John M. Boteler. Brown and Col. Maddox were named delegates to the federation.

North Cleveland Park

Construction of the proposed national auditorium at the end of East Capitol street won the support last night of the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association. J. B. Dickman presided at the meeting, the last to be held until October.

Capital News In Brief

Penny Matchers Jailed

Three alleged penny-matchers were charged with grand larceny yesterday by District police. The trio, police asserted, victimized Capital visitors, three of whom complained they lost a total of $423, a watch and a ring, all from pitching pennies.

The accused men are Barklay G. Watkins, 37, of 1535 Rhode Island avenue northwest; Charles L. Wagner, 46, of Philadelphia; Harry S. Raymond, 65, of New York City. They were arrested by Detectives Irving Lubore, George Thornton and Carl Champ of the pick-up squad.

Water for Health

Health Officer Ruhland yesterday advised drinking five glasses of water daily to preserve health. "Next to air, water is the most important," he said.

Lack of water results in headaches, constipation and general poor health, he said. Drinking of very hot or very cold water is harmful, he added.

President's War Power Absolute, Says Tansill

The Nation's President can put the United States into a war or keep it out, "regardless of what anyone else says," Prof. Charles C. Tansill, of the Catholic University history faculty, told 100 persons attending the (weekly) Opportunity House luncheon yesterday.

He traced the history of American participation in wars and asserted that President Cleveland kept the United States from going to war with Spain, but that McKinley did just the opposite.

Although Wilson argued for American neutrality, Tansill declared, only six weeks after his last avowal Wilson swung the United States into the World War.

The United States will be dragged into the struggle should a general war break out in Europe, the professor said. He warned against America sending troops across the Atlantic, since our fleet would be in the Pacific, helpless to convoy them safely home.

2 Newspapermen Here Win Harvard Fellowships

Harvard University yesterday named two Washington newspapermen and ten others as recipients of Nineman fellowships for unlimited study at the university for the 1939-1940 academic year.

Weldon B. James, 26, correspondent of the United Press, now attached to the Washington bureau, and Glen C. Nixon, 41, economic reporter for the United States News, were among the successful candidates in a field of 209.

The felowships were established by Harvard in 1937 through a bequest of more than $1,000,000 from Mrs. Agnes Wahl Nieman, in memory of her husband, Lucius W. Nieman, founder of the Milwakee Journal. Appointees will receive stipends approximating their annual salaries.

Farley Avoids Politics in Hiring, Aide Declares

The chief postal inspector last night declared, and the Postmaster General admitted, that the chairman of the National Democratic Committee never played any politics in his own cabinet department.

The guarantees were exchanged at a banquet at Hotel 2400 honoring Kildroy P. Aldrich, for six years chief postal inspector. More than 400 members of the inspection bureau attended.

Aldrich declared Postmaster General Farley "never inquired into the social, religious or political affiliations" of persons hired in the inspection service.

Safety for Sale No. 4

District to Outlaw Wrecks on Wheels When Compulsory Inspections Begin

By Howard F. Wentworth.

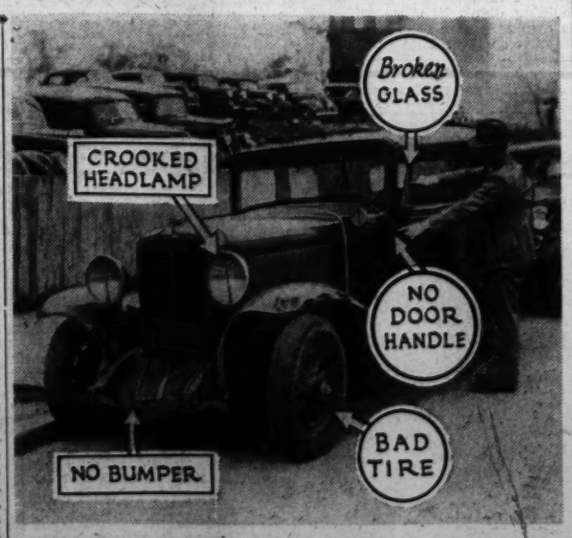

It is going to mean sad news for at least one Washington motorist when the new compulsory automobile inspection law starts operating June 1. His (or her) car was discovered on a downtown street yesterday by J. Earl Steinhauer, chief inspector, and was promptly cited as a "typical example" of the unsafe vehicle.

Parked less than a block from the Department of Vehicle and Traffic, the car was discovered by Steinhauer in a preliminary survey to determine the number of autos now licensed and traveling District streets which would not pass the rigid inspection tests.

"This car," said Steinhauer, "is just the type we want to rule off our streets. It is virtually an accident on four wheels going somewhere to happen."

To begin with, the jalopie had no bumper and all cars manufactured with bumpers must have them attached under the new law. The door handles were missing and this is contrary to the inspection rules. The tires were worn to the fabric, almost ready to blow out. Both front windows were shattered and the windshield was cracked.

The rear fenders resembled pretzels and one front fender had a jagged tear. A headlight lamp was bent to the starboard and threw its beam up into the trees. In fact, there were few items about the car which would pass any safety examination—yet the owner continues to drive it.

"Should any of the faulty mechanical parts on this car go wrong while the driver was bearing down on a group of pedestrians," said Steinhauer, pointing to a twisted brake rod, "our traffic fatality toll might jump a few points. This car is a dangerous instrument even in the hands of the most careful driver."

In "selling safety" at the District's two inspection stations—1827 West Virginia avenue northeast and 615 Tenth street southwest—authorities hope after June 1 to have every licensed auto in tip-top mechanical shape and hold to a minimum accidents traceable to defective parts.

Theaters Will Reap World's Fair Harvest

Records Prove Expositions Boon to Box-Office; A Few Recollections Come Back to Mind; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THERE WERE, of course, arguments that could have been raised when Maurice Evans stated to this column last week in his dressing-room at the National that he was closing the spring tour of the full-text "Hamlet" and "Henry IV," Part I, here on Saturday night, instead of taking the productions back to New York, because he felt that visitors to the New York World's Fair would be primarily interested in the World's Fair and not in anything much going on along Broadway.

BELL

From past experience, had I been in the mood, I could have gone to the mat with Mr. Evans on this point. It is to be rather more than suspected that the surviving shows on Broadway will reap the same sort of financial harvests that have been reaped by other extant productions during earlier World's Fairs in other cities.

If any are still living who remember the World's Columbian Exposition, in Chicago, in 1893, they will recall that "America," a spectacular production at the Auditorium— seating a meager 4,800—and "Ali Baba, or The Cave of the Forty Thieves," a Henderson extravaganza, at the Chicago Opera House, played to capacity throughout the duration of the fair.

At the St. Louis Exposition in 1904, we seem to recollect having had a dickens of a time trying to get two reasonably desirable seats for Blanche Bates in the late David Belasco's production of "The Darling of the Gods."

Out in San Francisco, in 1915, the theaters seemed to be doing all right for themselves, despite the competition of one of the most colorful and picturesque expositions of all that have been held in this country since the Centennial in Philadelphia, back in 1876—at which, incidentally, I was not present, having been born a handful of years too late.

So, as I say, we might have given Mr. Evans an argument. The reason we didn't—or one of them—was that we had a faint inkling that his decision had been based on an intense desire to go to the World's Fair himself and not be bothered with the intricate business of "Hamlet" and Falstaff eight times a week. Maybe I was wrong, but I think I was right on both counts—theater business and Mr. Evans' personal inclinations.

After all, a fellow needs a rest once in a while. Some are lucky enough to get it.

Speaking of these World's Fairs brings back a flood of memories. At the Columbian Exposition, for example, we struck up two juvenile friendships that were a bit of a thrill. One was with a Samoan chieftain, with a mop of pompadour hair of about the texture of a scrubbing brush. We used to get quite a "bang" out of patting his "bangs" with our hands. Neither of us could speak the other's language, but we were pretty good pals, even so. And then, almost directly across the Midway Plaisance, was the Indian Village in which the old warrior chieftain, Rain-in-the Face, was one of the main attractions. Rain-in-the-Face and I also were good friends. And just outside the fair grounds we managed to scrape up a bit of an acquaintanceship with Col. William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody, Annie Oakley and some of the others in the greatest Wild West Show that ever was staged. In St. Louis our experience was a little different. We went into an "Oriental Village" one afternoon, only to discover that all of the "Orientals" were Cuban cigar makers, or something, jabbering away in Spanish. Just up from the tropics ourself, we knew. When we jabbered back in Spanish a little worse than theirs, they all disappeared through convenient doorways into remote recesses to which the public was not admitted. Heigho, time marches on! And at too fast a clip.

That man is in again. Joe Kaliski, for many years manager for Educational Pictures and Gaumont British in Washington, then transferred to Pittsburgh, then on the road with "The Birth of a Baby," then up in Boston as branch manager for Grand National Films, now has returned to the National Capital to assume the branch managership here for Grand National.

Joe is one of the veterans of the business and one of the most popular figures along Washington's "Film Row," which strings itself out along New Jersey avenue, at K street, and around a few nearby corners. The boys who like to play knock rummy will be glad to have him back. So are all the rest of us.

As a bit of an addendum to yesterday morning's review of "I Married an Angel," at the National, it might be set down that only seldom does it happen that a long-run hit reaches the Capital to close the season in such spick-and-span condition. This ebullient, tuneful and not too dramatically impressive musical comedy—and what musical comedy ever was expected to be dramatically impressive?—might be in its first week by every basis of measurement of scenic beauty, freshness of costumes, spontaneous work of the principals, vivacity of the chorus and all of the other yardsticks that might be laid against it. If "I Married an Angel" doesn't sell out for the week, something is wrong with Washington's powers of perception—or maybe mine are the ones at fault. I had me a time Monday night at this utterly irresponsible charade.

A-Bachelor-Is-Speaking Note

Even the susceptible young fellow who married the angel found his marital life something less than perfect—and it wasn't a triangle, either. I wonder.

That Famous Scene From 'The Hen Pecks'

FRED ASTAIRE AND LEW FIELDS

in the revival of the scene that first brought fame to Vernon Castle in Fields' production of "The Hen Pecks," as it is shown in "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," opening on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater tomorrow. It was from this beginning that Castle went on become the most popular dancer of his day. Astaire, of course, appears as Castle; Fields, after all these years, appears as himself

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 2 (INS).—Just between you and me, Fannie Brice took a private look at "Rose of Washington Square" to determine if Twentieth Century-Fox had utilized the dramatic story of her life with Nicky Arnstein and it's very interesting that the gal who made the world conscious of the song "My Man," went into an immediate huddle with Joseph Schenck and Darryl Zanuck to put in a claim after looking at the picture.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Fortunately for her, Schenck and Zanuck are fair and have no intention of battling her. If it is decided that John Larkin, who wrote the original story, really had Fannie's romance with the colorful Nicky in mind and she doesn't ask for the moon with a fence around it, "Baby Snooks" will be paid. This movie, starring Alice Faye, Tyrone Power and Al Jolson, will be reviewed tomorrow night and then we can see for ourselves if it's fictional or biographical.

You will soon be hearing in headlines all about Ingrid Bergman, the Swedish star of "Intermezzo." For your information she is young and beautiful with all the glamour that first made the world Garbo conscious. Bet David O. Selznick will be surprised when he finds I know he has signed La Bergman and that she is on her way to Hollywood to play her original role in the remake of "Intermezzo." She will have Leslie Howard for her co-star and I am wagering she is the answer to the exhibitors' prayers, since she is the first Swedish star since Garbo to really show promise, and you know how the public flocked to see Greta before she yearned "to be alone."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Binnie Barnes is saving most of her smiles these days for James McKinley Bryant; former Gov. Al Smith saw a replica of his famous brown derby when he dined at the restaurant bearing that name; Congressman Martin Dies had a long talk with Byron Fitts, Joseph Schenck, Darryl Zanuck and others 100 per cent Americans on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot; Marie Wilson with Nick Grinde, wore an amazing getup at the opening of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye." The humorous lines keep the play from being too offensive, although it is a terrific slap at Hollywood. Wonder if the fact that Claire Booth Luce didn't get a job when she was here had anything to do with her irony? Margaret Lockwood's secret husband arrives in Hollywood within the week; Elsa Maxwell, who is occupying Constance Bennett's mansion while the latter is in New York, is entertaining in honor of the Duchess of Westminister May 13; Katherine de Mille is certainly no Lucy Stoner. She will be billed as Katherine de Mille Quinn in "Road to El Dorado;" the Benny Meroffs (he is the orchestra leader) have bidden adieu to marriage after 13 years together.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Film Director Backs Bureau Of Propaganda

Edmund Goulding Has Unique Plan of Mass Public Attack

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, May 2. — Edmund Goulding, Hollywood's most prolific idea man, wound up production of "The Old Maid" today and prepared to go to New York to turn his biggest idea—an American propaganda bureau—into reality.

Goulding, who first gained fame during the World War as a propagandist and who later became one of Hollywood's highest-paid directors, said he hoped to co-ordinate leaders of public thought into one all-powerful committee.

"I hope we can get a leading newspaper publisher," he said, "a radio chieftain, a magazine owner, a ranking churchman, a movie producer, and a book publisher, all to sit on the same committee, talk over national problems and give their opinions to the public.

"If such men acted collectively, they could saturate the American mass mind in a week to a point of 75 per cent conviction. They could be the most dangerous group of men in America, but they will be the country's most valuable.

Would Give Public Truth

"The public will know they are propagandists, functioning openly, and giving the truth as they see it to a country now suffering from impaired credulity.

"This committee will be believed. It will be altruistic, neither Democratic nor Republican, and apart from the existing Government. Like the Supreme Court, it will be subject only to its own inner dictates. Its sole obligation will be the preservation of Americanism."

Goulding is the man who persuaded the late King George of England to write a letter to every arriving American soldier and thereby make the latter forget how seasick he was on the ride over. Before the war had reached its end, Goulding founded the English speaking union, which put American soldiers into British homes during leaves from the front.

Is Most Versatile

In Hollywood, Goulding has gained the reputation of being perhaps the most versatile man in town. He has written more original stories for the screen than any competitor. Many of them he merely expounded at lunch time and sold them on the spot.

He once performed in this fashion while dining with a producer, who liked the idea so much he wrote a check for $10,000. Several days later he phoned Goulding and asked for his story. Goulding had forgotten it. He paid back the $10,000 and he's been wracking his brain ever since, trying to remember the plot.

He soon took to directing, as well as writing, and that led to a Gloria Swanson picture, "The Trespasser," which contained a theme song Goulding didn't like. He whistled his own idea of a tune and had a musician on the set take down the notes.

They became "Love, Your Magic Spell Is Everywhere," a best seller.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 2.—Glaring from every headline comes an indictment against Hopper: "Small but mighty:" "The enemy swarming on the fringes of civilization;" "It would be serious, but we aren't hurt yet;" "The whole state is fighting the enemy." I've been pretty patient about it, but kinda lost my temper when they came right out and said that our turnip and tomato man would hunt toppers with a butterfly net and a can of insect powder.

HOPPER

If I'd only been frugal and saved up some of that grasshopper juice, on this May day I could dance around my enemies and defend myself!

Now that Lindbergh is with us, I hope this country will obey his wishes and grant him the seclusion he seeks. We've done enough yapping and gawking, so let's pay tribute to a man who's brought this country greater credit than any single man in the last 13 years.

Did you hear the trip he made from Europe to St. Louis last summer to get their jobs back for two watchmen who guarded the Lindbergh trophies? They were fired over a political disagreement. The city was quite upset when he threatened to remove every trophy from there—either give them away, or sell them and give the money to charity. He's been offered a million dollars for them. Now those boys will never have to seek another job.

Did you know that Charlie Chaplin started the first commercial airline in America? To Catalina Island, July 4, 1919. With Art Burns, pilot, and Sid Germain, of the Germain Seed Co., as first passenger. It was a Curtiss two-seater and looked for all the world like a bobsled.

John Garfield goes into "Dust Be My Destiny," and after that, "Invisible Stripes" with Cagney. Both Hal Wallis productions.

Wouldn't Garfield be grand in the life story of O. Henry? Bob Presnall owns the rights and has written a wonderful story of it. You know O. Henry was railroaded into prison, and while there became the pal of Al Jennings, the bank bandit. While in prison he met Jimmy Valentine, and wrote that story while there. After his release, he became our most beloved writer.

Prison seems to create writers. Remember Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" and Oscar Wilde's "Ballad of Reading Goal?" It wouldn't surprise me if Al Capone came out with a sheaf of swing sonnets back to religion!

Connie Bennett has taken up knitting. And sends her handsome chauffeur to a little yarn shop for instructions, which he relays to Connie

Bob Benchley used to be a press agent for William A. Brady. Yep, he boosted many a star to success before ever dreaming of becoming one himself. And Max Gordon, the ace producer, did the same service for a burlesque show.

Incidentally, John McClain's cocktail party for Benchley at Chasen's Saturday will be remembered by every guest present, and I mean forever.

Since Jack Roper hit the rosin, he's been around the studios looking for an actor's job. Figures that's easier than going back to being a juicer. But what about opening another cafe? Everybody eats.

Reed Hadley, who did such a swell job in "Dr. Kildare," is repeating the performance in "Little Mother" for R. K. O

Charlie Farrell took a gang of friends over to the Indio amateur hour. Entered it, played "Gunga Din" and was paid off with 5 pounds of coffee. Then Charlie tried to exchange it for his own brand!

I loved "Union Pacific." It will make millions. But I really think they could cut it up and make six feature pictures out of it. Only thing missing was a bath tub. But they remembered to put something in for each commandment. I doubt if they ever could have finished laying the line without Barbara Stanwyck, it's one of the best acting jobs she's ever done. Ditto Joel McCrea, and their new heavy hero, Bob Preston.

Gets Reality

The call letters W6PCV, used on John Howard's short wave radio set in "Grand Jury Secrets," are actually the identification of Eugene Kearney, who served as technical adviser on the film.

Portray Brothers

Gary Cooper, who plays the title role in William A. Wellman's "Beau Geste," has two distinguished "brothers" in the picture. They are Ray Milland and Robert Preston.

*X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, MAY 3, 1939

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, Mo., May 2.—The gentlemen who operate the winter books of racing are facing very lean profits, if any, on this week's Kentucky Derby, in case you're interested.

That is the admission, at least of Mr. Charles Burke, the St. Louis betting commissioner who has inherited the widespread clientele of the late Tom Kearney. Mr. Kearney, during this time, parlayed a corner newsstand into East St. Louis realty holdings and Burke is operating at the same stand on Twelfth street.

POVICH

"The Derby business this year has been very brisk," Mr. Burke was saying today. "In fact, it has been much too brisk for the good of the winter book promoters, unless there is an upset at Churchhill Downs on Saturday, there's going to be much wailing from the bookies. They're loaded up with what looks to be the wrong kind of money this year.

"Personally, I won't be damaged as much as the rest if Johnstown wins. And if Johnstown wins it may come close to ruining some of the books. There's a horse that will probably go to the post at less than even money, and there are some books that laid as much as 20-to-1 against him last winter."

Johnstown 20-1 in Some Winter Books

It seems that Burke had a fortunate hunch about Johnstown. When other bookies were laying as much as 15 and 20 to 1 against the son of Jamestown back there several weeks ago when he was a doubtful Derby starter, Burke was very cautious. He laid no more than 10 to 1, and at those odds bettors placed their wagers with other books.

"But it doesn't figure to be a good Derby for me, even if Johnstown doesn't win," said Burke. "The betting this year was very funny. The public didn't go for the long shots, as they usually do. They played only the 'live' horses, and didn't give us a chance to balance our books."

The "live" horses, according to Burke, are four—Johnstown, Challedon, El Chico and Technician. They drew the bulk of the play from the moment the books opened and the bookies didn't get the usual quota of wagers from the moon-shooters, the folks attracted by the odds of 30, 40 and as high as 100 to 1 on the long shots.

It is that money, bet on the long shots, that usually represents the bookies' profits but, as we were saying, that sort of money didn't show up this year. And unlike previous years when the winter bookies have been favored by the scratching of a heavily backed favorite, no notable scratch has been made in this year's Derby.

The last bets Burke laid against Johnstown were at 4-to-1 odds, and a Johnstown victory will cost him a considerable amount. He closed his winter book as usual, at noon last Saturday, the day the Wood Memorial was run. The big winter books always close at noon on that day, inasmuch as the Wood result always changes the Derby picture.

Derby May Wreck the Bookies

This year's Derby may be the most damaging Derby for the bookies since 1924 when Black Gold won," added Burke. "At least, there will be no big profits for us if Johnstown, Challedon, El Chico or Technician take it. Back in '24, when I was working for Mr. Kearney, we took a $70,000 rap on the Derby when Black Gold galloped home. We made the mistake of over-laying him, but when we paid off in full it gave our book a reputation it has been cashing in on ever since."

The chief hope of the Nation's betting commissioners is, of course, that an outsider will be the first to poke his nose under the wire at Louisville on Saturday. "Every bookie I know will be rooting for Xalapa Clown on Saturday," said Burke. "He appears to be the colt with the best chance to save 'em and give them a nice profit. There isn't another outsider in the race that seems to have any kind of a chance to get home. The Clown ran a nice race behind Ciencia to finish second in the Santa Anita Derby, ahead of colts like Impound and Porter's Mite. He appears to have quite a bit of class."

The Derby field, as Burke figures it, will not contain more than ten starters, eleven at the most. The bigger bookies have a way of knowing far in advance of the race which horses will go. It is important to them, because they can offer more attractive odds on doubtful starters, and because they can please regular customers by advising them not to wager on horses which figure to be scrateched. They have their connections with virtually every stable that has a Derby candidate.

Thus, Burke's views when he visualizes the Derby field, are significant. "The big four—Johnstown, El Chico, Technician and Challedon are certain to go," he said. In there too, will undoubtedly be Heather Broom, Porter's Mite, T. M. Dorsett, Viscounty, Xalapa Clown and Yale O'Nine. I don't look for Steel Heels or Lostagal to get to the post.

"And I look for Johnstown to win the race with the greatest of ease, unless mud or heavy going comes up. One of my clockers told me that he actually ran the first mile of the Wood in better than 1:37, although that was the time they gave out. My connections tell me Johnstown is the fastest thing at the Derby distance since Twenty Grand. May be faster."

Gehrig Benches Self After 2,130 Games in Row

Nats, Outhit, 11 to 10, Beat Browns, 9 to 7

Griff Hurlers Ineffective, But Triumph

DeShong, Haynes And Kelley on Hill; Triple by Wasdell Accounts for Victory

By Shirley Povich.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Mo., May 2.—Thanks to the inept pitching of the St. Louis Browns, the Nats today expanded their winning streak to four straight games. Five St. Louis pitchers contrived to present the Nats with a 9-7 victory.

It was well that the Nats didn't meet up with some of the league's better pitching this afternoon, because their own hurlers were only slightly less inefficient than the Browns. Jimmy DeShong didn't last out the second inning, Joe Haynes was no ball of fire in a three-inning relief role, and Harry Kelley who finally got the job, barely staggered to a successful finish.

In fact, the Browns outhit the Nats, 11 to 10, but there was a little matter of 10 bases on balls that they issued and one balk they committed that were rather ruinous. Russ Van Atta pitched away an early 2-0 lead, and in the fifth inning after the Browns had taken a 6-5 lead, their third and fourth pitchers couldn't hold it.

Wasdell Hits Triple

Probably the most important Washington blow of the afternoon was struck by young Jimmy Wasdell in the ninth inning at a time when it didn't appear to have any great significance. The Nats were holding a 7-6 lead in that ninth and Buddy Myer had walked, with one out. Wasdell belted a tremendous triple against the left center fence and a moment later he scored on Rick Ferrell's single.

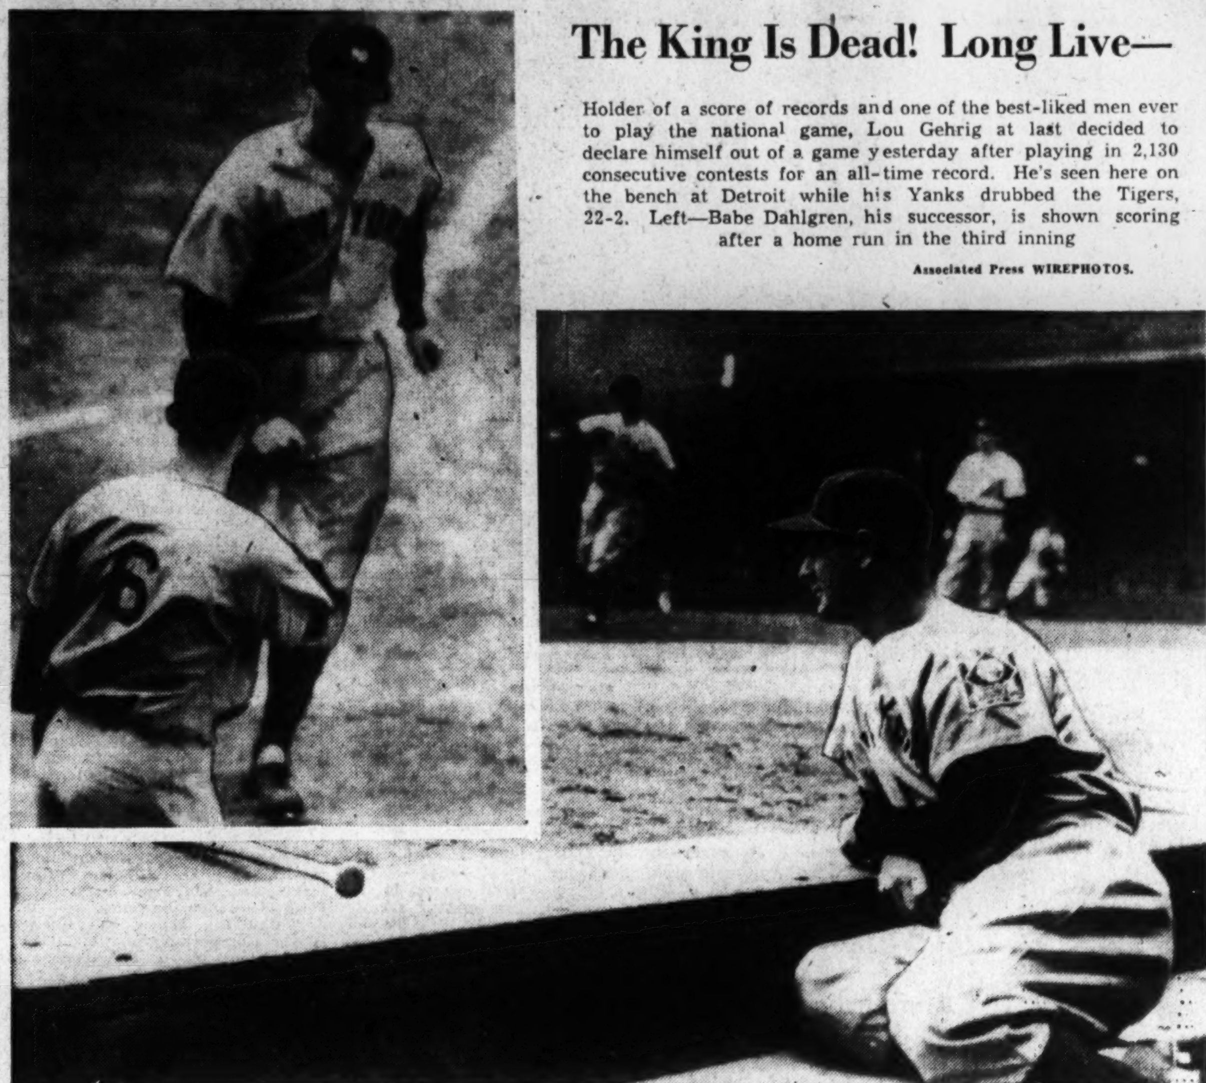

Those two runs produced by Wasdell's blow proved to be the Nats' winning margin. Because Harry Kelley, who had been pitching since the sixth inning, found himself in trouble in the ninth, giving up one run on a walk to Sullivan and singles by Thompson and Mazzera. The Browns had the tying run on first base with one out when, happily for Kelly, McQuinn hit into a double play engineered by Buddy Myer and Charley Gelbert.

DeShong, still victoryless after three starts this season, made a miserable job of it for the Nats at the outset of the game. He gave up three hits and two runs in the first inning, and walked three straight batters with two out in the second, at which point Joe Haynes got the Nats' pitching job.

Scores on Wild Throw

The Nats had their first run before they had their first hit. Russ Van Atta, the first St. Louis pitcher, hurled hitless ball for three innings, but in the second he walked three batters and a run scored when

The King Is Dead! Long Live—

Holder of a score of records and one of the best-liked men ever to play the national game, Lou Gehrig at last decided to declare himself out of a game yesterday after playing in 2,130 consecutive contests for an all-time record. He's seen here on the bench at Detroit while his Yanks drubbed the Tigers, 22-2. Left—Babe Dahlgren, his successor, is shown scoring after a home run in the third inning

Lou's Understudy Hits Double, Homer To Feature 22-to-2 Victory Over Tigers

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 2.—For the first time since May 30, 1925, the New York Yankees played a major league baseball game today without Lou Gehrig in the line-up.

Apparently without regret Gehrig ended his amazing "iron man" performance at 2,130 consecutive games for what he termed "the good of the team."

Gehrig sat, shoulders hunched forward, on the visiting team's bench at Briggs Stadium today as his teammates clubbed the Detroit Tigers into submission by a score of 22 to 2.

Voluntary on Gehrig's Part

Both Gehrig and Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, insisted the action of the big first baseman was entirely voluntary. Now 35 years old, Gehrig is the holder of numerous baseball records and has been a notable figure with the present world champions for more than a decade.

"I made up my mind Sunday night to ask McCarthy to bench me," Gehrig said. In Sunday's encounter against the Washington Nationals Lou came to bat four times with men on base and failed to get a hit, the Yankees losing the game, 3 to 2.

Gehrig's place was taken by Ellsworth (Babe) Dahlgren, formerly of the Boston Red Sox, who signalized his entry into the line-up by hitting a double and a homer in his first two times at bat. Dahlgren's two-bagger formed part of the Yankees' six-run attack in the first, which stood as their biggest one-inning splurge until the seventh, when they scored nine times.

Meaningless Record

Gehrig said "the consecutive game record always was meaningless to me, and now that I have ended it you newspaper guys will believe me."

He added a word of appreciation that "despite my slump, the fans never 'got on' me."

Oddly enough Gehrig's record came to an end in a city where it was almost terminated three years ago. On that occasion Gehrig, afflicted with lumbago, went to bat as leadoff man in the first inning and then retired.

Gehrig said he had not determined how long he would remain on the sidelines.

"I hope the arrival of warm weather will enable me to hit my stride," Lou said. When Gehrig left the line-up today he was batting only .143, had made but four hits in the Yankees' first eight games and had batted in only one run. Gehrig has led the league five times in the runs-batted-in department.

Rookie Outfielder Charley Keller, making his first start in the line-up, led the champions' attack with a home run and triple, the latter with the bases loaded, to drive in six runs.

Ruffing Looks O. K.

Ruffing, making his first appearance since April 25, when he pulled a muscle in his pitching arm, showed no visible after-effects of the injury. For the first six innings he held Detroit to one hit, and he wasn't scored on until the seventh, when a base on balls, an infield out and doubles by Rogell and Croucher put over two runs.

Victory Puts Chicago In Second Place In Loop Standings

Chicago, May 2 (AP).—With the Athletics' erratic defense booting in the three marginal runs, the Chicago White Sox defeated Philadelphia, 4 to 1, today and climbed into second place over the idle Boston Red Sox.

It was the Sox's fifth straight win and their seventh in eight starts.

The veteran Ted Lyons held the A's to six hits in his first 1939 victory and was deprived of a shutout when Nick Etten's single followed Johnson's triple in the seventh. inning play let in one run, while poor throws by First Baseman Nick Etten and Third Baseman Dario Lodigiani on another play in the fifth contributed two unearned runs.

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—Valdina Farm's bay colt, Viscounty, held off the charge of Herbert M. Woolf's highly regarded Technician in a close stretch duel today to win the 1-mile Derby trial stakes by the width of his whiskers in a photo finish at Churchill Downs.

Making his move as the field of nine Kentucky Derby eligibles rounded into the stretch, the 25-1 long-shot son of The Porter—Trap Star fought it out nose to nose with the Woolford Farm's candidate for Saturday's bluegrass classic and managed to nod just in time at the wire to win the decision. He covered the mile in 1:38.2, well off the 1:35 4-5 track record held by The Chief and Peace Chance.

Viscounty paid $61.60, $8 and $3.80.

Rated well off the pace by Jockey Charley Bierman as Porter's Mite and Technician led the field through the first three quarters, Viscounty ran close to the inside of the track all the way down the stretch, at times almost crowding Technician into the rail. So close was the going that Ira Hanford, aboard Technician, was unable to use his bat in the run to the wire.

Junius W. Bell's Steel Heels, one of the Derby candidates which has been working well at the Downs, finished third, as W. E. Boeing's well-regarded Porter's Mite faded in the late going to wind up out of the money.

Technician paid $2.60 for place and $2.20 for show, and Steel Heels $2.80 for show.

Viscounty, like Steel Heels, carried only 110 pounds, lightest weight. Technician and Porter's Mite were top-weighted at 118 pounds.

Six More Names Added to Baseball's Hall of Fame

Chicago, May 2 (AP).—To baseball's hall of fame today were added six more names—those of players whose brilliant careers contributed an early and romantic chapter to the 100-year-old story of the national game.

Plaques will be placed in the hall of fame at Cooperstown, N. Y., honoring Albert G. Spalding, Charles Radbourne, Adrian Constantine (Cap) Anson, William Arthur Cummings, William (Buck) Ewing and Charles A. Comiskey.

Star performers of the era prior to 1900, they were selected by Kenesaw M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, and the two league presidents,

Ott's Homer In 9th Beats Reds, 8 to 7

Giants End Losing Streak at 5 in Row; Danning Hits Homer

New York, May 2.—Mel Ott, the Giants' best trouble-shooter, solved two problems for Boss Bill Terry today. He moved in to third base to plug the team's biggest defensive gap and, with two on and two out in the ninth, blasted a home run that beat the Reds, 8 to 7, and broke the New Yorkers' five-game losing streak.

In the field, Ott handled five chances faultlessly. At the plate, he paced the Giants' 13-hit attack, their best since opening day. In addition to his three-run circuit blow, he drove in another run in the sixth with a single.

It looked bad for the Giants when the Reds knocked Harry Gumbert, Terry's only reliable starter, out of the box with a three-run rally in the seventh to take a 6-5 lead. Cincinnati got another tally off Relief Man Dick Coffman, credited with the victory, in the ninth, but in the last half of the frame Joe Moore and Harry Danning singled, and then Ott came through.

Danning hit a homer off Paul Derringer in the third.

38-Year-Old Hurls Holds Chicago Team To Only Four Hits

Philadelphia, May 2 (AP).—Thirty-eight-year-old Sylvester Johnson held the Chicago Cubs to four hits today while the Phillies tagged Ray Harrell and Jack Russell for 11 hits and a 6-to-1 victory.

Merrill May led the Phils' assault with three safeties, while George Scharein drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and a triple.

It was Manager Leo Hartnett who batted in the only Cub run. Gabby knocked out a howling single after Phil Cavarretta doubled to left-center in the fifth.

Brooklyn, May 2.—Behind three-hit pitching by Bob Klinger, their second hurler to go the route, the Pittsburgh Pirates opened their first Eastern trip today with a 3-2 decision over the Dodgers.

Though they combed the delivery of fat Freddy Fitzsimmons for 13 safeties, the Buccaneers didn't win the game until the eighth. Then they bunched doubles by Gus Suhr and Bill Brubaker and singles by Klinger and Lloyd Waner for two runs.

Floyd Young sent Pittsburgh away in the lead with a home run in the second inning.

Chicago, May 2 (AP).—Vice President Harry Grabiner of the Chicago White Sox announced today the benefit game for Monty Stratton netted the disabled pitcher at least $29,845.25.

Gate receipts totaled $27,700, with concessions and other receipts swelling the amount. The final total was expected to exceed $30,000 slightly.

'Tonky' Denies He's Dead, Says G. W. Publication

Personally denying stories of his death last week, John Tonkavitch, fullback of last year's George Washington University eleven, wrote Capt. John Rebholz that it was "all a mistake," The Hatchet, student publication reported yesterday.

"Tonky" is reported to have explained that another man, having the same name and from the same locality, died and the newspapers had been guilty of misidentity. Despite attempts to confirm reports of Tonkavitch's death, this was the first authentic news the university has received, The Hatchet stated.

Riggs, Sabin to Play at Columbia Saturday

Tennis Aces Will Oppose In Singles

Will Pair in Doubles Against Unnamed D. C. Team in Benefit Exhibition Play

By Jack Munhall.

A top-notch tennis exhibition of a caliber not seen here in many years was assured Washington net fans yesterday when arrangements were completed for Bobby Riggs and Wayne Sabin to play singles and doubles matches at the Columbia Country Club Saturday afternoon.

Riggs, stocky Los Angeles ace who became America's chief Davis Cup hope with the departure of J. Donald Budge from the simon-pure ranks, and Sabin, the sixth ranking national player, will come here from Annapolis where they are practicing this week with Joe Hunt for the Davis Cup trials. Sabin is recently returned from a highly successful spring circuit of tournaments.

After matching strokes in a singles encounter Riggs and Sabin will pair against the best possible local opposition. Their foes probably will be drawn from the D. C. Junior Davis Cup squad which will benefit from the proceeds of the exhibition.

Johnsen may Play

Allie Ritzenberg and Davie Johnsen, the latter Washington's top-ranking junior player, are being considered for the coveted honor of facing the internationally known stars.

That this youthful, but very capable, team is in prime form for such a test was indicated by fine but losing matches against older and more experienced Army-Navy foes Monday. Ritzenberg extended Gil Hunt, ninth ranking national star, to three sets before bowing, 6—3, 6—8 and 9—7, while Johnsen gave Hugh Lynch, second rated local senior performer, an equally stiff battle before yielding, 6—3, 6—8, 6—2.

Though all details for Saturday's twin attraction have not yet been completed, it is believed the singles between Riggs and Sabin will start the program, about 2 o'clock, with the doubles following immediately afterward.

Hunt and Doeg In Navy Exhibition

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 2.—Booming volleys that whistled like armor-piercing shells kept Midshipman Joe Hunt in the middle of the Davis Cup tennis picture today.

Lieut. Comdr. Roy Graham, tennis representative at the Naval Academy, said he understood Hunt was "very much under consideration" for both singles and doubles on the Davis Cup squad.

Performing under the eye of Walter Pate, Davis Cup committee chairman of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, Hunt justified his reputation as the best volleyer in the tennis business. The 20-year-old blond plebe from Los Angeles went to the net like a charging Buffalo and his kills almost drilled holes in the court cement.

Playing with the veteran Johnny Doeg, former national singles champion, Hunt helped take a 6—4 doubles set from Wayne Sabin and Bobby Riggs, who ranks No. 2 nationally.

Randle Horses On Block Saturday

Some of the best hunters and open jumpers ever to appear in local show rings will change ownership Saturday morning when U. S. Randle holds an auction of 28 or more of his string at Bannockburn Farm, near Fairfax, Va.

Included in those who will go under the hammer are Sport Marvel, a big brown gelding who has won more championships than his owner is able to count up off-hand; Randle's Find, a likely looking bay 4-year-old with an impressive way of going; three open jumpers, Dipsey Doodle, Randle's Way and Rocking Moon; So Long, a chestnut mare who has annexed many notable ribbons in both hunter and jumper classes, and a number of youngsters, ranging from yearlings to 3-year-olds, who are prospects for racing, hunting and showing.

Hoyas Nine Leaves On Trip Tonight

Georgetown University, hopeful at last of making a creditable baseball showing in the New York area, leaves tonight for a three-game invasion of traditional Gotham State rivals.

The Hoyas squad, numbering 17 players, meets New York University Thursday; Fordham Friday and West Point Saturday. It will stay overnight at the service school, returning here Sunday.

Georgetown has won six of seven games this season, losing only to Maryland in an upset.

In previous years Georgetown has found it most difficult to show a winning percentage against New York rivals.

Wilson Nine Beaten, 9 to 3, By Shepherd

A strong Shepherd Teacher College baseball team bunched its eight hits to best advantage yesterday to defeat Wilson Teachers, 9-3, at Griffith Stadium.

Dirting, visitors' short stop, who reportedly is property of the Brooklyn Dodgers, paced Shepherd with two tremendous triples. One of these blows cracked up against the base of the leftfield wall, the other went almost to the angle in left center.

Miller held the Wilson team to five scattered hits and fanned eight.

—With CONSIDINE

By Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., Polo's Greatest International Star.

New York, May 2 (INS).—A sports rivalry as old and traditional as the International Cup series between England and America can swing one way or the other for a long period of years without sacrificing a bit of interest or intensiveness in action. Sooner or later the pendulum will swing back. The major-league ball players, I think, call it "percentage."

HITCHCOCK

That's what we of the American squad defending the International Cup at Meadowbrook, beginning June 4, are thinking of as we plunge into the tense training stretch this month. We all believe that the British team, now in Aiken, S. C., and just about to move to Long Island, is probably the most formidable to come in quest of the cup since England won the trophy in 1914.

Because we have been winning recently, there has been a disposition to rate the American side as the favorite. But it's far too early to do that. True, we expect to have our best American players available, mounted on a fast and fit pony string. What the American line-up will be has not yet been decided. A stiff month of test matches lies ahead before the starting four will be named by the defense committee.

British Rank Among Best in World

Th British are considerably ahead of us in their work at the present time. I didn't have an opportunity to see the invaders in action during their California training this winter, but I have played on teams with or against several of them in our open championship and trophy events. They are players who, with the benefit of the wise and deliberate organization marking this expedition, deserve to rank with the best in the world. In Bob Skene, the young Australian, the challengers appear to have a young forward who will be a highly useful, even sensational, player. Our squad is anxious to see him in action when Lord Cowdray and Capt. Gerald Balding bring their players to Long Island on May 10.

More than that, there is basis for the belief that this British team will be mounted on one of the finest pony strings ever to come out of the British Empire. Opinions vary on the importance of pony strength to a team's effectiveness, but few who have played high-goal polo will place that figure at less than 60 per cent.

All this means that we who hope to figure in the American defense at Meadowbrook on June 4, 11 and 18 have our work cut out. The British have gained steadily since the World War wiped out much of their polo manpower and resources. They gave us a great fight at Meadowbrook in 1930. The second match of that series was one of the greatest polo games I can remember. We went into the sixth period all even in a desperate fight and finally won by a margin of five goals.

Gerald Balding was the No. 1 on that British team. In London, in 1936, the scores were 10 to 9 and 8 to 6—much too close for comfort. Balding and Eric Tyrrell-Martin, both prospective members of the new invading team, played that year.

Reading the newspapers these days, it's almost necessary to turn to the sports pages for encouraging signs in the world scene. A sports classic such as this polo rivalry is one of those signs. Since my first games against England, in 1921 on the team headed by Devereux Milburn, I can recall no match, not even a single period, which was not hard fought, with a spirit of ask no quarter and give none. There have been plenty of bumps and bruises on both sides but the pressure was never off for a minute, regardless of what the score happened to be.

Bad Sportsmanship "Unheard of"

But I can recall no instance of a deliberate foul or bad sportsmanship. After the matches were over and possession of the cup decided once more, the teams usually have been broken up to place erstwhile rivals alongside each other as teammates in the open championship and Monty Waterbury Cup events. Gerald Balding helped our Greentree team win the open championship in 1935 and 1936. Before that, the late Capt. Pat Roark played on the championship Hurricane team. Never, after an International Cup battle, has there been a day in which the teams could not share the same locker room like a group of teammates.

That same spirit has marked the big crowds since polo became a real mass sport of noisy, rooting, enthusiastic bleacherites. In these times, it's a pleasant relief to recall that this classic that brings together two great nations in a hard-hitting contact sport has been dominated by such an attitude. The big and often partisan crowds have always been enthusiastic in applause of the invaders. If international sporting events have done anything toward bettering the feeling between nations, I'm sure that the high traditions of the Westchester Cup have contributed in no small measure.

Favorites Win In Women's Team Matches

Beaver Dam Withdraws; Chevy Chase, Army-Navy Congressional Score

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

First team matches of the Women's District Golf Association continued at a routine pace in the third week of play yesterday at Manor, with Chevy Chase, Indian Spring, Congressional and Army and Navy advancing with one-sided victories.

Beaver Dam furnished the only surprise of the day by withdrawing from the play, canceling its scheduled match with the hosts. The points won from Beaver Dam by Chevy Chase and Washington was taken from the records, and it leaves the circuit with four matches and a bye each week.

Mrs. R. C. Mitchell, captain of the team, explained that several of the team members were out of town, and they were not able to place four of the eight players on the tee, enough to hold their place in the competition.

Army and Navy and Columbia's No. 1 duos split even, but the service club team lost only 1½ points in the next three matches in winning, 9 to 3.

Mrs. Bishop Hill and Mrs. Landra Platt, Chevy Chase, led the scoring for the day with a pair of rounds under the 84 mark to spark their team to a 10-2 victory over Washington, that was in second place after beating Argyle and Beaver Dam. They lost the points won against the latter, and dropped to sixth place.

Indian Spring scored 9½ to 2½ over Woodmont, three teams scoring sweeps, led by the top duo of Mrs. Betty Meckley and Mrs. Charlotte Stern. The losers turned in a mild upset, however, as Mrs. Henry Goodman continued her fine play, pairing with Mrs. Gilbert Hahn to defeat Mrs. Alma von Steiner and Mrs. K. S. Giles, 2½ to ½.

Congressional scored a 12-0 shutout over Argyle.

Due to Beaver Dam's withdrawal, the standings have little meaning, but the day found Indian Spring taking first place, a post it is favored to hold through the series.

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

We always approach things like fairs and expositions with secret fear and loathing because we figure the best we are going to get out of them is a couple of sore feet. We owe our broken arches and bowed legs to excessive walking around and about several world and innumerable State and county fairs.

RUNYON

If we can see a fair strictly on our own we can always manage to avoid much fatigue. We take it easy and see just what we want to see and a little at a time. It is when we fall into the hands of local enthusiasts who want us to cover a lot of territory as quickly as possible that our puppies take great punishment.

Thus when we were out in San Francisco recenlty, it was our plan to quietly sneak to Treasure Island, wheret they are holding the Golden Gate International Exposition, and absorb all the necessary sights in our own peculiar fashion. It came as something of a shock to us when we were informed one morning that Mr. Charley Stanton was waiting to show us the fair.

Mr. Stanton was for years a famous editor in the Hearst service, now retired and occupying a position on the executive staff of the fair; and remembering his energy and his enthusiasm for California and anything Californian, we said to ourself, well here is where we get a dusting about that we will remember the rest of our life. Right away we commenced feeling sorry for our feet.

Excellent Job

Imagine then, our surprise and pleasure when, on arriving at the fair grounds with Mr. Stanton, he eyed us in speculative fashion a moment, and then said:

"Do you like to walk?"

"No!" we said, with great emphasis.

"Neither do I," said Mr. Stanton, quickly, and we thought, with some relief in his tone. "Here, boy, come alongside with that wheel chair."

So we saw the San Francisco fair in comfort from the poop deck of a nice easygoing vehicle with a congenial companion and that is the only way to see a fair. We got out of the chair only to occasionally inspect the interior of some building, but in most cases that was not necessary, for they permit the wheel chairs to roll right into the majority of the buildings and you just sit still and look around.

The executives of the San Francisco Fair have done an excellent job. We were told that much of the credit belongs to Everett McKeage, head of the executive staff, a most energetic gentleman of whom the only criticism we can offer is that he picked an office up a flight of stairs that imposed the most walking on us that we were required to do during our visit. The lad motivating our wheel chair said he could not possibly shove 'er up those stairs.

Gas Light Team Leads Pin Tourney

First place in Class B of the Washington City Duckpin Tournament at Columbia Alleys went to the Washington Gas Light team last night, a 1,799 total ousting the Queen Pin five from the coveted spot. Wallach's three-game set of 417 paced the team's effort. The only other major team change was in Class A, where Marlboro Hotel bounce into second with a set of 1,841. Perce Wolfe's 411 was best.

F. Dieterich was outstanding in the singles, the Friendship Church roller checking in a set of 388 for top position in Class B. Top standings in Class E underwent a complete revision when T. A. Riley brought his 353 set over from another class to lead the section. C. Williams rolled 347 for second, E. Collins rolled 342 for third and Paul Greene rolled 337 for fourth.

Important Change In Basketball Rules

New York, May 2 (AP).—An important new basketball rule, designed to discourage teams from committing deliberate fouls to gain possession of the ball, was announced today by the national rules committee at the close of its annual two-day session.

The new regulation, effective immediately, provides that after a free throw on a technical foul the ball will be awarded to the offended team, to be put in play from out-of-bounds at midcourt, whether or not the throw is successful.

Bankers' League Champions With Winners' Trophy

On Fishing

Considerable care should be used by anglers, fishing the Oregon Inlet section of North Carolina for the first time, in their selection of boatmen. Every year when the run is on everyone with a boat within many miles of Manteo and Wanchese comes down to get in on the easy money. If none of the 50 or more good guides is not available, fish from the beach in preference to taking a chance with inexperience on one of the worst bars along the Atlantic Coast.

ACKERMAN

Our first choice for a guide in this section is Sam Tilett. He knows his water, his boat and the fishing. Should he be engaged for the day you might want he will do everything possible to get a good boatman for you. And when he doesn't bring home the fish, they just aren't being taken.

Other guides, born in the sound of the surf like Sam, and every bit as capable are Clyde Hassell, Glenn C. Dough, Kenneth Ward, H. C. Smith, Lee Dough, Otis Dough, Alfred Gard and Caleb Brickhouse, at Manteo. Dewey Tillett, Wayland Baum and Willis Ethridge, at Wanchese. Charles and Herbert Perry at Kittyhawk. Very few are booked up solid, because the blues have been slow in coming in under the beach. However, with the channel bass run going so strong there is not much time to be lost. If possible, write at least a week ahead, or phone Wanchese 123. After 7 in the evening it is only 65 cents.

Trophy Award

Starting now, all shots are fair for a chance at the large cup offered by the Neptune Grill in the Earle Building for the best fish taken from the waters of the Chesapeake or any of its tributaries during the six-month period until November 1.

In addition, there are monthly prizes, and prizes for each and every one of the 15 various classes which include catfish, trout, black bass, fallfish, sunfish, tautogs, sheepshead, striped bass, drum (bas red and black), bluefish, weakfish, hardheads, spot, perch (yellow, white and King William) and cabio.

Shark Contest

We noted a shark contest a few weeks ago to be conducted by the Ocean City Reel and Montague Rod companies along the Atlantic Coast this summer. Now we have another to add to the books from the Cape May area of southern Jersey. In the County's Annual Fishing Contest, the shark has been placed in the gamefish class and an award will be made to the fisherman or woman landing the biggest specimen by rod and reel.

When we were knee-high we classed sharks as tough hombres in that country of the shifting sand dunes (yes, that's where we hail from), but now their man-eating tendencies are rated poppycock and the specimens found there are seldom rated as dangerous, but withal provide anglers with some of their keenest battles.

It seems that it is also rated as delicious eating. We found that out a quarter of a century ago on the Georgia coast, where the firm white meat, much like pork, was always in demand. Now, when Jersey commercial fishermen take one in their nets it is sent to market and, strange to say, they get a good price for it.

Anacostia Beats Tech, 4-3; Central Upset by Wilson, 6-4

Roosevelt Beaten, 7-4, By Raiders; Four-way Tie in Western Group

Indians Continue To Lead Eastern Interhigh Division

Shooting from its customary underdog position, the baseball force of Anacostia High nearly locked up first place in the East division of the interhigh series yesterday at Tech, pulling up with a close 4-to-3 victory after jumping into a 3-to-0 lead in the first inning.

Through nine safeties bounced off the bats of the Manual Trainers, it was the heads-up hurling of the Indians' Art Faircloth that finally spelled the second victory of the series for the team. It was pitching that won the game, but more than that it was a spectacular catch, accomplished by Anacostia's Jack Burroughs, left fielder, in the eighth inning, that was directly responsible.

Tech was staging a late, but convincing, rally when Burroughs came up with his brilliant fielding effort, and had the ball dropped from his glove the Trainers would have had the game on ice. Two men were on the paths when chunky Warren Fields, Tech backstop, poled out what seemed a certain hit near the stands in left field. Burroughs set out for the ball, but fell to his knees. He recovered his balance and made the catch with his back to the batter and running at top speed.

That was the third of four powder-laden comeback McKinley attempted. In the inning before that, the seventh, Tech brought its total within one of Anacostia's with three hits that went for a brace of runs. Johnny Placos stopped that rallly with another slightly lucky catch over his head.

Wells and Burke Winning Pitchers For Wilson, Western

A slight case of overconfidence, aided by a string of five costly errors, dropped Central's baseball team from its top-heavy favorite ranking in the west division of the interhigh series yesterday, the Mount Pleasanters being bound and gagged by Woodrow Wilson's Joe Wells and whipped by a 6-to-4 score.

Just as startling was the loss suffered by Roosevelt's heavy-hitting nine at the hands of once-beaten Western on the latter's diamond, 7 to 4. Results of the two games, both decided upsets, threw the west section into a four-way deadlock with each of the teams having won one game and lost another.

Credited With Victory

It was Johnny Burke, making his first series mound start, who was credited with Western's surprising victory, but the game was really won by the Raiders' Larkin Sarbacher. With the bases chuck full in the third inning, Sarbacher smashed out a homer that wound up a six-run spree of the Westerners and put the game out of Roosevelt's desperate reach. Eddie Vermillion, usually a dependable hurler, was taken out in that awful third after getting out only one man and walking three. His place was taken by Meiklejohn, who went the rest of the way and pitched shutout ball.

The surprising part of Western's victory was that its seven runs were realized off only two hits, though one was a homer. Burke allowed nine safeties but received considerably better backing. Two double plays when they counted most went to Western, both starting off the stick efforts of Ernie Vitale, Rider third sacker.

Roosevelt's first run came in the first inning on the heels of a single by Waters and three successive walks issued by Burke. Tom Howard pushed across another with a sacrifice fly. In the eighth Roosevelt attempted a rally and two more runs resulted, these off three hits and a pair of misplays.

Take 3-0 Lead

Over at Central, where the confidence of the defenders was being summarily drenched, Wilson went into a 3-to-0 lead in the second inning and was never headed. It added a single tally in the fifth and two in the sixth, and then braced itself to withstand a Blue uprising in the eighth and ninth. Coach Jack Ray commented after the game, "We were closing the gap by leaps and bounds, but the game wasn't long enough."

Dick Rozzelle was on the mound for the losers, and as in his first victorious interhigh start, he was wild at first but settled down nicely. DiBlasi, Fenlon, Farr and Steiner were responsible for errors behind him, though he also helped the Wilson cause with seven passes. He struck out ten batsmen as compared to Wells' three, though the latter gave up only three bases on balls.

Bees Waste Chances, Lose To Cards, 2-1

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 2.—The failure of the league-leading Boston Bees to grasp wide-open opportunities today cost them their first home game of the season, 2-1, to the St. Louis Cardinals. The defeat was offset by Cincinnati's surrender to the aroused New York Giants.

Three times the Bees had scoring chances, but Bob Bowman, rookie right-hander, bore down hard when they filled the bases. He gave the Bees six passes and all of their half-dozen hits, which included a two-bagger by Al Simmons.

Mazzera Beats Bad Throw Home With Browns' Second Run

Nats

Catcher Billy Sullivan made a wild throw to third in an attempt to catch Charley Gelbert on the headend of a double steal with Ossie Bluege.

Two Washington hits drove Van Atta out of the box in the fourth and the Nats scored three times to take a 4-2 lead. Myer, who singled, went to second on a balk, and Gelbert scored him with a double to left. Relief Pitcher Fred Johnson's first act was to walk Bluege and then Rick Ferrell scored two runs with a double to left center.

Gelbert drove in a run in the fifth with a single to left to set the Nats up in a 5-to-2 lead, and then the Browns crashed through with 4 runs, belting Haynes out of the box. Buddy Myer's muff of a throw from Charley Gelbert didn't help Haynes, but neither did a single that he pitched to Billy Sullivan. Only one of the 4 St. Louis runs of the inning was scored against Haynes. The other 3 were rustled out of Harry Kelly, who walked a pinch hitter and then pitched a single to Thompson and a destructive 2-run double to Mazzera.

Against a young left-hander named Ewald Pyle, up from Memphis, the Nats went to work on the Browns' 6-to-5 lead in the sixth. Pyle walked Case and Lewis and then Estalella beat out a bunt to fill the bases with none out. Pyle was lifted and Ed Cole got the job. Pinch-hitter Sammy West drove in the tying run with a long fly and Buddy Myer put the Nats in front, 7 to 6, with a single to center.

They stayed in front, thanks to that well-tagged three-bagger by Wasdell in the ninth against the fifth Brownie pitcher, a tall fellow named Harry Kimberlin.

Trumpet Players Win Softball Encounter, 21-6

Trumpet players make the best softball players—or so say the musicians of the Earle and Capitol theaters, who are engaged in a series.

Bob Mullinx, Earle trumpeter, pitched his team to a 21-to-6 victory over the Capitol men yesterday on the Monument Grounds and avenged a 15-to-6 defeat Earle suffered at the hands of Capitol's trumpeter-pitcher a week ago.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson,
(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Six Nats figured in the first Man of the Month award for May, on the basis of their performances in yesterday's 9-7 victory over the Browns at St. Louis.

To Charley Gelbert, two points, because he drove in two runs with a single and double, and played a brilliant game in the field.

To Jimmy Wasdell, two points, because his ninth inning triple proved to be the Nats' winning margin.

To Buddy Myer, two points, because he made two singles, and started the double play that choked off the Browns' rally in the ninth.

To Rick Ferrell two points, because his double in the fourth inning drove in two runs and because he singled to drive in another in the ninth.

To George Case, one point, because despite going hitless he stole two bases and made several fancy catches in centerfield.

To Buddy Lewis, one point, because he started two fast double plays when Harry Kelley was in trouble in the late innings.

Interior Nine Wins Over Engraving

Interior Department's hard-hitting baseball team smashed out a 13-to-6 victory over Bureau of Engraving yesterday in the Department Baseball League in a six-inning game.

The winners scored at least once in every frame, the most profitable being the fifth, in which four runs came across. Bureau was held to double scores in the first, fourth and sixth.

W. and L. High Nine Defeats Eastern, 9-3

The losing streak which Eastern High's baseball nine began in its first interhigh start continued yesterday at Arlington, where the Little Generals of Washington-Lee earned a 9-to-3 victory off the pitching of two Tide moundsmen.

For a short time—until Washington-Lee had its first time at bat—Eastern was out in front by virtue of one counter as the game started. Then W.-L. scored twice and managed to come out ahead though Eastern knotted the score in the second and fourth periods. Shanty Havener pitched one of the best games of his abbreviated career to limit the White Tide to only three safeties and a pair of charity passes.

Most of Eastern's first string was kept on the sidelines throughout the game, probably accounting for the one-sidedness of the final score. Johnny Deevers started for the losers but gave way to Warren Earhardt midway of the first period when his control left him.

Baering Down

Roberto Ortiz Chased in First Minor League Tilt

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, May 2.—Gangling Roberto Ortiz, training camp pitching sensation with the Washington Nationals, made his debut with the Nats' farm club, Charlotte, here last night and was anything but a rousing success.

The huge Cuban started against Richmond and was chased in the fifth inning. He escaped the loss, however, because the Hornets staged late rallies to win a wild game, 10-8.

Ortiz, who never got a chance to pitch a major league game for the Nats, although his speed was compared with Walter Johnson's by overenthusiastic scribes covering the grapefruit circuit, allowed Richmond two hits and three runs in his four-inning trick. He walked five and fanned four.

At bat the 6-foot 4-inch Cuban was more impressive, singling once in two trips and driving in a run. It is believed he will be tested in the outfield, where his hitting power will count every day.

N. T. S. Scores 3 in Ninth To Beat Blair

The National Training School baseball team came up with three runs in the ninth inning yesterday to defeat Blair High School, 8-7, in a game on the Blair diamond.

Witt went the route for the winners, allowing eight hits, the same number as three Blair pitchers yielded.

A pair of errors, a walk and a single were the components of the winning rally.

Challedon's Fast Drill Overshadows Johnstown's Arrival

Excellent Time for Derby Route

Maryland Trained Horse Travels Full Distance in 2 Minutes, 8 Seconds

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—The "big fellow," William Woodward's Johnstown, pulled into Derbytown today, but not even the arrival of the Kentucky Derby favorite could take a thing away from the manner in which Challedon sky-rocketed into the picture with a fancy bit of stepping at Churchill Downs.

Just as Woodward's long-striding son of Jamestown was unloaded from a railroad car and marched up the middle of the street two blocks to the time-honored racing track, Challendon reeled off a full Derby-distance mile-and-a-quarter workout in 2 minutes 8 seconds to steal the show from the entire collection of thoroughbreds on hand.

"An Excellent Move"

He went around the cuppy track, far different from the Maryland going on which he has been working, as though he really liked it. In the opinion of Trainer Lou Schaeffer, the little former jockey, it was "an excellent move" as his candidate for the necklace of roses knocked off the quarter in 0:26, the half in 0:52 1-5, the three-quarters in 1:18 and then finished off the mile in 1:43-1-5 on his way to the fastest time yet worked by any Derby eligible over the mile and a quarter at the Downs.

"Definitely," Schaeffer emphasized, "it pleased me. He showed that he liked the slower going here at the Downs and we'll be out there Saturday. They'll have to beat us to the wire."

The closest any eligible has come to the W. L. Brann colt's time for the mile and a quarter over the lovely Downs racing oval was the 2:10 recorded by Mrs. Bessie Franzheim's Xalapa Clown several days ago, and there still remains some doubt that the son of Eternal will get to the post for the Derby.

The time was somewhat off the 2:06 chalked up by Earl Sande-trained Heather Broom at Keeneland yesterday, but any of the local folk can tell you the Lexington track is plenty faster than the Downs footing.

With the arrival of the three Eastern candidates, as well as Heather Broom, which Sande brought in from Keeneland this morning, all candidates who have even the faintest hope of answering the call to the post were on hand.

Only one, C. H. Trotter's Silent Witness, still remained to be heard from, and since no word has been received that Trotter has shipped from Narragansett, it was assumed hereabouts that the son of Busy American-Edith Alice would not be on deck, despite reports that the colt has shown all the Derby attributes in his recent outings.

At The Post

Dear Al,

That Arthur Brown who participated in Monday's big daily double was Art, the thin man, of WOL. Joe Hernandez's voice didn't go so well opening day over the P. A. system so the engineers spent this morning trying to tune up. Webb Everett and Jack Mackenzie are visitors from California. Everett is racing secretary at Hollywood Park and Santa Anita and Mackenzie is general manager at Bing Crosby's track. They are trying to interest horsemen in the Hollywood meeting. President - General Manager Al Boyle says prospects are for a fine Charles Town meeting. The long session has appealed to horsemen and a good grade of steeds will be on hand. Slow Motion, owned by J. W. Y. Martin, was sent a half in 0:52 this morning and goes in the Jennings Handicap next Monday. Former Jockey Pat Brady saddled his fifteenth winner of the year when Chimney Top got home on the opening card. Apprentice Vincent Polk was not in action today. He was aboard Lady Roma when the mare was forced into the fence going into the first turn and injured his leg. He is not seriously hurt, however. Emmet Murphy says to tell his friends that he did not have the daily double today. In today's steeplechase, Jockey N. Brooks appeared to be a very disinterested young man. He was tossed off the back of Grumpy, the Charles Town wonder. However, when only three horses finished he caught Grumpy and remounted to collect the $50 fourth money. The fans got a laugh when Grumpy almost went down while jogging. Pimlico got off on the right foot as far as betting is concerned. The opening day crowd bet $292.863 or $19,077 more than last year. This is a true comparison because both were Mondays. Mutuel Manager Mort Mahoney believes that interest in the daily double in this State is decreasing. Monday the pool was slightly more than $13,000 compared with $16,000 a year ago. Oddly, there was more money bet on the eighth race than any other. Another oddity is the fact that the gate receipts Monday were $9 less than in 1938.

BILL.

First race—Stepinfred has early foot as shown in his Havre race when third to Bay Carse and Air Stream. He gets high figure and Stevenson will ride. Spout Run was a beaten favorite running with the top horse in the race mentioned above and should provide most of the contention. Covey raced well at Keeneland.

Second race—Nansemond falls in with a cheap field in this event and figures slightly best. He has shown fair efforts with better grade platers and will be fit for this. Balcony won her last at Havre and will be the one to beat. Cornwallis gets a good figure and should show if he gets in.

Third race—Sapelo had an imposing string of victories to his credit last year in which he whipped top line steeplechasers. He's a Hitchcock protege and should be fit. Prattler was king of the steeplechasers at Laurel last fall, but there wasn't much in behind him. Court Time is a threat on his best effort.

Fourth race — Predestined has failed to show much with high grade platers, but drops down in this heat and is well placed. Has been working well and should win. Puzzle Dance was second to Graustark at Havre and will be the chief threat. Key Man can better poor recent races.

Fifth race—Heelfly needed his one start at Havre to put him on edge for this. He stands out in class and should win despite high weight. Roman Lady and High Velocity, coupled in the Metcalf entry, appear next in line. Pernie displayed excellent form at Havre and may prove dangerous.

Sixth Race—Pompoon indicates from recent workouts that he is ready for this distance. He has class, the speed and is one of the best handicap horses produced in Maryland. The Brann entry of Challephen and Aethelwold figure to be two, three on the merits of their Havre races. Isolator will be on edge for his best after his fourth to Thanksgiving in the Philadelphia.

Seventh race—Invermark, making his first start of the season, was a three-length winner over White Sand when they met at Havre. Invermark improves with racing and should have little trouble repeating his winning performance. White Sand was poorly rated in that heat, but with a better ride, figures next best. Bain Marie for the small award.

Eighth race—Shako was an early trailer in his last Havre race, but closed strongly when called upon. Money showed for him in that event and, going a longer route today, has the edge. Nancy Mae can be relied upon for an honest effort, is in form and rates next best. Counter Pass showed fair effort behind Mondoit at Havre; should show.

Best bet—Pompoon.

ANGUS took command at once, drew out gradually while fencing well, was put to drive when TROLIGHT challenged approaching final fence and was eased up at end. IRISH LANCER fenced poorly from start and closed gamely on final flat. LORO went well placed from start, landed poorly at ninth fence and dropped back thereafter. GRUMPY lost rider at twelfth fence, but was remounted and finished fourth. LESLIE MYER was closest to pace when he lost rider at eleventh fence.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PONEMAH, $4.40, $3.10, $3.00; AMBUSCADE, $8.60, $4.40; SCORCH, $4.40.

PONEMAH had speed to go to front at once, drew out, saved ground and won with speed in reserve. AMBUSCADE was hard ridden from start and held on stubbornly in final test. SCORCH broke in tangle, was rushed to contention and closed full of energy. ONISAC lacked early speed and improved position gradually. ASTER LADY was caught in tangle soon after break and was pulled up.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:16½. Off 4:20. Winner, C. O. Ferguson's dk. br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRADIS, $20.80, $9.80, $6.00; TANGANYIKA, $8.10, $5.70; THE SERF, $3.90.

PRADIS, racing forwardly and on outside of leaders from start, rallied gamely when shaken up and came with excellent courage in closing stages. TANGANYIKA was allowed to settle into best stride, was outrun for half, improved position steadily and came between horses to close gamely. THE SERF was forced to run between SOARING HIGH and PRADIS for a half and was in close quarters nearing finish. PART ONE raced wide from start. BANNER GIRL slipped through on rail to get to front and faltered in closing sixteenth. TOP QUEEN ran very dull race.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Rennert Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:45½. Off 4:48½. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRAILER, $29.90, $6.70, $2.90; SEA CAPTAIN, $3.30, $2.30; EASY MON, $2.40.

TRAILER, steadied along on outside and close to pace in early stages, came around EASY MON and ROYAL TEDDY to take command and withstood a hard drive to take camera decision while in center of track. SEA CAPTAIN stood flat-footed when break came, was distant trailer for a furlong, saved much ground while improving position with rush, took lead between calls nearing finish and tired suddenly. EASY MON set pace accompanied by ROYAL TEDDY and weakened gradually in stretch run. BELAY lacked early speed, came wide into stretch and was held perfectly safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:16. Off 5:17. Winner, H. Bruce's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENERAL MOWLEE, $6.40, $4.30, $3.50; GREEDAN, $6.60, $4.20; BURNER, $6.40.

GENERAL MOWLEE shook off early challenges of ZELITONE, gained clear lead approaching half pole, drew out gradually and won with speed in reserve. GREEDAN lacked early speed, worked way to contention and was best of the others. BURNER was hard ridden throughout and could not threaten seriously. PASCUA closed full of run.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start bad from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:46½. Off 5:49½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIOTOUS, $13.30, $7.60, $4.70; LAST SCAMP, $10.10, $6.40; MISS SELECTION, $4.10.

RIOTOUS assumed command in opening furlong, was rated while setting pace, shook off determined bid of SYLVIA G. approaching stretch and withstood drive to hold LAST SCAMP safe. The latter improved position after a half and came with good energy in closing test. MISS SELECTION was squeezed back going to first turn, was in close quarters along backstretch, swung wide for racing room and hung at end. SYLVIA G. rated while close to pace, moved up menacingly and faltered. SQUABBLE closed ground from a slow beginning.

Sea Captain Loses By Nose At Pimlico

Trailer Captures Feature in Photo Finish; Easy Man 3rd

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Md., May 2.—Sea Captain, prominent in New York racing this season, found the task of spotting his rivals some 15 lengths too exacting and, after as game a try as has been seen on any race track he lost a nose decision to Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Trailer. Sea Captain pulled a "Coolidge" at the start, not choosing to run, and when Jockey Ruperto Donoso finally got him into action, the other members of the field of five were headed for the turn.

But Sea Captain was not going to lose without a fight and he darted along in the wake of the company as Easy Mon, Royal Teddy and Trailer ran virtually abreast to the half pole. Jockey Leo Fallon had Trailer on the outside and out of possible trouble.

As the leaders swung into the stretch, they came off the rail and Trailer, on the outside, and Sea Captain, cutting the inside fence, appeared to be the two to battle it out. Inside the sixteenth pole Sea Captain took a slight lead as his host of backers among the 8,000 fans yelled for him to take the $2,500 purse. But in the final jumps, Sea Captain's gallant effort told on him and he faltered, ever so slightly, but enough to give Trailer an edge.

The Vanderbilt colors came to the finish line in front for the first time since last winter in the first race of the day. Paradise Girl, a daughter of Balko, came home a length and a half in front of High Bud, to pay $6.90 and start a $58.20 daily double pay-off.

The Calumet Farm's Greeny put the finishing touches on the twin wager in the second race by leading 11 sprinters to the wire. Evening Light was second and Red Glare was third. Greeny paid an individual mutuel of $13.70 and was the first of three winners ridden by Jockey Mannie Berg, who seems to have shaken off the half-milers.

Jockey Charlie Stevenson, thanks to the metal skull caps that are compulsory equipment for Maryland riders, escaped serious injury in that second race. He was riding Lady Elgin, owned by the Shandon Farms, and the filly was near the back of the field when she stumbled and Stevenson fell with her.

Jamaica Bookies Blow Horn When Odds Change

New York, May 2 (AP).—The stewards of Jamaica Race Track today put into effect a new rule for the protection of bettors as the result of last Saturday's incident when a horse was scratched and new odds established apparently without the knowledge of many bettors.

Acting at the request of the State Racing Commission, the stewards ordered that a horn be sounded when the bets must be rearranged. The programs will carry a note, notifying the spectators of the meaning of the horn.

The action resulted from the scratching of Pontius after the bookmakers had started to take bets on a race won by W. H. Gallagher's Forty Eight. Forty Eight was the 11 to 5 choice in the first odds but when Pontius was scratched, the bookmakers called off all bets and quoted him at 8 to 5.

Under the rules of Oral Wagering, bettors betting on Forty Eight at 11 to 5 were given their money back. However, many claimed they should have collected on their wager after the horse won. A few bookmakers did pay off at 11 to 5 but the majority ruled "no bets," and paid off only on the second line.

Horses to Watch At Pimlico Track

BIT BY BIT—Was forced to take up sharply when Lady Elgin fell, had previously worked well. Watch this one.

MANILA BAY—This 4-year-old filly will show improvement when raced over a distance of ground.

THE SERF—Was messed about badly in the roghest race of the Maryland season. Will likely show improvement in next effort.

ARDEN LASS—This 2-year-old has been overshadowed by the performances of her stablemates, IMPRUDENT and NOSY, but her works prove she is of stake caliber.

BENJAM—The Bomar Stable representative has always been partial to this course and will handle a good bunch before long.

U. S. Paper Money Shipments Abroad Peak for 15 Years

New York, May 2 (AP).—Desire of Europeans to put their money into "safe" currency has caused the greatest shipments of American paper money abroad in the 15 years the Federal Reserve Bank of New York has kept records of such shipments, the bank's monthly review disclosed today.

Shipments by ten New York City commercial banks in March totaled $25,000,000, and in April, the review said, "the amount appears to have been substantially larger." Most of the currency required for foreign shipment is in large denomination notes. For April, there were unusual withdrawals of notes of from $50 to $10,000 denomination.

In addition to the large amounts shipped abroad, many foreigners have bought American currency to keep in safe deposit boxes in this country. Most of the demand is from Belgium, Switzerland and the Netherlands.

The gold rush to this country continued throughout April with imports of the metal reaching $575,000,-000 and bringing the total for the first four months to $1,200,000,000, "an amount about equal to the annual world production of gold and about four-fifths as large as the average annual increase in this country's gold stocks in the years 1934-1938 inclusive."

March Steel Pay Rolls Highest in 16 Months

New York, May 2 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute reported today that March pay rolls in the Steel Institute, totaling $84,174,000, were the highest in 16 months. The pay rolls compared with $57,044,000 in February and $51,386,000 in March, 1938.

An average of 455,000 men were employed by the steel industry in March, compared with 453,000 in February and 455,000 in March, 1938. Wages in March averaged 82.8 cents an hour for 34.7 hours a week, compared with 82.7 cents for 33.5 hours a week in February and 81.8 cents for 26.7 hours a week in March, 1938.

New York, May 2 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange today reported collateral borrowings by members totaled $547,443,175, as of April 30, a decrease of $107,421,496 from the March 31 total. This compared with the record high of $8,549,-383,979 in October, 1929, and a low since 1929 of $241,599,943 in August, 1932.

"The conditions under which American business is operating today were not made in America. They are world-wide. In an economic sense the World War has never ended. Business needs today what the whole world and every human being in it needs—peace. The peoples of the world need more than merely peace from day to day. They need the assurance of lasting peace so that men and industry may plan for a future which they can face with certainty."

Kans. Standard Oil Offers $50 a Share For Its Own Stock

New York, May 2 (AP).—Standard Oil Co. of Kansas has notified stockholders it is willing to buy additional shares of its own capital stock at $50 a share, less transfer taxes, it was disclosed today.

The offer was made following action by the New York Stock Exchange in calling a hearing to consider delisting the stock because of "the concentration of a large percentage of issued shares in the hnads of the company and its management."

The offer to stockholders is to purchase stock to the extent of surplus available to it under Delaware law and restrictions in the provisions of the indenture securing its outstanding notes. The offer expires May 13.

The offer says that should the total number of shares tendered exceed the company's surplus, the company will apportion its purchases ratably over the total number tendered. The last recorded sale of the stock in the New York Stock Exchange was at $46 a share. The company's headquarters is at Houston, Tex.

Wheat Prices Hold Steady In Swings

Profit Taking Wipes Out Advance to Ten-Month Highs

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 2.—First buyers, then sellers were aggressors in today's excited wheat pit as prices swung up and down in a nervous trade reflecting divergent views as to crop conditions in the winter wheat belt.

Early gains of a cent that put quotations around the highest levels in ten months, with May wheat selling at 75⅞ and new crop contracts almost at 74, were wiped out quickly when resting purchase orders had been absorbed and profit taking appeared. The market steadied around the previous close but then dipped as much as ⅝ cent around noon, only to rally again. Final quotations were ¼ lower to ¼ higher compared with yesterday's finish, July, 73@73⅛; September, 73⅛@73¼.

A big international wheat trade and higher prices at Winnipeg and Liverpool, where gains amounted to 1 to 1¼ and ⅜ to 1⅝ cents, respectively, helped to bolster the Chicago market at the close. British interests bought more than 2,000,000 bushels from Australia, Canada and Argentine and it was reported Spain recently had taken more than 10,-000,000 bushels, mostly from Argentina. North American sales totaled 1,250,000 bushels, including small parcels of domestic hard winters from the Gulf.

Corn closed ½-1 cent higher; July, 50⅞@51; September, 51⅞; oats, ⅛ off to ⅛ up; Rye ⅛-¼ up; lard, 10 to 13 lower.

Old Cotton Crop Prices Decline: New Months Up

New York, May 2 (AP).—The cotton futures market upset the pattern of recent sessions today as old crop deliveries declined and distant months advanced. Closing prices were 7 points lower to as much higher.

Belief that vigorous opposition to the export subsidy plan gave the measure only a slim chance of becoming law prompted support of distant deliveries, brokers said.

Early sales of 7,000 bales of July by a leading spot interest were taken care of by trade buying, plus demand from Liverpool and a leading professional operator. When this demand subsided, however, offerings from Bombay brokers and hedge selling forced old crops to the lows of the day. May liquidation was active.

Except for some low temperatures in parts of the belt, weather was regarded as generally favorable for new crop preparations.

Prices Edge Higher in Less Dull Trading Quiet Foreign News Welcome to Street Railroad Bonds Feature Moderate Rise

New York, May 2.—The stock market roared through a day of 447,320 shares today which, on the basis of current commission rates, is enough to pay the runners. On the basis of recent past performances, this was a pretty good day and the brokerage fraternity was duly thankful, but it poses the old question of what is to become of the business of Wall street as it has been known.

Things are still so quiet in the financial district that you can hear a price drop and the brokerage fraternity is going to take to the numbers racket if this thing keeps up much longer. A popular pastime at the moment is a pool on just what day the United States gold stock will cross the $16,000,000,000 mark. All of which is similar to the annual pool of the Alaska sourdoughs on the day, hour and minute that the Tanana River will break its annual ice jam.

The stock market edged slightly higher today, the composite average closing up 0.38 point, a gain that exceeded the entire fluctuation between the highs and lows the day before. Most of the groups improved but actually the changes were not far different from those of yesterday, for they were largely fractional and there was nothing in the day's news that could be counted upon to change the ideas of those who observe and consider, which is Webster's definition of speculators.

Foreign Tension Less

On foreign news, which has shaped our investment policies for many months, there was a welcome quiet and the opinion is gaining in Wall street that the tension has lifted for a while. The best informed belief below Canal street is that the Danzig question will resolve itself into a deal which will fall short of war. The question of Germany's colonies, lost after the last World War, is not expected to be raised at this time, partly because Germany and the other world powers will be kept busy enough on their more immediate questions.

An advantage of the relative quiet abroad is that investors and all others in the country are turning their attention at long last to our own problems and in this connection there was general approval today of the stories emanating from Washington that Treasury officials have drawn up a tax program which would, if enacted, remove many of the current objections to the Administration's past program of penalizing business. The wonder is that something intelligent along this line was not done years ago.

The market today had few features. Most active stock was Chrysler which ran up 1⅝ points, while General Motors also did well, adding 1¼. Glenn Martin led the aviations with a jump of 1⅛, and good performances were turned in by Curtiss Wright and North American Aviation. Steel gained 1⅛ and Bethlehem 1⅝. Socony was active and a mite higher in the oils, and North American topped the utilities. Kennecott was well supported among the metals. There was a fair demand for the sugars.

Major commodities took on a mixed appearance after the recent strength in wheat. Trading in the latter was nervous and the close ¼ cent lower to ¼ cent higher, while cotton futures ended 7 points lower to 7 points higher.

Railroad Bonds Advance

Railroad bonds featured an orderly advance in the bond section of the Stock Exchange today. United States Governments were slightly more active and most of them regained losses sustained in Monday's dealings, three representative Treasury issues recording new highs in the late trading.

In the foreign section, German bonds were more active, with German General Electric 6s of 1948 up 2 and Hungary 4½s of 1979 ahead 2¼. Breda 7s of 1954 rose 3⅜, while Poland 7s of 1947 were down 2.

Local tractions were again in fair demand, Manhattan Railway liens again reaching new highs and with both Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit and the Interborough issues making sharp gains. In the rail section, Atchison stamped readjustments, Michigan Central Air Line, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway obligations featured with price advances, activity or both. Scattered buying was in evidence in Baltimore & Ohio, Erie and New York Central issues. West Shore 4s were off 2 points to a new 1939 low.

Improvement was general in active utilities, ranging from fractions to more than 2 points and including such issues as National Power & Light 6s, American Water Works 6s, Commonwealth Edison issues, Duquesne Light 3½s and Philadelphia Co. 5s.

In the industrial section, Steels went ahead along with the advance in stocks elsewhere. Lehigh Coal issues, reflecting the news, made advances of several points each.

19 of 20 Steel Concerns Gain Over Year Ago

But Only 7 Out of 13 Companies Earn Their Preferred Dividends

New York, May 2.—Out of a total of 20 steel corporations so far reporting first quarter earnings, 19 bettered their figures for a year earlier, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today. Total earnings (before preferred dividends) for the quarter were $10,976,998, against a deficit of $3,998,969 a year before.

However, when it is considered that preferred dividend requirements for these 20 companies are $11,000,000 a quarter, it will be seen that, taken as a group, nothing was earned on the common. Records of the individual companies differed, however. Some earned their preferred dividends with something left over for the common.

Because of preferred dividend requirements, however, only seven of the 13 steel companies which had deficits a year ago moved sufficiently out of the red to earn anything on the common for the first quarter. Six companies continued to show deficits on the common, including three of the four largest in the industry.

Aggregate gains reflected largely the higher rate of ingot operations for the industry—an avreage of 54 per cent of capacity in the first 1939 quarter, against 32 per cent in the first quarter of 1938. Of the 20 companies, 13 operated in the red during the first quarter of 1938, but 10 of these returned to the black in the opening three months of this year.

U. S. Steel†	$1,292,151	$660,551
Bethlehem	994,908	2,409,000
Republic Steel†	3,062,564	532,899

Acme Steel	969	339,872
Detroit Steel†	48,806	92,408
Copperweld Steel	131,458	200,236
Total	†$3,998,969	$10,976,998

†Deficit.

In general, first quarter operations of the industry were unsatisfactory. Although the aggregate steel making rate in the first quarter of 1939 was approximately 70 per cent higher than in the like months last year, comparison was with an unusually low base. Moreover, much of the tonnage shipped covered the low prices in effect during the price-cutting of last October.

Armament Copper In Heavy Demand

New York, May 2 (AP).—Inquiries for more than 4,000,000 pounds of copper to be used presumably for armament purposes were received by the metal trades today.

Of the total it was said that 1,500,000 pounds was being sought direct from producers. The United States Navy has called for tenders around May 10 on about 1,160,000 pounds of electrolytic copper and for additional tenders about May 17 on 1,500,000 pounds of Lake copper, the metal which contains minute quantities of silver and arsenic and is mined in northern Michigan.

Deficit Is Less Than Estimate By President

Expenditures for 10 Months Are 2 Billion Under the Schedule

By the Associated Press.

Treasury figures for the first ten months of the current fiscal year indicated yesterday that the Federal deficit would fall substantially short of the $4,072,259,000 estimated by President Roosevelt in January.

At the end of April, with only two months left to go until the year ends on June 30, the Treasury's income amounted to $4,658,520,479, or only about $860,000,000 under the estimate for the full year. Meanwhile, expenditures amounting to $7,550,869,-985 were about $2,040,000,000 behind schedule.

Officials have indicated that a smaller-than-anticipated deficit would result from the fact that revenue was slightly more than expected, and that expenditures have lagged somewhat. For instance, the Public Works Administration, which allotted $1,000,000,000 for projects last fall under the emergency spending program, has disbursed less than $240,000,000 in ten months. PWA construction had been going on, but some of the payments from the Federal Treasury must await completion of the projects.

WPA, as usual, led Federal spending, disbursing $1,899,537,896 in the ten months, compared with $1,148,-192,640 in the similar months of the previous year.

The deficit at the end of the ten months was $2,892,349,506, compared with $1,093,353,238 a year ago.

The public debt, however, has risen to a new high of $40,062,945,32[illegible] which is $2,898,205,012 more than it was the the beginning of the fiscal year.

New York, May 2 (AP).—The National City Bank of New York today was awarded an issue of $35,-700,000 in serial bonds of the City of New York at a net interest cost basis of 2.713008 per cent. It was one of the largest bond issues the city has made in recent years.

Kennecott Copper Now Operating At 60% Capacity

New York, May 2 (AP).—Kennecott Copper Corporation, one of the largest producers, currently is operating at 60 per cent of capacity, Stephen Birch, chairman, told stockholders at the annual meeting today. The chairman added that first quarter earnings were at the annual rate of $1.09 a share before depletion, or about 27 cents a share for the three months.

Kennecott's estimated capital expenditures for 1939 run between $4,000,000 and $4,750,000 said E. T. Standard, president.

Officails reported that copper sales during April for the industry as a whole were by far the best for any months this year.

Regarding the proposed Chilean export tax on copper standard said there is now pending in Chile a bill which in all probability will eventually be enacted which would increase the corporation's income tax by an additional 15 per cent, making the grand total 33 per cent.

The corporation has important copper properties in Chile, besides its Western domestic production.

London, May 2—The stock market brightened in late dealings today, although activity remained comparatively low. British gilt-edged bonds and European loans were firm. Substantial gains spotted the transatlantic group. Oils slanted ahead after a slow opening and mining shares, rubbers and domestic rails were evenly maintained. Industrials failed to attract much attention either way.

Paris—Prices in the bourse advanced briskly today as trading broadened. Rentes closed 20 to 115 centimes up and Bank of France gained 110 francs. Suez Canal was boosted 270 francs and Royal Dutch nearly 100.

Liverpool — General buying of wheat, which reflected active demand for cash wheat by millers and the Far East, left final prices ⅜ to ⅞ penny higher today. Cotton futures closed 2 to 8 points ahead. Buying was prompted by belief the United States export subsidy plan might fall through. The tight supply of spot cotton was also a bullish factor.

Wheat Crop Values Climb 10% in Week

Upturn Seems to Offer Solution for Disposal Of Surplus in Storage

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 2.—The value of the American farmer's wheat today was 10 per cent higher than a week ago, the sharpest rise in the grain market in almost a year.

The sudden upturn, coming opportunely a few wekes prior to the start of 1939 harvesting, answered grain traders' players for business and offered a solution to the knotty problem of disposing of millions of bushels of wheat stored under government loans.

Wtihin a week blackboard quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade have been chalked up seven cents to the highest level since early last summer, when the market was on its way down from the nine-year top established in 1937.

Largely because of the first unfavorable cro preports of hte season from the winter wheat belt, where harvesting may begin by the end of this month, buying broadened sharply, breathing new life into the futures market and spreading smiles in the wheat pit where deepest gloom has prevailed for six months.

Up From 5-Year Lows

Although the price bulge has been at the expense of producers whose grain may have deteriorated because of dry weather, it has put values 7 to 15 cents above the five-year lows reached earlier in the season. The range follwos:

	Close yesterday	1938-39 low	Year ago
May wheat	75-74⅞	60¼	80¾-⅝
July	73-72⅞	61½	78¾-⅝
September	73¼-73	66	79⅜-¼

Indicative of how much the revival in wheat pit activity has meant to traders and merchants, the turnover in grain futures here last week totaled 129,838,000 bushels, practically double that of the previous week. The Board of Trade's volume had been running the smallest on record.

Rukeyser Says: Easy Money Fortunes Are Now Obsolete

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser,
International News Service Economic Commentator.

New York, May 2.—The building of new personal fortunes in the United States is lagging as business marks time in the subnormal zone. A veteran financier, in reviewing the scene, remarked that the easy money of the 1920s is a thing of the past.

However, when pressed for a forecast as to what types of individuals would accumulate new fortunes in the coming decades, this individual, who turned his own imagination and energy into a sizable estate, answered: "In the future, the big money won't be in stock trading, but will be made by individuals who save some of their income, and use their savings for outright permanent investments in common shares of exceptionally well managed companies in industries that are progressing."

As a response to confiscatory taxes on real property, owners in various parts of the country have, in recent years, been re-enacting Chief Justice Marshall's dictum that "the power to tax is the power to destroy." Unable to make a profit on certain types of real estate after paying taxes, they have been tearing down improvements. In some cities, where buildings have thus been razed, parking lots have been developed.

There is similar destruction here and there of parts of large estates. The complaint is widespread that taxing authorities, in order to get sufficient tax receipts, have allegedly been overvaluing the landed estates of the wealthy, fixing the assessed valuation far above the prices at which transfers of such holdings have been taking place. In Portland, Oreg., taxing authorities have realistically revised assessments downward even though this necessitated raising the tax rate.

Incentive Lacking

As a matter of fact, if current peak rates on incomes and on inheritances continue, it is unlikely that wealthy men will have either the desire or the means to create lavish residences on the grand scale of the predepression era.

In referring to this situation, one well informed financier said that the totalitarian powers, in ruthlessly confiscating wealth through capital levies, had at least been candid. Over here, he said, there is a tendency to camouflage the situation through nominally permitting owners to hold on to their wealth, though in view of the high taxes, they had in effect become mere custodians of property for Government.

Federal income taxes run as high as 79 per cent and numerous States also take an income tax. Accordingly, though a man in New York may nominally have an income of $5,000,000, he has only $996,000 after taxes. Moreover, at death, if his estate is subject to the maximum death duties, 70 per cent is clipped off by the Federal Government, less credits for State death duties running up to 20 per cent. Thus, only a fragment is passed on to heirs. This seems pretty much like a capital levy under a more gentle name.

Effect Is Widespread

When the income of well-to-do persons is taken in taxes, they are not the only ones affected. For such recipients of income normally act as redistributors, paying most of it out ultimately in wages for services and materials. When the funds are transferred to government, the customary economic relationships are disturbed, and not only are the funds used for different purposes but frequently they are also siphoned off to faraway places. The wealthier and more populous States have been in recent years paying into the Treasury in Federal taxes far more than is spent by the Federal Government in their own Commonwealths. Such diversions of income are accompanied by widespread unemployment in the overtaxed areas.

There is great need for dissecting the economic body and understanding the wealth and income of the people as a basis for scientific and reasonable taxation. Approaches to such studies have been made recently in Indiana and one is under way in New Hampshire. A similar audit of the economic resources of the 11 Western States is under way.

DEPENDABLE
MARRIED MAN
I want to talk to a responsible married man about the possibility of joining me in this business which is growing quite rapidly. A man with good character references who will jump into the work with both feet, as others have done in order to earn over $5,000 a year, can, with a reasonable amount of experience, expect to earn anyhow from $3,500 to $5,000 per year with Electrolux Corporation.

The knowledge and experience I have gained in the past few years in this business will be of great help to the man who fills this place. I can teach him how to be successful if he so desires and is willing to put in the same effort. The man who applies need not have selling experience and no investment of money is required. A good income opportunity is certain right from the start.

The Cornell Club of New York, long a contender in city intercollege club bridge circles, held its first annual pairs championship for club members Thursday night. Twenty-four finalists composed the twelve top-flight pairs that sat down to battle it out for the Cornell Club Trophy, a silver plaque, which was placed in competition for the first time.

Winners by a close margin were George G. Andrews and Thomas J. Roberts, New York business men, who took 64.2 per cent of the possible total match points. Runners-up were Henry Ewald, jr., Jersey City attorney, and Edward R. Gerkin, New York investment counsel, who had a final tally of 63.6 per cent of the possible total.

Walter A. Davis, card committee chairman, presented silver salvers to the winners and runers-up. The winners' names will be inscribed on the plaque.

The tournament was the first conducted in the card rooms of the new Cornell Club, on the third floor of the Hotel Barclay, Lexington avenue and Forty-eighth street, and was refereed by E. A. Mason, director of the College Clubs Bridge League.

The Cornell Club team finished second in the 1939 league play, runner-up to the Yale Club team. At a dinner which preceded play Thursday night, the E. W. Dutton Cup was presented to William Pellett, New York attorney, and Clark Wilcox, Manhattan realtor, pair champions of the league for 1939.

True to the hoodoo that follows athletic teams that accept trophies before or during later contests, the Pellett-Wilcox team fell to ninth with a total rating of 34.5 per cent, in the Cornell Club event.

A member of the cheering section who watched the hand bid, analyzes it as follows:

"West, even though holding a tremendous hand, did not force, as he held a singleton of his partner's suit. After the rebid, not desiring to play at no trump, he jumped the bid in his own suit to indicate its length and strength.

"East now began to be really interested and hoped for a slam, for with his partner's distribution and his aces the prospects were promising.

"Encouraged by his partner, West resorted to the Blackwood convention, and after locating the three aces and the king he ventured the grand slam. He reasoned that his partner should not have more than doubleton diamond on his bidding, and even if Wilcox did not hold the diamond king he still had the opportunity to break one of his partner's long suits.

Popular Gov. Blanton Winship of Puerto Rico must be glad over what Ernest Gruening, Director of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions, told Secretary Ickes the other day. Gruening related that the unsettled affairs in Europe are diverting a tremendous amount of travel toward the peaceful Caribbean. Winship has worked harder than anyone else to attract travel down that way. He was the originator of the tourist movement in Puerto Rico and talks up the island wherever he goes. The American Automobile Association says, in support of Gruening: "Advance bookings indicate that our cruise business to the West Indies will be up 60 per cent."

Dr. John A. Ryan, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, will speak before the Labor Department Local 12, United Federal Workers of America, at 8 o'clock tonight (Wednesday) at 532 Seventeenth street northwest. He will talk on "The Catholic Attitude on International Morality."

The effect of the President's reorganization plan, the bill to extend the civil service, proposed testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee on next year's Labor Department appropriation, housing and health security will be subjects of discussion.

Bob Burns Says—

Sometimes it's best to think a thing over before makin' a big decision. I know a famous movie director out here in Hollywood and he hires an assistant who can't talk without stuttering. This gives the director plenty of time to think a thing over while his assistant is saying, "Yes-y-y-y-y-y-yes."

When my Aunt Sophie took a housekeeping job in Little Rock she made a big mistake by not thingin' it over and investigatin' things first. And that's why she hadn't been on her new job more than an hour before she told the lady of the house that she wanted to quit. The rich lady said, "But how come you want to leave so soon? You just got here. What's wrong?"

And Aunt Sophie says, "I don't mind washin' your silverware, ma'am, but your forks all have four prongs instead of three—it makes the work too heavy for me!"

Her Majesty the Queen:

Queen, Never Pompous, Speaks Clearly With Spontaneous Effect

Always Displays Thorough Study Of Subject

By Lady Cynthia Asquith.

Chapter XXI

When Queen Elizabeth makes a speech, as nowadays on important occasions she quite often does, it is never (as with so many patronesses) a matter merely mumbling a few inappropriate words and then resuming her seat with flushed cheeks and eyes bent on her bouquet.

She is fortunate in being able to speak with charm, distinction and fluency. Each word, slowly spoken in her clear, rather high, silvery, and still curiously young voice, is perfectly enunciated; and, though the manner of her delivery may convey an attractive impression of spontaneity, the matter of her speeches always shows a very thorough study and understanding of her subject. She usually carries a few notes in her hand, but on some occasions she has spoken without any preparation at all. The wording of her speeches is always her own. She will never consent to deliver any supplied speech that might sound impersonal, pompous or perfunctory.

Corresponded Widely

Apart from the many public ceremonies she attended, there were always many other claims on Queen Elizabeth's time. For one thing she was determined to keep in close touch with all the friends of her girlhood, and they are very many. Her own family, all the members of which she wishes to see as often as she possibly can, is a large and unusually intimate one; and besides this her immediate and abiding success with her in-laws always made her radiant presence in constant demand at Buckingham Palace.

King George and Queen Elizabeth also did plenty of entertaining in their own house. A born hostess, the Queen greatly enjoys this role in which she is wonderfully helpful to her husband.

Queen Elizabeth is honorary colonel of the London Scottish Regiment and is here shown inspecting the troops

However lightheartedly Queen Elizabeth discharged her various duties, she was never sorry for any leisure that could be procured, and a free evening spent at home was a rare treat gratefully enjoyed, particularly as this respite gave her the coveted opportunity to attend the full rites of her children's bedtime.

Enjoyed Home Evenings

On these disengaged evenings, after a peaceful tete-a-tete dinner with her husband, she found it very pleasant and restful to be able just to sit and read, or play the piano or listen to the radio, and on these occasions King George used to be very fond of doing the Times crossword, and the Queen, though she has never begun one herself, tells me she is sometimes very good at finishing these puzzles. But since his accession to the throne King George seized the opportunity of going for a walk together, and both delight in lawn tennis whenever they can get a chance to play this game.

On wet days Queen Elizabeth sometimes found time to visit the still-room and revive her old Scotch skill in the making of scones and cakes—an excellent distraction. And there was always some piece of needlework waiting to be finished and so many books of all kinds waiting to be read—books that she longed to read. For besides trying to keep pace with the spate of contemporary literature, Queen Elizabeth loves to re-read many of her old favorites, amongst which Francis Bacon, Fielding, Jane Austen and R. L. Stevenson all take a very high place.

One of her constant regrets is that she is not able to attend more concerts. She has always had a great love for music. Chopin, Schubert, Mozart and Brahms are her favorite composers.

Liked Country Home

About seven years ago King George and Queen Elizabeth acquired a country home of their own.

At Royal Lodge, which stands in Windsor Great Park, about half a mile from the statue of George III (usually irreverently and, to Queen Victoria's great disapproval, called the Copper Horse), at the end of the Long Walk, they have been able to enjoy real privacy and an undisturbed family life. During the last years before their ascension to the throne most of their weekends have been spent in this happy retreat, and this custom has given Queen Elizabeth opportunities, not easy to find in London, fully to enjoy the company of their children.

Whenever she is staying at Royal Lodge she reads Bible stories to the little Princesses on Sunday mornings, and after tea in the winter she always plays the piano to them—all the favorite Old English and Scottish songs and Negro spirituals.

The children stand beside her piano stool and, in perfect tune, sing with her, and if music begins to pall, they turn to games. A very favorite game is one in which the mother tells a story and breaks it off every now and then, and whenever she stops the children have to go on with the story.

Or she reads aloud. When I asked her what kind of books she chose, she said: "Fairy stories, 'Alice,' 'Black Beauty,' 'At the Back of the North Wind,' 'Peter Pan'—anything good we can find about horses and dogs, and gay poetry like 'Come Unto These Yellow Sands.'"

THOUSANDS TURN OUT FOR DISTRICT DAYS

The Hon. Melvin C. Hazen, Chairman of District Commission.

Commissioner Hazen Emphasizes "Public Service" as Civic Obligation of Modern Department Store

In a letter addressed to the Hecht Co., on the occasion of District Days, the Hon. Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the Board of Commissioners for the District of Columbia, said: "Your forthcoming celebration of District Days impresses me as a splendid contribution to the consumers of Washington, on the part of one of our great retail institutions.

"The people of Washington, I am sure, are deeply conscious of the fact that large commercial organizations such as yours play an important part in our community life, and are vital to the growth and development of our city.

"I congratulate the management and workers of the Hecht Co. upon setting aside these two days—and the opportunity thus afforded to reassert your splendid principles of public service to the people of the District."

(Signed) Melvin C. Hazen

"WHITE" FASHIONS FOR SUMMER PROMINENT IN DISTRICT DAY STYLES

The continuing importance of "White" as fashion's most dominant style note, is readily evident in The Hecht Co.'s fashion showings for District Days. In spite of a growing trend toward the pastel shades in outdoor fashions and accessories, "White" still continues as the prime favorite.

"White" fashions for summer are vividly displayed throughout the store—in all apparel divisions—for men and women, as well as children—and alert summer shoppers have already shown a live interest in the new season's creations. It was pointed out that District Days, scheduled just at the beginning of the summer season, provide an unusual opportunity for Washingtonians to anticipate their requirements, and, at the same time, pocket a neat saving.

Annual Hecht Co. Selling Event Reaches Its Climax Today

HOUSEWIVES THRILLED OVER BIG SAVINGS ON HOME NEEDS FOR DISTRICT DAYS

Annual Savings Event Welcomed by Thousands of Women

Washington housewives, ever alert to shopping opportunities, are busy laying in their season's supply of houseware staples during the Hecht Co.'s District Day celebration—in order to take advantage of the special prices that are offered during this two day annual event .

Scores of items have been provided in vast quantity at specially reduced prices throughout the home-ware and furniture floors of the Hecht Co.—and these items have met with special favor on the part of Washington home-makers.

Today is the final selling period for District Days—and the public has been advised that all merchandise will be back to regular prices following District Days. Thus the public will have another full shopping day to replenish empty shelves with sheets, pillow cases, linens and other homeware needs, at the special prices in force during District Days.

ENTIRE HECHT CO. AIR CONDITIONED

Hecht Co. Executives throw the switch that puts into operation the store's complete new air-conditioning equipment.

A complete air-conditioning installation, that covers every selling floor of the store, has recently been put into operation by The Hecht Co., and summer shoppers will henceforth shop in air-conditioned comfort, from the basement to the top floor.

Engineers and workmen have put the finishing touches on the giant installation just prior to District Days, and set up the complicated mechanism of the panel board, which controls not only the temperature and humidity but also the volume of air as well.

Special installation of a device known as "Radi-ion" has been included in the equipment, whereby an electrostatic discharge destroys all odor, and purifies the air as it filters through the mammoth pipelines of the building, providing healthful as well as comfortable temperature for the store's patrons.

FAIR WEATHER PREDICTED FOR FINAL DISTRICT DAY

Today's weather is expected to be pleasant . . . with the skies fair, and the sun out in all its Spring glory. The favorable weather will attract even more thousands downtown for the final District Day...many families finding the combination of excellent weather and values too great to resist.

Thousands Will Share in Values on Wednesday—Second Day of Great Store-Wide Celebration...

Washington turned its eyes today to the corner of F Street and Seventh N.W. and made plans to celebrate the final day of the city's great annual retail selling event at The Hecht Co. The celebration, known as District Days, brings countless thousands of shoppers from all parts of the Washington area, eager to share in the vast assortments of new seasonable merchandise, at prices that represent unusual and substantial savings.

The celebration began yesterday, with hundreds upon hundreds of homefolks and visitors thronging the lobbies of the Hecht Co. long before the opening of the store. As the day progressed, additional thousands poured through the doors of Washington's great department store, and it was believed that all attendance records for this great yearly event had been topped.

Reserve stocks of specially priced merchandise, set aside for the second day of the event, will make their appearances on counters and cases throughout the store today—so that the throngs of shoppers who will attend the second and final day of the celebration are assured of selections and assortments just as complete as those who attended opening day.

Not in years has any retail selling event attracted more widespread public response than District Days this year at The Hecht Co. Store officials stated that they had endeavored to reach every available home in Washington with a copy of the store's 16-page District Day bulletin listing all of the specially priced merchandise—and that they had reserved thousands of extra copies at the store for those who failed to receive one at home. They will be available at a special booth on the main floor of The Hecht Co. today.

Meanwhile, all indications pointed to a record-breaking attendance at today's final shopping day. Arrangements have been completed to augment the regular force of attendants at The Hecht Co.'s own Parking Building, located just at the rear of the store, to speedily care for the multitude of cars that will be driven to the downtown district by Washington shoppers who will participate in the final day's offerings for District Days.

District Days Bring Season's Greatest Values and Savings

The Greatest Opportunity of the Spring Summer Season for Washington Families to Supply Their Wants and Needs at Substantial Savings During District Days

District Days, the great annual two-day selling event now in progress at The Hecht Co., was inaugurated by The Hecht Co. store many years ago to fill a definite need in lives of Washington home-makers, whereby thousands of dollars worth of desirable, needed merchandise is offered to the public at savings that are impossible under ordinary circumstances.

Housefurnishings and homewares, as well as Fashion merchandise for men, women and children, are provided in tremendous assortments, and especially priced, during the period of the event. Consequently, countless thousands of Washingtonians have learned to look upon District Days as a solution to their problems of supplying their needs for the entire season.

Every effort is made on the part of the store officials to provide those items, in all types of merchandise, for which the public has shown preference, and to make available these goods at prices far below regular. No department of the store has been overlooked. From the basement to the top floor, every buyer and Merchandise Manager has scoured the markets to provide the merchandise most in demand, and in sufficient quantity to care for the needs and wants of the store's customers. Store policy demands that these goods be priced substantially below the regular selling prices, and this ruling is accepted by the public as assurance of greater-than-ordinary value in all District Day merchandise.

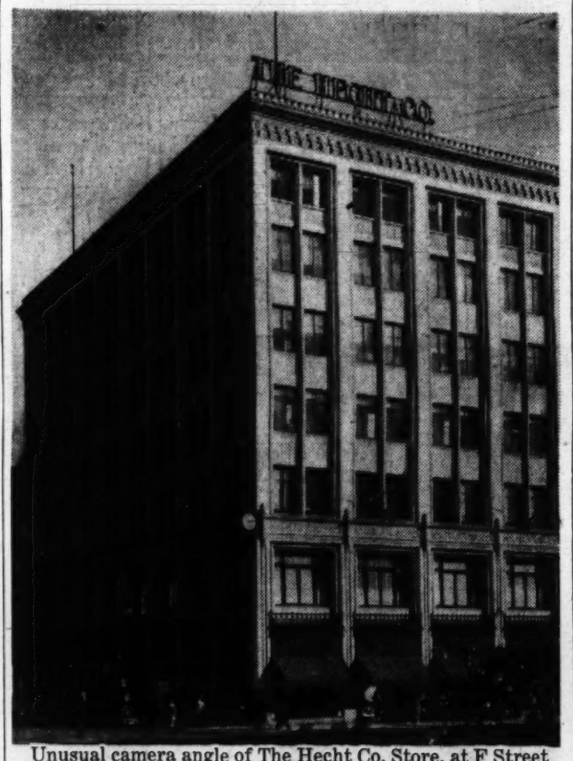

CALIFORNIA MARKETS SEND "SUNSHINE" FASHIONS FOR DISTRICT-DAY SPECIALS

The growing importance of Sportswear fashions, for every member of the family, has focussed the attention of style authorities on sunny California — where new trends in styling and design have taken the sportswear spotlight.

Consequently, in the planning of District Days the Hecht Co. made preparations long in advance to include these stirring new fashions in their merchandise offerings.

The growing trend toward color is definitely evidenced in these sparkling fashions, for children as well as men and women. New uses of sheer fabrics, new lines of design, and the generous use of colorful trimmings are noteworthy points in the California style picture.

Veteran Hecht Company Employees Join in Great District Days Celebration

Store's Roster Shows Hundreds of Workers With Five to Twenty-Five Years Service

The celebration of District Days at The Hecht Co. revives interesting memories in the minds of veteran workers, who have been with the store since its early years, according to C. L. Marlow, superintendent of The Hecht Co., and oldest employe in point of service with thirty-eight years of uninterrupted service to his credit.

MR. C. L. MARLOW

Members of the Hecht Co.'s Twenty Year Club, as well as the Ten Year Club, numbering many hundreds, are looked upon as mere youngsters by the more seasoned veterans, Mr. Marlow said. He recalled many earlier celebrations of District Days, and pointed out that the great majority of the store's workers have seen at least five of these annual events—and that almost the entire personnel of the store had witnessed at least two or three.

Celebration of the event, Mr. Marlow said, is eagerly awaited each year by The Hecht Co.'s employes, as an opportunity to renew contacts with old customers, whose friendships with employes date back many years.

NEW LIGHTING SHOWS FASHIONS IN TRUE COLORINGS

A new development in store fashion-presentation has been evolved by the Hecht Company, in its "New" Fashion Shop on the third floor—thru the installation of the new "fluorescent" lighting equipment, in connection with the display of its new fashions.

The entire section has been redecorated and rebuilt, and special lighting fixtures installed over all wall-cases and special floor-displays. This new development in store illumination is both attractive and efficient—in that it shows the true shadings and tones of the new, colorful fashions, as they would appear in actual daylight. The new "Daylight" fashion section has been the scene of great activity on District Days, since it houses the entire Sportswear Shop, as well as lower priced Dresses, Coats and Negligees—and special value offerings have been prepared in every department for the event. The public has evidenced great interest in this new installation, and the advantages of selecting colorful merchandise with the aid of true-tone illumination.
